He said Fish and Game officers were battling winter-like conditions, with winds up to 60 mph and below freezing temperatures. He said he expected the bodies to be brought out of the mountains by late Wednesday afternoon.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (OCT. 3) UPI - The United States wants a report on the investigation and prosecution of 73 crimes - most of them killings - against Americans in the Philippines since 1987, the state news agency said Wednesday.

Also, police were investigating the explosion of homemade bombs at a university and in front of the Philippine consulate in Manila.

The official Philippine News Agency said the 73 cases included the slayings of Army Col. James Rowe and 11 other Americans, most of them blamed on communist guerrillas.

Rowe, a heavily decorated Vietnam War veteran and former prisoner of war, was killed April 21, 1989, in suburban Quezon City.

The New Peoples Army, the 19,000-strong armed wing of the outlawed Communist Party of the Philippines, claimed responsibility for his slaying, accusing him of ''direct involvement'' in the campaign against the 21-year-old insurgency.

Manglapus said 34 other Americans, among them retired military personnel, businessmen and tourists, have been killed in the country since 1987, the news agency said.

At least 27 other Americans were victims of various forms of assault, including Marilyn ONeil, a cousin of former U.S. House speaker Thomas ONeil. She was shot and critically wounded in an ambush June 9, 1988, near the southern city of Zamboanga.

Another victim mentioned was Ralph Moore, composer and lead singer of a campaign song for President Corazon Aquino. He was shot Jan. 16, 1987, while jogging near his home in suburban Mandaluyong but escaped unhurt because he was wearing a bulletproof vest, the report said.

The State Department inquiry was sent to Foreign Secretary Raul Manglapus, who referred it to Justice Secretary Franklin Drilon. Manglapus asked Drilon to report on each of the cases, the news agency said.

Tiny homemade bombs exploded Wednesday at a university and a waiting shed in front of the Philippine consular office in Manila, injuring three women, police said.

Police they believed the blasts were unrelated to the several dozen bombings in the past two months in the capital blamed on rebel soldiers.

The first explosion was reported at the University of Santo Tomas. The blast was caused by a tiny time bomb placed underneath a desk and slightly injured a woman teacher. A student was held for questioning.

A Molotov cocktail was thrown at a waiting shed at a bus stop in front of the Philippine consular office, wounding two women, police said.

The military also said troops Tuesday raided a house used by rebel soldiers in Cabiao, in Nueva Ecija province, 60 miles north of Manila.

No one was found in the house but troops seized two pistols and several boxes of machine-gun ammunition, the military said.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - President Bush, deciding to stay in Washington to lobby for the controversial budget package, has canceled plans to campaign for Republican candidates in New England Thursday and Friday, a White House spokesman announced Wednesday.

The president had planned to fly to Kennebunkport, Maine, Thursday morning, using his vacation home as a base to campaign in Boston, Waterbury, Conn., Stamford, Conn., Burlington, Vt., and Manchester, N.H.

Bush had scheduled to make the side trips to nearby points during his Columbus Day long weekend sojourn at his seaside estate in Maine, returning to Washington on Monday.

But press secretary Marlin Fitzwter said that Bush ''wants to be here to lobby'' because of the upcoming vote on the budget package.

The New England stops will be rescheduled, Fitzwater said.

He told reporters that the president might decide to remain in the Washington area for the remainder of the week, perhaps spending the weekend at Camp David instead of traveling to Maine.

The president told a news conference with regional editors that he planned to continue his busy political schedule during the month of October in support of GOP candidates.

Some of the Republican candidates who are up for re-election are opposed to the deficit package that they believe is a political time bomb. Rep. Lynn Martin, R-Ill., who is seeking to unseat Sen. Paul Simon, D-ill., is not endorsing the agreement.

Bush said Wednesday that Democrats and Republicans can ''blame me'' if they need a political target, but he is sticking to his determination to sell the deficit accord as the ''last best hope'' to keep the country from sinking into an economic disaster.

BUFFALO, NY (OCT. 3) UPI - More than 12 years after it became a national environmental disaster, the legal battle surrounding chemical dumping at Love Canal will finally reach the courts later this month.

U.S. District Judge John Curtin ruled Tuesday that the trial will start on Oct. 24, and that lawyers for New York State will get to seek $250 million in punitive damages from Occidental Chemical Corp. for chemical dumping at the infamous Niagara Falls, N.Y. dump.

Curtin issued his ruling after attorneys for Occidental tried to convince the judge that the Dallas company had already been punished enough for Love Canal.

Curtin's ruling means that the state attorney general's office will be able to seek a financial award to punish Occidental, in addition to reimbursement for cleanup costs at Love Canal. No decision on the amount of damage to be paid by the chemical firm - or any other party found responsible - will be made until after the trial.

John Stuart, public affairs spokesman for Occidental, noted that Curtin did not decide the state is entitled to punitive damages, only that the state may present its proof at trial.

''The company disagrees with Curtin's legal analysis,'' he said. ''Further, the company is confident that after all proofs are submitted to the court, the court will find that the company engaged in no conduct that would warrant a punitive damages award.''

State Attorney General Robert Abrams said the decision was of ''critical importance, not only to the state in its lawsuit against Occidental, but to environmental enforcement officers throughout the country.''

The state and federal governments declared a state of emergency at Love Canal in August 1978, leading to the immediate, permanent relocation of 237 families living along the canal itself and the eventual evacuation of 1,000 families from the surrounding area over a three-year period.

Occidental in 1968 acquired what was then known as Hooker Chemical Co., which had dumped tons of toxins, including the potent carcinogen dioxin, into Love Canal in the 1940s and 1950s.

Later, the Canal was sealed with a clay cap and homes and a school were built on top of it after Hooker sold the property for $1 to the Niagara Falls School Board.

Chemicals began oozing from the ground and, coupled with high incidences of birth defects and cancer, led the EPA to order the evacuations.

Occidental, which claims it should not be held liable for the problems at Love Canal because Hooker had warned the school board about the chemicals dumped there, has filed its own lawsuits in the case against the state and federal governments, the city of Niagara Falls and the school board.

Occidental is a subsidiary of Los Angeles-based Occidental Petroleum Corp.

STRASBOURG, FRANCE (OCT. 3) UPI - The Iraqi invasion of Kuwait was an ''earth tremor'' on the world economy and its consequences are yet to be determined, the head of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development said Wednesday.

Secretary General Jean-Claude Paye told the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe that while the world has enough oil, the shock of losing 4 million to 5 million barrels a day because of the U.N.-imposed embargo on Iraqi and Kuwaiti oil triggered negative psychological effects that could lead to real poverty.

''In short, the fear of scarcity breeds scarcity,'' he said.

Paye said industrialized countries are better able to deal with the situation than they were during the two previous oil shocks, but it would be a mistake to ease monetary and fiscal policies to maintain current economic levels.

''The fact that the present rise is not caused by a genuine shortage makes it all the more unjustified to allow an upward spiral of prices and wages,'' he said.

Paye urged OECD members to re-emphasize alternative energy policies, allow the oil price increases to be passed onto the public, maintain firm monetary and fiscal policies and protect investment capacity as much as possible.

''Iraq's aggression against Kuwait is like an earth tremor, the intensity and consequences of which cannot yet be assessed in either the political or economic sphere,'' he said.

The Paris-based OECD, a think tank for the world's 24 richest countries, monitors the world economy and frequently recommends steps for its members to take to insure growth and control inflation.

After his speech, Paye said that based on a $25 a barrel oil price, the growth of OECD economies would drop by one-half a percentage point while inflation would rise a full percentage point.

Paye said the OECD predicted in June that economic growth in the industrialized countries in the next 18 months would stabilize at about 3 percent a year, with inflation at 4.5 percent.

''In a word, while the summer began on an optimistic note, the mood in autumn is one of uncertainty,'' he said. ''And the spectre of war, which we thought had been laid to rest under the ruins of the Berlin Wall, has reappeared on the shores of the (Persian) Gulf.''

Paye warned that the gulf crisis should not divert attention from the urgent need of helping East European countries develop market economies.

''Time is pressing,'' he said. ''The gulf crisis is making Eastern Europe's transition still more difficult. Living standards have dropped appreciably, unemployment is rising. If the hope of imminent improvement fades, social and political convulsions from which no one would gain are liable to occur.''

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - Factory orders advanced 1.8 percent in August to $244.6 billion on an increase in petroleum refining costs in the aftermath of Iraq's invasion of Kuwaiti oilfields, the Commerce Department said Wednesday.

Excluding petroleum, factory orders were up 0.6 percent in August.

There were also increases - although not as sizeable - in orders for military hardware, from ships and tanks to aircraft and missiles, according to the data compiled by the department's Census Bureau.

Not counting defense items, total orders advanced 1.4 percent. Excluding transportation equipment, orders increased 1.8 percent.

Private analysts, concerned about the latest Middle East crisis, had predicted a decline in August factory orders following a revised 1.5 percent gain in July and a 1.9 percent drop in June.

''It certainly was stronger than expected,'' said Jean Sundrla, an economist at the private forecasting firm Evans Economics in Washington. ''We're just kind of plodding along here.''

She doubted, however, that the factory data would encourage the inflation- and war-wary Federal Reserve Board to do little more than take action to ease interest rates slightly.

''The saying around here is 'They're caught between Iraq and a hard place,''' Sundrla said.

A more pessimistic Lynn Reaser, an economist at First Interstate Bancorp in Los Angeles, cautioned, ''The headline paints an encouraging picture, but the increase seems to point to special factors'' - oil and defense.

Reaser also pointed to ''discouraging'' orders for clothes and household goods signs that consumers are holding back on spending.

''The bottom line is the report is somewhat misleading,'' Reaser said. ''Most of the factors point to considerbale softness in the economy.''

Factory orders for durable goods - costly products made to last three or more years - dipped 0.9 percent during the month, but August orders for non-durable goods climbed 4.4 percent.

''Most of the (total) increase is attributed to the petroleum refining industry, which had substantial price increases during the month,'' the Commerce Department report said. ''Shipments were similarly influenced by the petroleum refining industry.''

Total shipments of manufactured goods increased 3.4 percent to $245.9 percent. Unfilled orders, which are not affected by the oil industry, declined 0.2 percent to $518.7 billion.

Inventories, meanwhile, inched up 0.2 percent to $373.9 billion, while the inventory-to-shipments ratio, which tracks product delivery time, dropped to 1.52 percent in August from 1.57 in July.

Excluding petroleum, inventories were unchanged for the month.

Sundrla said she was encouraged that inventories ''remain well under control'' because a buildup of inventories means factory output is out of step with consumer demand - a classic sign of impending recession.

In July, total factory shipments slipped 0.7 percent, unfilled orders edged up 0.5 percent and manufacturers' inventories increased 0.7 percent.

The government data were adjusted for seasonal factors.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - A major overhaul of U.S. immigration rules to help unite families, allow more skilled workers in, and increase the number of European immigrants won House approval Wednesday on a 231-192 vote.

The bill would increase immigration from the current limit of 540,000 a year to roughly 800,000. A similar Senate bill, which is favored by the administration, would raise the limit to just 630,000 immigrants.

House and Senate negotiators will try to work out a compromise version in the short time remaining before Congress adjourns for the year.

In 1986 Congress granted amnesty to almost 1.7 million illegal immigrants, but the basic immigration law has has not been reformed since 1965. ''A great deal has changed in the last 25 years,'' said Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee. ''We need to take a fresh look.''

Brooks said the bill seeks to ''place greater emphasis on employment- based immigration. It will increaes the number of highly skilled or otherwise needed foreign-born workers.''

U.S. companies seeking to hire skilled foreign workers currently must wait up to three years to secure visas. The bill would expedite the process and raise the number of employer-sponsored immigrants from the current level of around 30,000 to 65,000 each year.

In order to secure visas, companies would have to file statements with the Labor Department declaring they could not fill the positions with U.S. workers.

The bill would help reunite families by increasing to 115,000 a year the number of spouses and minor children of permanent residents who can enter the country, plus 35,000 adult unmarried children.

It is expected that about 100,000 of the first year's visas allowed under the bill will go to applicants from the three highest demand countries - Mexico, the Philippines, and the Dominican Republic.

Current law sets no limit on the immigration of relatives of U.S. citizens and that would remain unchanged under the bill.

The change in favor of skilled immigrants is expected to ''correct inequities against would-be immigrants of certain countries,'' particularly Europeans, Brooks said.

The 1965 changes stressed family reunification over immigrants with needed skills, but critics say that worked against Europeans. In 1965, more than one-third of those admitted were from Europe and only 7 percent were from Asia. Currently, about 85 percent of all immigration comes from Latin America and Asia.

Rep. Hamilton Fish, R-N.Y., ranking GOP member of the Judiciary Committee, said the bill would ''right some of the wrongs caused by past and current immigration laws.''

''It creates opportunities to immigrate to natives of countries who are virtually shut out of the immigration system. ... (It) will allow the Irish, Africans, Eastern Europeans, Tibetans, Western Europeans and others to find their way back into the immigration flow that they had been excluded from for 25 years or more,'' Fish said.

CINCINNATI (OCT. 3) UPI - A newspaper art critic, testifying Wednesday in the obscenity case against an art gallery for showing controversial Robert Mapplethorpe photographs, said he could make no judgment on whether the pictures are offensive.

Owen Findsen, a 25-year veteran of The Cincinnati Enquirer, cited a recent conversation he had with a woman gardener in explaining why he couldn't tell people what to think.

The woman, Findsen said, told him she was offended by Mapplethorpe photographs of flowers on display at the Cincinnati Center for Contemporary Arts, but did not find the pictures showing homosexual pictures offensive.

''I just can't tell people what to think,'' Findsen told the Hamilton County Municipal Court jury.

The art gallery and its director, Dennis Barrie, are facing charges of pandering obscenity and using a minor in nudity-oriented material.

It is the first time an art gallery has faced obscenity charges. At issue are seven of 175 photographs displayed last spring in the exhibit ''Robert Mapplethorpe: The Perfect Moment.''

Five of the photographs depict sadomasochistic homosexual acts and the other two show children with their genitals exposed.

Findsen, a defense witness, said outside the courtroom that he initially refused to testify but was subpoenaed.

Findsen testified his job as an art critic requires him to bridge the gap between people who know a lot about art and people who know little about art.

Stuart Schloss, a member of the board of director of the Center for Contempoary Arts, testified the museum received some complaints before the exhibit opened because the photographs in question were being separated by the others.

He said after the exhibit closed, there were some complaints by people under 18 who were not allowed to see the photographs in question.

Some 8,100 people saw the exhibit, Schloss testified.

On Tuesday police issued 35 disorderly conduct warrants against demonstrators who simulated sex acts and blocked traffic outside the courthouse last week.

Carol Lippmann of Act-Up Cincinnati, the gay-rights group that organized the demonstration, said there would be a repeat performance this week.

''They're just trying to use scare tactics to prevent us from holding other demonstrations,'' Lippmann said.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - A congressional effort to stop some farmers from walking away with huge government payments may backfire and cost the government more, not less, an administration analysis said Wednesday.

Enforcement of the payment limits has been a sore point for years. Critics say some producers subdivide their operations in order to evade the rules.

At present, a farmer can get $50,000 in crop subsidy payments and a total of $250,000 from all forms of farm program payments. The limit effectively is doubled, however, because farmers are allowed to receive indirect payments from two other business entities.

In an analysis circulated on Capitol Hill in recent days, the Agriculture Department, which unsuccessfully backed a rival reform plan, criticized language approved by the House to curb the payments. A copy of the analysis was obtained by United Press International.

Representatives voted Aug. 1 to reduce the payment limit for farmers to $200,000 in direct payments and to allow a total of $100,000 from payments, such as marketing loans, outside of crop supports. Final congressional action on the plan is awaiting completion of a House- Senate compromise.

The department favored a plan by Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., to require payments to be attributed to individuals, rather than farming operations, and to put a $50,000 limit on each type of payment.

Although the department estimates a $5 million savings over five years due to the lower payment limit approved by the House, its analysis complained about changes in the definition of who is eligible for payments. This year's bumper crops could bring lower market prices and induce operators to wiggle around the limits, it said.

''It is now thought likely that incentives for the creation of new payment entitities under the revised 'person' rule could result in increases in outlays of several million dollars, rather than savings,'' Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter said in a cover letter.

The letter suggested the final version of the new farm policy law should retain the $200,000 limit endorsed by the House but change the definition of who or what business entity is a ''person'' that can collect payments.

The department said the House language would allow each stockholder in a corporation, partnership or estate to receive up to $200,000 in payments.

Rep. Jerry Huckaby, D-La., sponsor of the language under attack, said the administration criticism was unfair. A House Agriculture Committee staff worker said the language in Huckaby's amendment had been lifted from Conte's plan, which presumably had been screened by the administration.

In comments published by Congressional Quarterly, Huckaby said the provision would be tightened by House and Senate negotiators.

The department also objected to a provision in the Huckaby amendment to bar trusts from receiving farm program payments.

Studies have shown large farms get the biggest share of program payments, a reflection of their dominance in agricultural production. An analysis of payments in 1987 showed cotton farms received an average of $29,380 and cash grain farms $16,986, while the average was $13,800. One-third of U.S. farms receive payments.

JERUSALEM (OCT. 3) UPI - Israeli officials cautiously welcomed the re-unification of Germany Wednesday, expressing hope it would work diligently against anti-Semitism and remember its moral obligation to the Jewish people.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir told Helmut Richter, the German Embassy's charge d'affaires in Israel, the day was of major significance for the Germany people but for Israel ''this is naturally a day of reflection.''

''While we do not interfere in the drawing of borders elsewhere, we have to remember the unprecedented tragedy inflicted by Nazi Germany on our people, maiming it for generations,'' Shamir told Richter, according to a statement released by the prime minister's office.

Foreign Minister David Levy said German unification has to be met not only with congratulations, but with ''the hope that the Germany of tomorrow will be a Germany that will pass the test first of all of the Jewish people.''

''(I hope it will be a Germany) that will take a stand against anti- Semitism, a Germany that remembers always, and in the next generation and the generations to follow, her obligations and her moral and national obligation for what she has done to the Jewish people.''

An estimated 6 million Jews were killed by the Nazis during the Holocaust along with hundreds of thousands of other people, including political opponents and Gypsies.

Israeli officials have said they were disappointed the unification treaty and other unification accords had not emphasized more the Holocaust in Germany history. Parliament Speaker Dov Shilansky, a Holocaust survivor, termed the unification of Germany as a day of mourning.

''I am afraid that a united Germany, since anti-Semitic and Nazi groups are on the rise, can in the future can turn again to an expansionist policy and narrow-minded nationalist direction,'' said Yitzhak Arad, chairman of Yad Vashem, the Holocaust memorial and museum in Jerusalem.

''I am not against good relations with Germany, but still as a (Holocaust) survivor, I have the feelings that I express. For me today is not a holiday, not a celebration,'' Arad said.

Germany Chancellor Helmut Kohl, in a letter to Shamir, said Germany was aware of its past and its obligation to Israel and the Jewish people.

Shamir told Richter, the German representative, Wednesday, ''It is our hope that united Germany will do its utmost, by all possible means, political, educational and legal, to make sure that what happened in the past will not recur, and that anti-Semitic and neo-Nazi phenomena will be combatted.''

''We also hope that history lessons will be reflected in the future attitude toward the Jewish people and in particular in the policy of support and assistance to the state of Israel,'' Shamir said.

In the early 1950s, West Germany acknowledged its responsiblity in the Holocaust and offered reparations to victims. Earlier this year, East Germany admitted its role in the plan to exterminate European Jews.

(OCT. 3) UPI - President Bush met with regional newspaper editors in Washington today to continue his push for support of the 500-BILLION-dollar deficit-reduction plan. Last night, in a nation-wide address, Bush warned of economic hardship if Congress fails to enact the plan. He appealed to the nation's citizens to urge their lawmakers to support the bi-partisan package. Bush said the budget deficit is- in his words- ''a cancer gnawing away at our nation's health.'' .

Federal Reserve chief Alan Greenspan supports the budget compromise. The head of the nation's central bank says failure to pass the 500- BILLION-dollar package would be- quoting now- ''a grave mistake.'' Greenspan says the plan should reduce the drain of the federal deficit on the national savings... lessen pressures on credit markets... and enhance investment and the long-run growth potential of the United States.

DUMFRIES, SCOTLAND (OCT. 3) UPI - The sister and husband of a flight attendant who was killed in the bombing of a Pan Am jetliner have dedicated their lives to discovering the truth behind the disaster.

Marina de Larracoechea and Frank Rozenkranz, who live in New York, have given up their careers to concentrate on their investigation, focusing particularly on the international security related to the terrorist attack Dec. 21, 1988.

They are attending a Scottish inquiry into the deaths of the 259 people aboard the Boeing 747 and 11 people on the ground in Lockerbie, Scotland. The two are not just spectators but are accredited as ''official representatives,'' and have taken places next to the British and American lawyers representing other victims' relatives.

De Larracoechea, a 41-year-old Spaniard, and Rozenkranz, 45 and German, are the only lay people who have been given permission to cross- examine witnesses.

They have chosen to be involved in the case because, ''We want issues raised in our own way - not the way a lawyer would deal with them,'' de Larracoechea said.

Their link to the case is Nieves Larracoechea, who was 39 when she died. She lived in Madrid, Spain and flew out of London for Pan Am. She had been a flight attendant for 17 years, circling the world in a job her sister said ''she really loved.''

The inquiry was adjourned until Thursday after a Scottish lawyer involved in the case was killed in an automobile accident.

''We believe the disaster was preventable,'' said de Larracoechea. ''There were advance warnings which were specific enough for the U.S. government to advise diplomats not to travel on the flight. Yet they were not made public. Not even the crew of the aircraft was told. We want to know why.''

She also recalled that three months before the bombing German police found a terrorist cell that had built a bomb designed to blow up an aircraft - it was nearly identical to the device that destroyed Flight 103, a Semtex bomb hidden in a radio-cassette player.

''Why was Britain with all its experience of IRA terrorism not alarmed? Why was action not taken? These are questions that have to be asked,'' de Larracoechea said.

The flight was en route from Frankfurt, Germany, to New York after stopping in London.

''My sister, 18 months my junior, was the purest, most beautiful person. She was murdered along with 269 other innocent people. They paid with their lives for errors of one administration or another,'' de Larracoechea said.

''Those responsible should be in jail. And I don't just mean the terrorists. I include the passive accomplices - the people who did not pass on the warnings.The State Department. The counter-intelligence agents. The Pan Am sales managers.''

De Larracoechea gave up her career as an interior designer to devote herself to the campaign. She is a member of the American relatives' group.

''The reality of my sister's death is very hard to live with,'' she said. ''It has been devastating. I feel I have to do what I'm now doing.''

Rozencranz, who was married to Nieves Larracoechea for 10 years, gave up his insurance broker's business and his house in Spain to dedicate himself to the case.

''I went out and bought a computer and got down to work,'' he said. ''I spend every day looking into aspects of the bombing. It is what I have to do.

''I think it is the most normal thing. I have no family and I'm prepared to commit myself to this for three or four years. It is another chapter in my life and I have to turn it into something good.''

The ''something good'' would be combatting world terrorism by finding ways making aircraft and airports safer.

''You cannot achieve this just by putting in more guards and equipment,'' he said. ''You have to visit the various countries, study the culture of the people, the political situation and many other aspects. This is what I want to get involved in - either with a consumer group, a political party or some other body.''

He has pleasant, loving memories of his wife.

''She was very much liked by all her colleagues,'' he said. ''She had close friends all over the world. She loved her job and wanted to stay on although we did not need her salary. She never thought about danger. She kept the newspaper cutting on the Tenerife air disaster - the worst ever - but never spoke about crashes.

''My memory of her keeps me going. Investigating Flight 103 is now my life.''

GUYMON, OK (OCT. 3) UPI - A judge has been lying in his grave since August but his supporters say the dead jurist is the best available choice.

Sam Fouquet of Guymon, chairman of a group called The Friends of Frank Ogden in Texas County, said Tuesday more than a dozen people are serving on an Oklahoma Panhandle committee backing Ogden's posthumous re-election to the state district judgeship.

''Investigate the two candidates and you might find in this case the dead man is a better candidate,'' Fouquet said.

Ogden, who served the four-county district since 1977, died in August after filing for re-election.

His timing was poor. He died too late to have his name removed from the Nov. 6 general election ballot.

The only candidates on the ballot are Ogden and Josh J. Evans.

It initially appeared that Ogden's death would clear the way for Evans' election, but supporters of the deceased judge are urging voters to cast their ballots for Ogden.

Fouquet said Ogden's re-election would result in a declaration of vacancy, followed by a judicial nominating committee's statewide advertisement for applicants. He said this would produce a gubernatorial appointment for a judge in the district.

(OCT. 3) UPI - Teachers at Temple University in Philadelphia voted 200-199 to accept a judge's order and end a 29-day strike in time to save the semester for students. The school's 11-hundred teachers were returning to work today while their union continued contract negotiations with the administration.

In Jackson, Mississippi, impeached federal Judge Walter Nixon Junior has been ordered back behind bars for violating conditions of his parole. A U-S Parole Commission revoked Nixon's parole and ordered him to serve four months for carrying two guns on a wild turkey hunt last April. At the time, Nixon was on parole for a 1986 conviction on two felony charges of lying to a federal grand jury. He had served almost two years in prison.

UNITED NATIONS (OCT. 3) UPI - Foreign ministers of the Arab League met Wednesday in an effort to resolve their differences caused by the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait and to endorse a U.N. agenda dealing with the Persian Gulf and Middle East issues, diplomats said.

The meeting, held at U.N. headquarters where the ministers were attending the U.N. General Assembly session, began Wednesday morning with all members of the 21-nation Arab League represented except Jordan, Iraq and Sudan.

The diplomats said the ministers held the day-long closed-door session to discuss pending resolutions in the Security Council and General Assembly regarding the Israeli-occupied territories and the situation in the Persian Gulf.

Kuwait's Foreign Minister, Sheikh Sabah Al-Ahmed, told reporters after the morning meeting that Arab League representatives will meet in Tunis, Tunisia, on Oct. 22 to set a date for a formal meeting of foreign ministers.

Al-Ahmed said the ministers agreed to discuss the Iraqi invasion in the General Assembly and that ''any peace solution should be worked out in the context of the Arab League and they rejected any individual initiatives.''

The Palestine Liberation Organization's permanent U.N. observer, Zehdi Labib Terzi, told reporters that PLO foreign minister Farouk Khadoumi attended the meeting to present the case for an urgent meeting of the Security Council on Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Ministers at the meeting included Saudi Arabia's Saud Al-Faisal, Syria's Farouk Al-Shara, Egypt's Deputy Foreign Minister Boutros Ghali and Lebanon's Prime Minister Selim El-Hoss.

The diplomats said the meeting was also to try to unify Arab states within the United Nations. At the Sept. 17 Cairo meeting, only 12 of the 21 members showed up to agree to shift the league's headquarters from Tunis to Cairo.

The Arab League split on the U.S. troop deployment in Saudi Arabia although the majority condemned the invasion of Kuwait.

Egypt led a group of at least seven Arab states that supported the U.S.-led multinational force in the gulf, including Morocco, Syria, Saudi Arabia and Oman, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates. Those opposed included Sudan, Algeria, Yemen, Tunisia, Jordan and Libya.

Terzi said his organization has asked the 15-nation Security Council to pay as much attention to the situation in the West Bank and Gaza Strip as it has to the gulf crisis.

''I am more concerned about Palestinians dying every day there,'' Terzi said.

He said the Soviet Union, China, France, Britain and the non-aligned nations have accepted the request to meet. The United States has not.

El-Hoss reminded the Security Council in a speech late Tuesday before the General Assembly that resolution 425 calling for the withdrawal of Israel from Lebanon has not been implemented for 12 years.

El-Hoss said it is time for the council to apply Chapter 7 of the U.N. Charter against Israel, the same way the council did with Iraq after it refused to pull out of Kuwait. It was under Chapter 7 that the council imposed the worldwide trade and arms embargo on Iraq.

ATLANTA (OCT. 3) UPI - About 250 disabled activists trooped to the regional office of the Department of Health and Human Services to demand a phone meeting with HHS chief Louis Sullivan about government subsidized home care.

Members of American Disabled for Attendant Programs Today, getting around town with crutches and wheelchairs, have been in Atlanta since Monday to call attention to their fight for federal funding of services allowing them to remain at home instead of being institutionalized.

Specifically, the group, ADAPT, wants Sullivan to redirect 25 percent of Medicaid's $17.5 billion nursing home budget to provide home care for the disabled.

As the group assembled at Richard B. Russell Federal Building, which houses the regional HHS office, one of its leaders, got through to the health secretary by telephoning the National Public Radio studios in Washington during a call-in program.

ADAPT organizer Bob Kafka pressed Sullivan on the nationally broadcast health program to comply with the group's wishes in a 3-minute heated exchange during which Sullivan twice had to ask Kafka not to interrupt.

''The country is crying out for community-based attendant services, and we're here in Atlanta protesting for four days because our country has put disabled people in institutions almost like prisons,'' Kafka said.

''I would like to ask Dr. Sullivan if he would commit to personally shifting 5 billion dollars of Medicaid money from nursing homes to community-based attendant services.''

Sullivan replied that Medicaid money is distributed to individual states that have the power to use the funds for programs as they see fit.

''Your efforts should be directed to various states,'' Sullivan said. ''We certainly do want to do everything to provide better services for our disabled citizens. You really do need to focus on the state agencies.''

About 60 members of the group spent the first day of their campaign occupying the office of the president of Morehouse College, where Sullivan formerly served as medical school president.

Organizers hoped Morehouse officials would use their influence to arrange a meeting with Sullivan. The group left the office of President Leroy Keith following a nearly 24-hour standoff with school officials after being told by federal authorities that Sullivan was out of the country.

The demonstrators decided to target the regional Health and Human Services offices when they learned that Sullivan was not overseas and in Washington after reportedly being told by his office that he was out of the country, a spokesman for the group said.

Sullivan's media office in Washington referred inquiries about the activities of the disabled group to the department's Atlanta offices, where a spokesman denied knowledge of the group being told Sullivan was out of town.

''We don't know where they got the information he was out of the country. We are not sure where he was. We don't keep up with his whereabouts,'' said the spokesman, Coy Short.

Short, however, said the regional offices were designated to handle the group's requests, and set up a meeting on Tuesday with the group's leaders, who never showed.

''We offered to meet with them to accept their proposals,'' Short said. ''We set up a time on Tuesday but they didn't call.''

The protesters Tuesday moved their demonstrations from Morehouse College to the offices of the Georgia Health Care Association to request backing from the organization that lobbies for nursing home interests.

About 200 handicapped activists blocked building entrances at the DeKalb County location and demanded a meeting with the association's executive director.

They left the site after administrators agreed to send a list of their demands to the headquarters of American Health Care Association in Washington D.C.

ADAPT, which formerly stood for American Disabled for Acceptable Public Transportation, occupied the Richard B. Russell building in 1989, forcing the Urban Mass Transit Administration to promise to push Congress for laws that would give the disabled better access to public transportation.

Demonstrators also chained themselves to Greyhound buses.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - Facing twin crises that will test and define his presidency, George Bush shrugged off the political pressures Wednesday of the threat of war in the Persian Gulf and a deficit-induced economic recession.

''Look, nobody said it would be easy,'' Bush said at a news conference. Asked whether his presidency is ''on the line,'' he noted that ''every once in a while the going gets a little tough,'' but, ''I don't feel embattled at all.''

Fielding questions from reporters for out-of-town news organizations, Bush spoke with gratitude of the broad support for his policy in the gulf and with passion of the need for a $500 billion deficit-reduction plan before Congress.

His comments also revealed a certain ''I told you so'' attitude toward critics and skeptics who have questioned the decisions left in the wake of his passage from honeymoon to hot seat in the 20 months he has been in office.

''I try not to sound egotistical, but we've been right on German unification '' he said as Germans rejoiced in the end of their postwar division. ''And yet I remember many people saying, 'It's impossible, the Soviets aren't going to permit a unified Germany to be in NATO, it isn't going to happen, you can't have a unified Germany before you have two peace treaties with Poland.''

In fact, Bush did not respond with emotional fervor last year at the early events that in a matter of weeks snowballed into the unification juggernaut. On Wednesday, however, the re-emergence of a single, strong Germany was trumpeted as a dramatic vindication of his repeated talk over the last year of a ''Europe whole and free.''

For a politician previously accused of lacking vision, it smacked of special significance. But Bush, riding high in the polls, denied thinking in political terms, saying, ''The American people are entitled to something a little bit more broader-gauge than that.''

''I guess it's about as complicated a period as we've had since I've been president,'' he said, ''but I'm not looking at it in terms of re- election.''

Bush winced at a comparison to Jimmy Carter, who was voted out of office after being dogged by energy and hostage crises of his own, and indicated he would not allow his current problems to exact a heavy toll, at least for now.

''We've got two big things coming together now,'' he said. ''One is the deficit and one is this crisis halfway around the world. But I'm telling you honestly I don't look at it in terms of whether it's good for a Bush presidency or popular politically.''

In the confrontation with Iraq, Bush at times has exercised decisiveness with aplomb. Clearly more comfortable with foreign policy than domestic affairs, he has seemed invigorated by the challenge, as evidenced by the scores of telephone calls and meetings he has held with U.S. friends and allies since the onset of the crisis two months ago.

Bush has been less aggressive in the budget debacle. Though he has spoken frequently in recent days of the need for assertive leadership, whatever the political costs, it was not until early summer that Bush and Congress began negotiating a fiscal fix to the deficit mess, their effort prolonged by stubborness on both sides, seen perhaps most vividly in Bush's down-to-the-wire cling to his call for a lower tax on capital gains.

Bush is counting on military intimidation and economic deprivation to force a retreat by Saddam Hussein and congressional approval of an unpopular budget compromise to reassure the financial markets and restore confidence in the economy.

Both are gambles that will determine the difference between war and peace, recession and prosperity. Try as he may to brush them aside as simply ''difficult times'' intrinsic to a tough job, Bush will not be able to ignore the political consequences of success or failure.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (OCT. 3) UPI - NATO held a special meeting Wednesday to mark German unification, a time of ''undiminished rejoicing,'' and thanked the Soviets for agreeing to a united Germany's membership in the alliance.

''Today we put nearly half a century of confrontation and frustration behind us,'' NATO Secretary General Manfred Woerner told the 16 Western alliance ambassadors in a 30-minute session.

''This is a day of undiminished rejoicing, not only for the Germans but for the whole of our alliance,'' he said. ''We gratefully acknowledge the contribution and consent of the Soviet leadership and people.''

At a landmark July meeting in the Caucasus mountains, Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev agreed to a united Germany's NATO membership. West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl in turn pledged to limit a united Germany's armed forces to 370,000 men.

The German ambassador to NATO, Hans von Ploetz, quoted from the late West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's first speech at NATO in 1955 that said his country was ''determined to strive, together with the other member states, for peace and freedom.''

There is no ''nationalistic frenzy'' in a united Germany, said Von Ploetz, but rather the German people accept ''our natural and legitimate unity in great sobriety and without any overweening emotions.''

The dean of NATO ambassadors, Italy's F. Paolo Fulci, said he was certain the united Germany ''will remain firmly anchored to our common Atlantic and European values and institutions.''

Woerner said the July summit of NATO leaders in London ''extended the hand of friendship to the Soviet Union'' and other countries of Eastern Europe that ''contributed decisively to the final lifting of Soviet objections to the full NATO membership of a united Germany.''

''The unification of Germany in conditions of peace, freedom and prosperity is a vindication of our perseverance and also of our values, which have proved infinitely more powerful than military force, ideology and repression,'' he said.

Woerner, a former West German defense minister, read his speech in English and French but ended with a personal wish of ''good luck'' to the German people in his native language.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - In an era when a multimillion-dollar jackpot can be claimed at the end of a lawsuit, the Supreme Court was asked Wednesday to set limits on the amount of punitive damages that a jury can award.

At issue is whether such awards, which have become commonplace since the 1970s violate the clause of the Constitution that promises all people - including those who get sued - due process.

In many states, juries have nearly total discretion to assess punitive damage awards, meant to deter and punish wrongdoers above and beyond the actual damages involved in the case. Opponents contend an expressed limit on what a jury can award should be established.

But others claim the threat of an extremely large punitive damage settlement serves to police corporations and dissuade them from engaging in practices that could endanger consumers.

The court heard arguments in a case involving a 1981 insurance fraud scheme in Roosevelt City, Ala.

City employees bought life and health insurance in group policies from Lemmie Ruffin, an employee of Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Pacific Mutual did not issue group health policies for cities, so Ruffin secured health insurance through another company, Union Fidelity. But health insurance deductions from Roosevelt City employees' paychecks never went to the insurance company - Ruffin pocketed the money.

Coverage for the city was canceled and when worker Cleopatra Haslip was hospitalized for kidney treatment, she learned she had no health insurance. Stuck with bills of more than $3,800, more than half her annual take home pay, she was sued and became the target of collection agencies.

Haslip and other city employees sued Pacific Mutual in May 1982 and a jury found Pacific Mutual liable for the actions of its employee, Ruffin. The jury awarded more that $1 million in damages to the city employees.

The Alabama Supreme Court upheld the award in a 5-2 decision, with the two dissenting judges claiming the award violated due process.

In past rulings, the Supreme Court has said such jury awards were not prohibited by the Eighth Amendment provision against excessive fines, but left open the possibility excessive fines could violate another section of the Constitution - the due process clause of the 14th Amendment.

A ruling by the high court is not expected before next year.

Bruce Beckman, an attorney for Pacific Mutual, told the court Wednesday the ''open-ended standardless discretion'' of the jury in setting punitive damage figures violates due process - a guarantee that the legal system will operate in an equitable and predictable manner for all parties.

Beckman said punitive damage awards as such are not necessarily illegal, but argued there should be a cap and some established standard so the amount has a relationship to actual damages.

''All it (the jury) had to go on was its own notion of right and wrong,'' Beckman said. ''(That's) exactly the arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement that due process condemns.''

But Bruce Ennis, an attorney for Haslip and other Roosevelt City workers, said instructing a jury that an award should not be ''excessive'' is all that is needed to ensure due process. He also noted that Alabama has judicial review of punitive damage awards, which serves as an additional safeguard.

Ennis asked the court not to set limits on punitive damage awards unless it determines that a majority of such awards are excessive and that states do not have the ability through legislative measures to set their own guidelines.

For the third day of the court's new term, arguments were held with only eight justices. David Souter, confirmed by the Senate Tuesday to replace retired Justice William Brennan, is scheduled to take the oath as an associate justice next Tuesday.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - As congressional leaders and President Bush try to push their budget agreement through the House and Senate, officials in some states are worrying that the pact could add to their own fiscal woes.

However, even as they fear that added federal taxes on items such as gasoline could cut down on consumer spending and hurt state tax revenues, many also are hopeful the spending blueprint could help their states over the long haul by averting a major national economic downturn.

Most state officials contacted by United Press International since the budget agreement was reached last weekend said since Congress has not yet passed a final plan, it is still too early to tell precisely what will happen in their states.

However, many were still able to make some generalizations and predicted that state revenues from gasoline and alcohol will drop because the higher federal taxes would probably discourage consumers from spending.

Randy Erben, the director of the state of Texas' lobbying office in Washington stressed the higher gasoline taxes will be especially tough on his state because of its size.

''Texans just drive a lot more than other people because we have a lot more state to cover, so a 5-cent increase in the gas tax will add up quickly. And I think we can expect it will reduce the state's share of tax revenues, because as the price goes up, people will use less,'' he said.

''The federal government is once again invading and eroding the tax territory of the states,'' said Texas Comptroller Bob Bullock. ''It may make the bottom line look better in Washington, but it only puts us further in the hole in Texas because we depend on these consumption taxes more than the federal government does.''

Some of those same fears are shared by officials in Minnesota, but officials there said they hope their losses will be offset by tax gains coming from new limits on income tax deductions used by the wealthy.

''We could lose some money on highway and alcohol taxes, but we have a potential gain on the limitation for itemized deductions,'' said John Tomlinson, assistant commissioner of the Minnesota Department of Revenue.

In Maryland, state officials prepared for a pinch from the pact, but said they are pleased that massive layoffs from the federal workforce were avoided - a prospect that would have especially hurt the state because of its closeness to Washington, D.C.

While many state officials across the country feared parts of the agreement could hurt, others focused on the long-term benefits.

Minnesota Finance Commissioner Peter Hutchinson said Minnesotans should not look too hard at the individual effects of each component of the budget proposal.

''It's real easy to get into the individual pieces,'' said Minnesota Finance Commissioner Peter Hutchinson. ''What happens to the economy is a much bigger impact than any of those pieces. Our biggest worry was the effect of a non-resolution on interest rates. High rates result in a weaker economy, and we've already got a weak economy.''

''To the extent that the budget negotiations in Washington significantly close the federal budget deficit, it will help the national economy and the state economy over time,'' added David Wood, acting director of the Illinois Bureau of the Budget. ''Overall, the budget plans do limit our flexibility, but that is offset by getting the federal deficit under control.''

AMMAN, Jordan (OCT. 3) UPI - A senior aide to Mikhail Gorbachev met Jordan's King Hussein Wednesday on a ''special mission'' to the Middle East that was also to take him to Baghdad at the Soviet president's request.

Yevgeny Primakov, a member of Gorbachev's President Council and a ranking Soviet expert on the Middle East, delivered a message from Gorbachev on the Persian Gulf crisis to King Hussein and was also believed to be carrying a message for Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

Details of the messages were not released.

''In the course of the conversation, the two men expressed anxiety over the danger of armed clashes in the Gulf and stressed the need for a political settlement of the situation,'' the official Soviet news agency Tass said of Primakov's meeting with the king.

The four-man Soviet delegation was expected to fly to Baghdad Thursday for a meeting with Saddam. A Soviet diplomat in Amman, who requested anonymity, said Primakov was likely carrying a message from Gorbachev to the Iraqi leader.

''There must be a message if Primakov was assigned by the president to go meet the president of Iraq,'' the diplomat said.

French President Francois Mitterrand meanwhile left Wednesday to make a surprise visit to the Persian Gulf to review French troops and meet with officials in Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates.

In Moscow, the official Soviet news agency Tass said Primakov ''is fulfilling a special mission of the head of the Soviet state,'' Gorbachev.

Yuri Gremitskykh, a spokesman for the Foreign Ministry, said Primakov flew to Amman and would go to Baghdad either later Wednesday or more likely on Thursday.

Primakov began his trip a day after Gremitskykh expressed concern for Soviet workers in Iraq and said the Baghdad government has delayed action on exit permits for them.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said he would meet in Amman with King Hussein and with Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat.

Tass provided few details of the journey by Primakov, a leading Middle East expert who formerly headed the Soviet Academy of Science's Institute of Oriental Studies.

''It is a mysterious mission, believe me,'' said a Western source who knows Primakov personally.

Moscow has supported eight U.N. resolutions against Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion and subsequent annexation of Kuwait, while maintaining contacts with its traditional Arab allies in a possible mediating role.

The source said Primakov, a former Cairo correspondent for the Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda, speaks Arabic and is ''the best man on the top level to deal with the Arabs.''

In an interview published Wednesday in the Literaturnaya Gazeta newspaper, Primakov said: ''However dangerous the gulf crisis may be in itself and however important it is to settle it, I think we should proceed from the fact that it offers a kind of laboratory for testing our efforts to create a new world order after the Cold War.''

It was not known whether there was any link between Mitterrand's reported journey and the mission by Primakov, neither of which had been announced in advance.

But amid recent signs of an easing of tension in the 2-month-old crisis, the two trips could indicate new diplomatic efforts to resolve the conflict in which Iraqi troops in Kuwait are faced off against a Saudi-based international force dominated by U.S. soldiers.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze told the Pravda newspaper that he and President Bush had discussed the crisis Monday when Bush was in New York to address the U.N. General Assembly.

''Both the U.S. administration and we believe that there are now chances for a peaceful resolution of the conflict,'' Shevardnadze said. ''We are prepared to act jointly to achieve a peaceful settlement of the crisis.''

France, partly because of its historic ties to the Arab countries of northern Africa, has long claimed a special relationship with the Arab world, and Mitterrand last week proposed a plan for settling the crisis, which would link the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait to Israel's presence in the occupied territories.

Gremitskykh said Tuesday ''a considerable number of Soviet citizens found themselves stranded after Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.''

Iraqi authorities have for a week withheld permission to leave the country for 870 Soviets working on an oil project in southern Iraq and 372 Soviets building a thermal power station outside Baghdad, Gremitskykh said.

Moscow previously maintained its specialists working in Iraq were fulfilling their contracts and were free to leave when they wished.

Iraq's invasion of Kuwait has seriously harmed its relationship with the Soviet Union, which had long been a close ally and its major arms supplier.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - With a German military band playing the national anthem and a Bonn official apologizing for Adolf Hitler's crimes, President Bush hosted a Rose Garden ceremony marking Wednesday's reunification of Germany.

''Today begins a new chapter in the history'' of Germany, Bush told a gathering of Germans and German-Americans celebrating the rebirth of the long-divided nation.

''Forty-five years of conflict and confrontation between East and West are now behind us,'' said Bush. ''At long last the day has come. Germany is united. Germany is fully free.''

Flanked by Juergen Ruhfus, the German ambassador to the United States, Bush signed a proclamation declaring Wednesday to be German- American Day.

In it, the president said, ''Today Germany is at peace with its neighors and, on this day of Germany unity, at peace with itself.''

Ruhfus thanked the United States for helping reunify Germany - a nation divided after being defeated in World War II - and for helping obtain full membership for the new Germany in NATO.

''To us Germans, this year's Oct. 3 is a day of rejoicing, a day of reflection and a day of gratitude,'' the ambassador said.

Referring to World War II, he said, ''We shall not forget the endless of suffering that was brought upon the nations of Europe and the world in the name of Germany.''

''We recall especially the untold suffering inflicted upon the Jewish people '' an estimated 6 million of whom were killed by the Nazis during the Holocaust.

''We Germans are united in our determination that none of this must ever be allowed to happen again,'' Ruhfus said.

Bush declined an invitation to go to Germany for the reunification ceremony, saying he did not want to distract attention from an emotional national event.

But in a taped message broadcast on German television, Bush said, ''America is proud to count itself among the friends and allies of free Germany, now and in the future.''

At the opening of the Rose Garden ceremony, a German military band played the national anthems of both the United States and of Germany.

Earlier Wednesday, Bush telephoned German Chancellor Helmut Kohl to offer his ''heartiest congratulations'' on the reunification.

UNITED NATIONS (OCT. 3) UPI - The Soviet-American talks on reducing conventional forces edged toward a U.S.-imposed deadline Wednesday with an agreement close but not nailed down.

Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze met at the Soviet mission to the United Nations for the third time in a week, with arms control at the head of their unfinished agendas.

The United States has said an agreement on conventional force reductions is a prerequisite for President Bush to attend the 35-nation CSCE summit in Paris in mid-November.

As he arrived for the meeting, Baker said, ''We're talking about a Conference on Cooperation and Security in Europe that is six weeks away.''

The chief U.S. negotiator, Ambassador James Woolsey, has said that if there is not full agreement by early October there will not be enough time to finish the detail and legal work on a treaty before the CSCE summit.

Baker said late Tuesday the issue of how to limit and count combat aircraft has not been settled and there are differences on how many troops will be permitted in specified zones in Central Europe.

Baker is to leave New York late Wednesday and Shevardnadze will leave Thursday so their meeting Wednesday at the Soviet mission was crucial.

Both sides have said the main issues are settled in the complex treaty that would cut troops, planes, armored vehicles and artillery in Europe.

Shevardndaze said the remaining issues ''have to be closed out tonight if we want the Paris summit to be held.''

NEW YORK (OCT. 3) UPI - The sister-in-law of a Utah family being mugged on a midtown Manhattan subway platform ran to a youth for help but was horrified when he turned out to be the gang's lookout and grabbed her, a prosecutor said Wednesday.

In the next seconds, Brian Watkins, 22, was fatally stabbed as he tried to defend his mother, who was punched in the face, and father, who was slashed with a box-cutter, and robbed of $200.

Eight youths indicted for robbery and felony murder in his killing on Sept. 2 were held without bail Wednesday after a hearing in state Supreme Court in Manhattan. The attorney for the accused killer of Watkins, Yull Garry Morales 19, told the judge that Morales should be treated leniently because he is one of the few members of the gang, whose initials ''FTS'' stand for a string of expletives, who has never been arrested before.

''He's a virgin in the criminal justice system,'' Joel Lutwin said.

The judge denied the request.

In his bail arguments to Judge Edwin Torres, Assistant District Attorney Thomas Schiels said he had a strong case against the youths, particularly against Pascal Charpentier, 18.

Schiels revealed that the youth allegedly prevented Michelle Watkins, wife of Brian's brother Todd, from escaping the platform and seeking help.

Unknown to her, Charpentier was acting as the lookout for the gang that set out to rob people for money to go disco dancing at nearby Roseland Ballroom.

''While the robbery was taking place, while the knives were out, while the Watkins parents were being cut'' the young woman ran to the youth for help, Schiels said.

''He held her so that she could not run for help,'' Schiels said.

Schiels also revealed the grand jury that indicted Morales, 19, outwardly scoffed at his claim that Watkins fell on the ''butterfly knife'' and thereby caused his own death.

''Morales in his videotaped statement gave a story so preposterous that when the grand jury heard it, they actually laughed,'' Schiels said.

''He said he was separated from the others, saw them in a fight with individuals and took a knife out to scare them. He had the knife by his side, the knife was pointed toward the ground and one of these individuals fell on his knife and died,'' Schiels told the judge.

Outside court Lutwin, told reporters, ''We'll see who has the last laugh at the trial.''

(OCT. 3) UPI - Iraq reportedly is offering to free all French hostages it holds- if a top official from the French government goes to Baghdad. That word is carried out of the country by the chairman of a French-Iraqi friendship association as nine French citizens freed by Iraq arrive in Jordan. French President Mitterrand... who has offered to mediate a peaceful solution to the crisis... is flying to the area today. He will visit units of the French military already dispatched to the region.

The political barriers that once separated Germany have fallen as easily as the once hated Wall that divided the country... and today there is just one Germany to report about. Celebrations that continued through the night have ended, and the real job now begins. The first all-German elections are scheduled for December 2nd, and the latest polls show that Chancellor Kohl and his Christian Democrats will be easy winners.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (OCT. 3) UPI - A homemade bomb exploded outside the residence of U.S. Ambassador William Swing in Pretoria early Wednesday, causing slight damage but no injuries, the U.S. Embassy and police reported.

No one claimed responsibility for the blast, an embassy spokesman said. Foreign Minister Roelof ''Pik'' Botha expressed his ''deep concern'' in a statement and noted Pretoria ''condemns acts of terrorism of this nature in the strongest terms and expresses its regret that the United States should have been the victim of such an act.''

It was the first such incident involving the U.S. ambassador in South Africa and occurred just a week after President Frederik de Klerk returned from talks in Washington with President Bush, who endorsed his racial reforms.

The embassy reported that a ''small explosive device was detonated'' about 1 a.m. outside the rear metal gate that leads to a recreation center inside the ambassador's compound in the exclusive Pretoria suburb of Waterkloof Ridge.

The sound of the blast was heard over a wide area and awakened a number of people in the suburb, including Swing, and caused slight damage to the gate and a garden shed, U.S. sources and police said.

Police Lt. Leon Engelbrecht in Pretoria said the bomb was ''a homemade device, it was definitely not a manufactured device.'' He said an investigation was under way.

News of the blast came as a black-consciousness, anti-apartheid movement Wednesday rejected a government invitation to join the negotiations aimed at ending 42 years of white minority rule.

Gerry Mosala, president of the Azanian People's Organization, told reporters the movement demanded that discussions concentrate on creating a non-racial constitution - implicitly criticizing the African National Congress for acceding to preliminary talks intended only to clear the way for substantive negotiations.

AZAPO claims the allegiance of black intellectuals and a national following of tens of thousands but is regarded as a junior partner to the ANC and other black opposition groups.

''We make a distinction between ... discussions aimed at producing a new constitution for a new society and talks aimed at enlisting the participation of liberation movements in the removal of measures that keep black people in prison and under legal political and socio- economic conditions of suppression and exploitation,'' Mosala said.

He said AZAPO ''remains committed'' to talks on a non-racial constituent assembly and would not be ''coopted in any other talks.''

The other major exclusively black alliance and rival to the ANC, the Pan-Africanist Congress, on Sept. 23 postponed a decision on participating in talks after President Frederik de Klerk urged it and AZAPO to join the process.

The ANC and the government have in two preliminary meetings cleared the way for full-blown power-sharing negotiations on ending white rule. The ANC on Aug. 6, after the second round of talks, abandoned its 29- year-old armed struggle against white rule in exchange for promises of an acceleration in de Klerk's racial reforms launched February.

But black-consciousness groups have criticized the ANC for what they charge are major concessions in response to relatively minor adjustments to apartheid and also the ANC's willingness to have whites as members on every level.

De Klerk legalized the ANC and PAC after 30 years and lifted two years of restrictions on AZAPO at the start of his reforms Feb. 2.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - The federal deposit insurance system can be bolstered through strengthening supervision, increasing bank capital and reducing risk faced by banks in an increasingly competitive market, banking regulators said Wednesday.

''A healthy deposit insurance system depends ultimately on the existence of a healthy banking system,'' L. William Seidman, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., told the House Subcommittee on Commerce, Consumer and Monetary Affairs.

Any reform of the deposit insurance system, which is the focus of an ongoing study by a host of government agencies, should focus on streamlining laws governing banking practices that no longer apply in today's more competitive market, Seidman said.

''The essence of prudent banking is to avoid making bad loans and investments '' he said. ''Unfortunately, all the rules and regulations in the world are not going to prevent bankers from making unwise lending and investment decisions.''

Seidman also called for the reform of ''the antiquated legal structure burdening the financial industry in general and the banking industry in particular.''

The three primary obstacles standing in the way of a competitive banking industry are the Glass Steagall Act, the Bank Holding Company Act and the geographic barriers to bank expansion, he said.

''Substantial benefits would accrue from eliminating the current ownership and activity restrictions imposed by these laws,'' he said.

Easing geographic restrictions would lower bank risk through diversification and allow banks to expand operations to match expansions in regional markets.

''These archaic geographic restrictions will become even more unpalatable in the near future as the European Community eliminates restrictions on branch banking,'' Seidman said referring to the 1992 integration of the European common market.

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan told the panel the eroded influence of U.S. banks in global financial markets can be shored up somewhat by allowing banks to participate in a wider array of activities and expanding their geographic reach.

He also called for greater discipline among depositors who have become ''relatively indifferent'' to the soundness of the financial institutions holding their deposits.

''With depositors exercising insufficient discipline through the risk premium they demand on the interest rate they receive on their deposits, the incentive of some banks' owners to control risk-taking has been blunted,'' Greenspan said.

(OCT. 3) UPI - The Commerce Department says American factory orders advanced one- point-eight percent in August, to 244-point-six-BILLION dollars... largely because of an increase in petroleum refining costs. Excluding petroleum, factory orders were up only six-tenths of one percent in August. There also were increases- though NOT as sizeable- in orders for military hardware, from ships and tanks to aircraft and missiles. Private analysts concerned about the latest Middle East crisis had predicted a decline in August factory orders.

A Confederate battle flag was stolen from atop the dome of the Alabama State Capitol in Montgomery before dawn today. The U-S and Alabama flags were left flying. Several radio stations in the city received calls from a man who said he represented an unknown group called the Justice League. He said the group took the flag to try to bring whites and blacks together. Governor Guy Hunt ordered the Confederate flag replaced, and a new one was raised a short time later. .

The Confederate battle flag was the object of a major controversy two years ago. At that time, more than one dozen black legislators were arrested while trying to climb a fence around the Capitol and carry out a threat to remove the flag. The legislators were given small fines, but NO jail time. The Confederate flag has flown over the Capitol since the mid 1960's, when it was raised as part of a Civil War centennial.

PARIS (OCT. 3) UPI - France said Wednesday it was sending eight Mirage jet fighters to Qatar and President Francois Mitterrand began a surprise visit to the Persian Gulf to review French troops deployed last weekend in Saudi Arabia.

The airplanes will also be available to defend the neighboring United Arab Emirates if that country asks for it, according to a French Defense Ministry statement.

France and Qatar agreed in principle Sept. 23 that French combat planes could be sent to the air base at Doha to help defend the emirate. Defense Ministry officials said eight Mirage F1 C jet fighters were sent.

Paris is also sending 24 Mirage 2000 bombers, Mirage F1 CR fighters and Jaguar bombers to Saudi Arabia this week.

In Amman, Gilles Munier, chairman of the French-Iraqi friendship association, told reporters that when he was in Baghdad the Iraqi government told him it ''was willing to release all (French) hostages if a top official from the (French) government or opposition goes to Iraq.''

The suddenness of Mitterrand's visit and the remarks by Munier led to speculation France might be quietly negotiating to end the Persian Gulf crisis caused by Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2, or for the release of French hostages, possibly by sending French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas or Jean-Pierre Chevenement to Iraq.

Last week Dumas denied that France was negotiating with Iraq and said there were only normal diplomatic countacts between the two countries.

Paris estimates that 350 Frenchmen are being held against their will in Iraq and Kuwait by Iraqi authorities.

Mitterrand flew aboard a special Air France jetliner for Abu Dhabi, where he was to meet with the president of the federation, Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan al Nahyan, the Elysee Palace said.

Mitterrand is to confer Thursday on board the French frigate Dupleix with commanders of the 13,000 French troops and 14 ships in the region, the Elysee said.

Later Thursday the president will travel to Saudi Arabia for an audience with King Fahd, then to the Red Sea port of Yanbu to see the 4, 000 French Foreign legionnaires and other troops.

France sent the troops in response to Iraq's violation of the French ambassador's residence at Kuwait City on Sept. 14 and the seizure of three French citizens who had taken shelter there.

Political experts said Mitterrand apparently wanted to boost his popularity at home by beating President Bush and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher as the first major Western leader to visit the gulf region since the invasion triggered deployment of a U.S.-led multi- national force in the gulf area.

Mitterrand's position on the crisis differs from that of the United States and Britain, refelecting France's long ties with the Arab world and Iraq in particular.

Mitterrand proposed a peace plan to the U.N. General Assembly last week that called for Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to state an ''intention'' to withdraw from Kuwait with a possibility of free elections in the emirate after the actual withdrawal.

Bush, on the other hand, has demanded Iraq withdraw from Kuwait before any negotiations.

Mitterrand was accompanied by Dumas and Chevenement. Chevenement, who government hardliners say has been too lenient with Iraq, survived a cabinet re-shuffle Tuesday night by Mitterrand and Prime Minister Michel Rocard.

France has about 300 helicopter specialists and paratroops based at Abu Dhabi helping train the defense forces of the federation in the southern gulf.

French arms suppliers regard the small French force in the UAE, far from the frontiers with Iraq, as a useful chance to bolster sales in a country that traditionally has been supplied by Britain.

Nine French citizens released by Iraqi citizens left Baghdad Wednesday for Amman en route home after an appeal by Munier.

SAN FRANCISCO (OCT. 3) UPI - An autopsy was expected to show whether an elderly man suffered a heart attack before his luxury car sped out of control, leaving four dead and four injured in the city's worst traffic accident in 35 years, police said Wednesday.

Police Inspector Tim Smith said the driver, George Smith, 91, had been treated for a heart condition, and witnesses said he appeared stiff and rigid as his car plunged down a steep hill and into a series of smashups in the commerical heart of the Noe Valley district.

Killed in the late Tuesday mishap were Smith and Dolores Keane, 52, both of San Francisco, a coroner's spokeswoman said. The names of two children who died trapped in a car that burst into flames were withheld pending notification of relatives, she said.

Ha Thuy Fechter, 39, driver of the burned car was listed in very critical condition at San Francisco General Hospital with third-degree burns over 70 to 80 percent of her body, spokeswoman Gloria Rodriguez said.

Another victim, Yun Liu, 27, was listed in fair condition with head lacertions and signs of internal bleeding.

Two other victims, Deborah Morgan, 36, and Teresa Garduno, 29, were treated at the hospital and released, Rodriguez said.

Witnesses said the Smith's late model Cadillac suddenly lurched forward at the top of Noe Street and careened down the hill, smashing into seven other cars until it finally flipped over on its top. All the damage in the 4:30 p.m. mishap was confined to a one-block area, between the interesections of 24th and Jersey streets, police Lt. Thomas Muldeen said.

The Cadillac was ''gunning,'' said Vanessa Santarsiero, who witnessed the series of crashes. ''You could hear the engine really going. He hit the middle of the street and he absolutely flew across the intersection.''

The runaway car first hit a moving vehicle from the rear, fatally injuring Keane. It then collided with a car driven by Liu. As the Cadillac crashed on it smashed into a vehicle driven by Fechter, which burst into flames.

Two children, a 9-year-old girl and a 2-year-old boy who officials say Fechter may have been babysitting, died in the burning vehicle despite the desperate efforts of witnesses to save them.

''It was a total nightmare,'' said Bill Krauss, 32, who rushed to the burning car and tried to open the jammed door. ''I heard the kids screaming, 'Help me! Help me!' The flames were at that point engulfing the car. I thought the car was going to explode so I got back and the screams stopped.''

Firemen from a nearby station house were on the scene within a minute and half but it was too late, Battalion Chief John Rebholtz of the city fire department said.

''The car must have literally exploded. It was completely engulfed, a full gasoline fire with the tires burning, smoking pouring out. It was just too late. It was over. The kids never had a chance,'' Rebholtz said.

Police Lt. Bruce Lorin said the tragedy was the city's worst traffic accident since May 1955, when the driver of a moving van lost his brakes on the Clay Street hill and plunged into an intersection, killing himself and six pedestrians.

MONTE CARLO, MONACO (OCT. 3) UPI - Stefano Casiraghi, the 30-year-old Italian husband of Princess Caroline of Monaco, died in a speed boat accident Wednesday during a world championship trial race off the coast of Monaco.

The accident came a day after Casiraghi, the reigning world champion in offshore powerboat racing, reportedly had helped rescue the crew of a competing boat that caught fire during the first event of the championship Monday.

''Monsieur Stefano Casiraghi, husband of Her Serene Highness Princess Caroline of Monaco, has died this morning while taking part on his boat in a trial counting for the offshore world championship,'' said a brief statement from the palace.

''His teammate, Monsieur Patrice Innocenti, was taken to the Princess Grace of Monaco Hospital Center'' in the tiny Mediterranean principality, it said.

Princess Caroline was believed to be in Paris when the accident took place during the second leg of the race.

It was the second tragedy in eight years for the royal family. Princess Grace, the 52-year-old wife of Prince Rainier and mother of Caroline, died in a car crash on Sept. 14, 1982. The former American movie star once known as Grace Kelly was driving with Caroline's sister, Stephanie, when she suffered a stroke and her car went off the road.

Witnesses of Wednesday's accident said the twin-hulled raceboat Pinot di Pinot carrying Casiraghi, 30, overturned when it steered into a large wave at full speed at a point near Saint-Jean-Cap-Ferrat. The boat, reported traveling at about 100 mph, was about 6 miles from the Monte Carlo start, heading for Nice.

Rescue efforts were mounted immediately. Casiraghi's French teammate Innocenti who was at the helm, was thrown clear and rescued with a reported leg injury. But witnesses said Casiraghi remained trapped in his seat under the capsized 42-foot-long, 5-ton boat.

Casiraghi ''certainly did not have time to see what was coming and, at that speed, remaining trapped under the boat, must have been killed instantly,'' said Michel Karsenti, a French competitor who was following Casiraghi's boat in the race.

Casiraghi's body was recovered and taken to a mortuary next to the Princess Grace Hospital.

Weather conditions were described by organizers as ''normal'' when the catamaran - equipped with two 800 horsepower motors - overturned. But Italy's ANSA news agency said there was a gale force headwind blowing at the time.

The Italian news agency ANSA said that on Monday, Casiraghi's vessel had rescued the crew of a competing boat that caught fire.

Casiraghi took up power boat racing in 1984, later winning 12 times in 80 races. In 1989 he won the world title at Atlantic City.

The last such serious power boat accident happened in 1987, when French pilot Didier Pironi died during the Needles Trophy off the English coast.

Casiraghi, Caroline's second husband and three years her junior, married the princess on Dec. 29, 1983, in a simple civil ceremony in the royal palace in Monte Carlo. Caroline was three month's pregnant at the wedding and gave birth to son Andrea on June 9, 1984. Two other children followed, daughter Charlotte in 1986 and son Pierre in 1987.

The wedding was not recognized by the Roman Catholic Church because of Caroline's divorce from Phillipe Junot, the French playboy to whom she was married form 1978 to 1980. The church never acted on Caroline's request to annul the marriage to Junot, who was 17 years older than Caroline.

Casiraghi had an adventurous streak. In addition to racing speed boats, he and Caroline competed in the grueling 8,700-mile Paris-to- Dakar, Senegal road race in 1985. They had to drop out after two days in the Algerian desert because their vehicle crashed. Some media reports said Casiraghi was driving but Caroline said another member of their crew was at the wheel.

Casiraghi also was caught up in a controversy in 1986 when friends and relatives of Italian soldiers protested a decision to allow him to avoid the military draft. In 1983 Casiraghi had claimed he was unfit for service because a genital tumor had left him temporarily impotent.

Casiraghi was born Sept. 8, 1960, to a family of wealthy northern Italian industrialists in the Lombardy region near Milan. He studied business management at Milan's Bocconi University and started work at age 20 in his father's central heating business.

Casiraghi later founded a real estate company of his own and an Italian import-export industry.

Once described by an Italian newspaper as ''blonde, handsome and amiable looking,'' Casiraghi had a reputation for spending much time in expensive Milan night clubs in his early youth. But friends said he evidently settled down to become a family man after he married Caroline.

Although Casiraghi had commercial interests with his family in Milan, he moved his export-import business to Monte Carlo after the marriage and the two lived in Caroline's villa near the palace on a high cliff jutting over the sea.

NEW YORK (OCT. 3) UPI - Modern dance pioneer Martha Graham is defying her 96 years with a totally delightful new ragtime romp choreographed to the music of one of Scott Joplin's classics.

The Martha Graham Dance Company opened a week's engagement Tuesday at the City Center Theater with a program of vintage Graham numbers capped by the world premiere of ''Maple Leaf Rag.'' It proved to be Graham's most joyous work in years and the first in which she satirizes her own dance idiosyncracies.

The first performance of Graham's 180th ballet to date was enthusiastically received by the audience which leaped to its feet when Miss Graham, a frail, diminutive figure in a lipstick red gown, appeared with the cast to take a bow alongside fashion designer Calvin Klein.

Klein has stepped into the shoes of the late Halston as a Graham benefactor, designing and contributing the ''Maple Leaf Rag'' costumes. He played host and toastmaster at a post-performance dinner dance at the Hotel Plaza for which Bianca Jagger was chairwoman and hotel owner Donald Trump was the self-appointed greeter.

Graham said recently that she used Joplin's ''Maple Leaf Rag'' as a cheerer-upper back in the 1920s and 1930s, asking her onetime pianist-composer Louis Horst to play it whenever ''I was in a fog about what I was trying to create.''

''He'd play it and I just lay on the floor and waited to cheer up. It never failed,'' she said.

The dance starts with dancer Terese Capucilli reclining dejectedly on an antique joggle board, the bare stage's only furnishing. Graham's recorded voice asks the onstage pianist, ''Louis, play me the 'Maple Street Rag'.''

The joggle board is very important to the 13-minute work, serving as a supple seat, jumping off point and gym horse for acrobatics for the 24 dancers.

It is a springy stretch of lumber supported by sawhorse legs on rockers that Graham noticed on the piazza of a Charleston, S.C., house when the company was performing at the Spoleto Festival USA this summer.

She knew immediately that it would work for ''Maple Leaf Rag,'' adding interest as well as well as its own humorous movement.

Although there are references to rag dancing and the cakewalk in ''Maple Leaf Rag,'' the choreography is mainly a compendium of Graham's dance vocabulary expressing delight, joy, euphoria, celebration and playfulness.

Skipping and running movements with arms outstretched or waved aloft are used repeatedly in a variety of group patterns alternating with duet passages by paired dancers.

At midpoint, five anguished women dancers rush across the stage several times using breast-beating gestures in a hilarious spoof of the agonizing that is very much the hallmark of Graham's serious mythic and Freudian repertory. The audience got the message and laughed delightedly.

''I didn't know if the dance would be funny but it was,'' Graham said after the performance. ''I intended part of it to be a satire on what I do.''

Klein has devised second skin unitards out of Japanese silk in lovely pastel shades ranging from blues and greens to roses and ochres. One girl whirls about the stage in a long-skirted gray silk gown to mark the beginning of each new phase of he choreography.

Floyd Flynn partners Capucilli with winning gusto. The entire corps turns in an inspired performance, a little more disciplined in concerted movement than in the ballet which precedes it, Graham's 1981 ''Ritual to the Sun,'' a majestically choreographed work danced in golden yellow costumes.

''Steps in the Street,'' a 1936 dance inspired by Great Depression street scenes, and ''Errand into the Maze,'' a 1947 work that retells the Cretan myth of the bull labyrinth, completed the opening night program. Also being performed this week are such signatory Graham works as ''Acts of Light,'' ''Night Journey,'' and ''Seraphic Dialogue.''

This repertory, with possibly the addition of ''Maple Leaf Rag,'' will be taken to the Far East later this month for a tour beginning in Tokyo and Osaka Japan, and continuing to Seoul, Korea, Taipei, Taiwan, and Hong Kong. Performances in several European countries are planned later in the year.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - President Bush postponed a New England campaign swing on behalf of GOP candidates Wednesday so he could stay in Washington to press for congressional passage of his endangered deficit- cutting budget deal.

At least one of the Republicans the president had been scheduled to campaign for, New Hampshire Senate candidate Rep. Robert Smith, has opposed the budget package as unacceptable.

''Representative Smith is disappointed that President Bush won't be coming to New Hampshire, but he understands that he is busy in Washington,'' a Smith spokeswoman said.

Earlier this week, Smith's Democratic foe, John Durkin, called on Smith to ''dis-invite'' Bush from a campaign appearance Friday because of the budget deal, which calls for $134 billion in new taxes and fees. Smith refused.

Bush had been scheduled to campaign Thursday and Friday for Republicans candidates in Boston, Waterbury and Stamford, Conn., Burlington, Vt., and Manchester, N.H.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater, in announcing the trip had been postponed, said Bush ''wants to be here to lobby'' for the budget, which faces a Friday deadline for approval and faces an uphill sturggle for approval in the House, where all 435 seats are up for election this fall.

Fitzwater rejected suggestions that some of the GOP candidates may have asked the president not to campaign for them this week.

''No, they're eager to have him, and these will all be rescheduled,'' the press secretary said.

Fitzwater announced Bush will travel Oct. 10 to Raleigh, N.C., to campaign for Sen. Jesse Helms; Atlanta, to support Georgia GOP gubernatorial nominee Johnny Isakson, and St. Petersburg, Fla., to boost Gov. Bob Martinez.

Smith is one of several Republicans who have spoken out against the budget deal, which they see as a political time bomb. Rep. Lynn Martin, R-Ill., who is seeking to unseat Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., also has opposed it.

Bush, speaking at a news conference Wednesday with out-of-town reporters, said Democrats and Republicans can ''blame me'' if they need a political shield.

He also said he is sticking with the deficit-cutting accord as the ''last best hope'' to keep the country from sinking into an economic disaster.

Smith's spokeswoman said the congressman does not blame the president for the proposed budget deal, reached Sunday between Bush and Republican and Democratic negotiators.

''The blame for the agreement lies with liberal Democrats,'' she said.

(OCT. 3) UPI - A senior aide to Soviet President Gorbachev has arrived in Jordan on what is rapidly becoming something of a mystery mission. Yevgeny Primakov is a leading Middle East expert in the Soviet Union, and he reportedly will meet with Jordan's King Hussein before flying to Iraq. A Soviet diplomat who asks NOT to be named theorizes that Primakov must be carrying a message from Gorbachev for Iraq's Saddam Hussein.

A major snag is reported in Senate efforts to pass an emergency bill that would let the nation tap into some of its oil reserves. The bill easily passed the House last Friday. But two members of the Senate Energy Committee have blocked it up and the committee has NO meetings set before Congress is to adjourn later this month. Louisiana Democratic Senator Bennett Johnston and Idaho Republican James McClure question the idea of dipping into the stockpile just to lower prices when oil supplies remain high.

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan says it would be what he termed ''a grave mistake'' if Congress fails to enact the compromise 500-BILLION-dollar deficit-reduction plan. Greenspan told the House Government Operations Committee today that the budget summit crafted what appears to be a ''credible enforceable reduction'' in the budget deficit over five years. In the past, he has said approval of a credible budget proposal could prompt the Fed to ease its stance on interest rates.

China has begun a formal investigation into its worst airline tragedy since 1982. Officials want to find out exactly what happened just before the hijacked Boeing 737 bounced off two other aircraft while landing at the airport in Canton. The explosions that followed claimed 127 lives. One report says the hijackers panicked when they found they were landing in China and set off an explosion. But a survivor tells of a fight in the cockpit just before the crash.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - Edwin Gray, former chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, Wednesday defended his tenure as the nation's highest-ranking thrift regulator during the early stages of the collapse of the savings and loan industry.

Gray, who served as the top thrift regulator from 1983 to 1987, told the House Banking Committee that the Garn-St Germain Act, the law passed by Congress that greatly eased restrictions placed on thrift activities, provided inadequate tools for regulators to protect the safety of insured thrift deposits.

''The Garn-St Germain Act simply ignored the matter of modernization and, yes, strengthening the bank board's ability to protect the thrift insurance fund from loss,'' he said.

The committee is examining the roots of the collapse of the savings and loan industry and is paying particular attention to the early 1980s, when regulations governing thrift activities were loosened.

''This period was probably the toughest ever faced by any Federal Home Loan Bank chairman,'' said Rep. Henry Gonzalez, D-Texas, the committee's chairman.

''The high-fliers were in the industry, the trade associations were turning up the heat, the administration was peddling less regulation, the budget-types were cutting budgets and personnel limits for supervisory and examination forces and the Congress was ignoring much of its oversight responsibility,'' he said.

Gray said the size of the bank board's examination force was ''very inadequate'' and was hampered by low salaries and high turnover.

''Under these circumstances, it was very difficult to determine the true financial condition of many institutions, let along being able to to so on a timely basis,'' he said.

Requests for additional staff and pay raises for existing examiners went unheeded by the Reagan administration and Congress.

''The principal reason today's thrift debacle is so big is that Congress did not provide the financial resources we needed, early on, to close insolvent -and often massively insolvent - thrifts and stop the operating losses which I warned were piling up at an exponential rate,'' Gray said.

Gray bristled at criticism directed toward him in committee testimony Monday by Donald Regan, a Treasury secretary under President Reagan.

Regan, defending the deregulatory policies of the Reagan administration, blasted Gray's performance and hinted that Gray's lack of supervision helped fuel the industry's collapse, which is expected to cost taxpayers as much as $500 billion.

Regan, who also served as chief of staff in the Reagan White House, called Gray a ''front'' for the thrift industry.

''Unfortunately, he has a habit of personally denigrating fellow citizens who may not share or challenge his views,'' Gray said. ''Don Regan told you I was a front for the thrift industry. The industry would have found that to be amusing.''

Willingham says everyone at Cape Canaveral is excited about ending the shuttle launch drought that began in April. The goal of the 36th shuttle mission is to send the European-built, nuclear-powered Ulysses probe on a five-year voyage over the uncharted poles of the sun.

KARLSRUHE, Germany (OCT. 3) UPI - German authorities arrested one of the heads of the former powerful East German state police Wednesday on charges of espionage, the federal prosecutor said.

Werner Grossmann, who succeeded Markus Wolf - the legendary East German who inspired John Le Carre's creation of Karla - as foreign intelligence director in the former Ministry of State Security known as Stasi, was arrested in his East Berlin apartment Wednesday, prosecutor Alexander von Stahl said.

With East Germany's merger with the West German federal republic, Bonn's laws prevail and enable West Germany to reach into what was formerly East German territory to arrest its wanted criminals.

Stahl said Grossmann had been in charge of the so-called Main Administration for Information, the Stasi espionage department, which made him ''one of the main delinquents'' on a list of 50 people accused of spying against West Germany.

The Federal Prosecutor's Office in Karlsruhe had prepared arrest warrants for 50 former Stasi members in advance of German unification.

Stahl said police also had arrest warrants for Wolf and former West German spy Hans-Joachim Tiedge, but both are believed to have fled to the Soviet Union or another eastern country.

Stahl said there had been no sign, however, that Grossmann had also been planning to leave the country.

German media recently reported that Wolf, the elusive Soviet masterspy in the Le Carre's George Smiley thrillers, had fled to the Soviet Union although he had said publicly before that he would stay in unified Germany and face charges.

Stahl said that he had received a letter from Wolf saying that ''he wants to evade his arrest.'' But Stahl said it is his duty to find Wolf and arrest him.

The authorities in Bonn recently turned down suggestions of an amnesty for all East German spies and a Justice Ministry spokesman said that both Wolf and Tiedge ''can expect the doorbell to ring on October 3'' if they remain in Germany.

But officials admit they may have some difficulty in uncovering other agents known in Bonn only by their code names.

Intelligence sources in East Berlin said potentially compromising documents formerly stored at the East Berlin Ministry for State Security have been destroyed. West German newspapers report that some have been sent to the Soviet intelligence services.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (OCT. 3) UPI - A record store owner was convicted on obscenity charges Wednesday for selling copies of the controversial 2 Live Crew album ''As Nasty As They Want To Be'' to undercover detectives.

Merchant Charles Freeman faces up to one year in jail and a $1,000 fine for the misdemanor conviction. He was arrested for selling the records June 8, two days after a Fort Lauderdale federal judge declared the recording obscene.

The five-woman, one-man Broward County jury deliberated about 3 1/2 hours Wednesday, following two days of testimony.

The defense admitted Freeman sold the recording but argued that he was protected by First Amendment guarantees of free speech.

During closing arguments, prosecutor Leslie Robson countered that, ''The First Amendment doesn't mean you can say what you want, when you want.''

She compared the language on the album to crying ''Fire'' in a crowded theater.

''There are common-sense exceptions to the First Amendment,'' Robson said.

Freeman's attorneys attempted to persuade the all-white jury that rap music is merely a reflection and parody of black street talk and is not designed to be sexually arousing.

Under Florida law, a work is considered obscene if it appeals to the prurient interests, or ''morbid, shameful interest in sex,'' of average community members.

The judge dealt a blow to the defense when he refused to let jurors see a stack of flesh magazines, listen to two other rap recordings, and watch XXX-rated videos, including ''Neighborhood Nymphs.''

The defense hoped to show that the 2 Live Crew recording is mild compared to other materials available in the community.

But the judge said the tapes and magazines might distract the jury from their task of deciding whether the album Freeman sold is obscene.

On Tuesday, two music critics testified that the album has artistic merit even though it is riddled with profanity, sexual references and violence.

Pscyhologist Merry Haber testified people she asked about the record found it to be degrading toward women or occasionally humorous, but not titillating.

''The reaction from people who heard it for a second time was that it was boring,'' Haber said.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - Six Republican senators endorsed Sen. Bennett Johnston, a Democratic colleague, in Louisiana's non-partisan primary Wednesday and urged voters to reject the ''racist and anti-Semitic'' appeals of former Klansman David Duke, running as a GOP candidate.

The senators said they could no longer remain silent about Duke's background and campaign and predicted that if Duke is elected to the Senate he would be ''ostracized'' by the Republicans.

The six senators who made the announcement at a news conference were Sens. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, William Cohen, R- Maine, John Danforth, R-Mo., and Fank Murkowski, R-Alaska.

Boschwitz said Sens. David Durenberger, R-Minn., and Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., joined in the endorsement. Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., signed a ''open letter'' asking Louisiana voters to back Johnston.

The National Right to Life Committee, the most active anti-abortion organization in the country, also endorsed Johnston, contending he has ''one of the best pro-life voting records in the Senate.''

''Pre-born babies need Senator Johnston back in Washington for six more years '' said Douglas Johnson, legislative director of the group.

Under Louisiana's unique election law, candidates of all parties run in the same primary, being held Saturday.

If anyone gets a majority, the person is automatically elected to the Senate, but if no candidate wins a majority, there is a runoff between the top two finishers.

Johnston, seeking a fourth term, is running very close to 50 percent in the polls but Democrats fear he could be forced into a runoff by Duke. The regular Republican candidate, all but abandoned by the national GOP, is Ben Bagert who is scoring less than 10 percent in the polls.

Stevens, who has already campaigned for Johnston in Louisiana, said he knew of no previous time Republican senators have ''openly'' endorsed a Democrat for the Senate and added it was partly due to Louisiana's unique primary.

In the ''open leter to the people of Louisiana,'' the senators said, ''David Duke, who opposes Sen. Johnston and who we hope will not make it through the primary, masquerades as a Republican, but has no place in our party and would bring discredit on the Senate as a whole.

''We reject his racist and anti-Semitic appeals, and we reiterate that he has no place in our party, or in this body,'' they said.

''The need to speak out against hatred and bigotry far outweighs any partisan interest we may have in this election, and we urge the Republicans in Louisiana to vote for Sen. Bennett Johnston and return him to the U.S. Senate '' they said.

Stevens said, ''I can't believe a man who salutes a burning cross ... who believes we can see white victory in the white robes of the Klan can be one of us.''

''All of us would be embarrassed and mortified to serve in the Senate with David Duke masquerading as a Republican,'' Danforth said.

Asked why they had waited until the week of the primary to endorse Johnston, Stevens replied, ''I waited until I saw three polls that showed Mr. Bagert had not caught on.''

Stevens said that if Duke forced a runoff and then beat Johnston, he would ''take action'' to keep the former member of the Klan from joining the GOP caucus, which could deny Duke committee membership.

''I would recommend he not be allowed to sit as a member of the Republican party,'' Stevens said.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (OCT. 3) UPI - Cessna Aircraft Co. announced Wednesday it would build the world's fastest business jet - a plane that the company could operate at nearly the speed of sound.

''This is perhaps the greatest performance breakthrough in the history of business jet aviation,'' said Cessna Chairman Russell W. Meyer.

Cessna, a subsidiary of St. Louis-based General Dynamics Corp., announced plans for the all-new Citation X at a business aircraft trade show in New Orleans.

An equipped model would sell for $11.85 million. Initial deliveries are slated for nearly five years from now.

The Citation X would have a maximum operating speed of Mach 0.90, one-tenth point below the speed of sound.

Cessna said the Citation X would fly at Mach 0.86 at an altitude of 41,000 feet, meaning it could fly directly between Los Angeles and New York in about four hours.

Moreover, the plane - called a ''true intercontinental jet'' by Wichita, Kan.-based Cessna - could fly from New York to London in 6 1/2 hours.

Meyer said the Citation X also could be the most fuel-efficient business jet ever built, considering passenger miles flown for each gallon of fuel used.

''This unparalleled efficiency will save hundreds of thousands of dollars in jet fuel costs each year when compared with other business jets capable of flying similar missions at lower speeds,'' he said.

The plane is powered by twin turbofan engines, each generating 6,000 pounds of thrust.

The engine power, combined with the aircraft's wing design, would enable the Citation X to climb to 41,000 feet in 17 minutes, Cessna said.

The aircraft's cabin, measuring 633 cubic feet, would have a capacity for 10 passengers. It is five feet longer than the Citation III midsize business jet, Cessna said.

The cabin has standard or optional features, including: an executive corner office consisting of a fax machine, desk, and swivel chair; a formal galley with microwave oven; a large lavoratory; and a three- channel video system.

The aircraft's first flight is scheduled for March 1993. Deliveries are expected to start in June 1995.

Meyer said the Citation X would carry business aviation's first five- year warranty for airframe, engines and avionics.

Cessna reported second-quarter operating earnings of $22.6 million on sales of $175.2 million. The company said deliveries of its Citation business jets during the first half of 1990 represented more than 60 percent of the world's light and mid-size business jet sales.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - Two major business groups attacked the proposed $500 billion deficit reduction plan Wednesday and called for Congress to reject the package while a third group representing small businesses hailed the compromise effort.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the U.S. Business and Industrial Council, in separate announcements, criticized the plan for its measures to increases taxes to reduce the deficit.

''Our primary objection to this scheme s it disproportionate emphasis on higher taxes to reduce the deficit,'' said chamber President Richard Lesher. ''The negotiators used a variety of smoke and mirrors to make the ratio between spending cuts and tax increases appear to be more balanced than it is.''

Council President John Cregan, who represents 1,500 business leaders, meanwhile, called the last-minute proposal ''a bad prescription for America's ailing economy.''

''Given what we know about the history of tax increases and the impact they have on a sluggish economy, taxes should be exempted from this package,'' Cregan said.

But the Commission on Minority Business Development, urged congressional approval for the package, saying it is a ''real boon for small- and medium-sized businesses'' and a ''tremendous opportunity'' for the future of minority-owned buinesses.

''The new growth incentives in this package are the foundation of new job creation in America,'' said Joshua Smith, the commission's chairman.

The budget deal pledges to cut federal spending by $500 billion over five years. Cuts in fiscal 1991 were set at $40 billion. The package proposes tax incentives for investors in small businesses.

''It is small- and mid-sized businesses that will fuel American growth in the 90's,'' Smith said, adding about 2.3 million U.S. companies would qualify for the tax incentives.

Cregan praised the tax incentives for small business, but said the overall package offers little to reduce the cost of capital for businesses. ''This, in turn, will strnagle the economy and could very well hurl us into recession.''

Earlier in the day, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan endorsed the compromise package worked out by the White House and congressional leaders, saying failure to enact it would be a ''grave mistake.''

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - Two major business groups attacked the proposed $500 billion deficit reduction plan Wednesday and called for Congress to reject the package while a third group representing small businesses hailed the compromise effort.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the U.S. Business and Industrial Council, in separate announcements, criticized the plan for its measures to increases taxes to reduce the deficit.

''Our primary objection to this scheme is it's disproportionate emphasis on higher taxes to reduce the deficit,'' said chamber President Richard Lesher. ''The negotiators used a variety of smoke and mirrors to make the ratio between spending cuts and tax increases appear to be more balanced than it is.''

Council President John Cregan, who represents 1,500 business leaders, meanwhile, called the last-minute proposal ''a bad prescription for America's ailing economy.''

''Given what we know about the history of tax increases and the impact they have on a sluggish economy, taxes should be exempted from this package,'' Cregan said.

But the Commission on Minority Business Development, urged congressional approval for the package, saying it is a ''real boon for small- and medium-sized businesses'' and a ''tremendous opportunity'' for the future of minority-owned buinesses.

''The new growth incentives in this package are the foundation of new job creation in America,'' said Joshua Smith, the commission's chairman.

The budget deal pledges to cut federal spending by $500 billion over five years. Cuts in fiscal 1991 were set at $40 billion. The package proposes tax incentives for investors in small businesses.

''It is small- and mid-sized businesses that will fuel American growth in the '90s,'' Smith said, adding that about 2.3 million U.S. companies would qualify for the tax incentives.

Cregan praised the tax incentives for small business, but said the overall package offers little to reduce the cost of capital for businesses. ''This, in turn, will strangle the economy and could very well hurl us into recession.''

Earlier in the day, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan endorsed the compromise package worked out by the White House and congressional leaders, saying failure to enact it would be a ''grave mistake.''

BERLIN (OCT. 3) UPI - A night of revelry gave way to solemn ceremonies Wednesday as newly re-united Germans basked in congratulations from around the world and pondered a reminder that ''without the war started by Germany under (Adolf) Hitler, there never would have been division.''

The Day of Unity, a new national holiday, began with the tolling of church bells and, true to the sense of national order, a clean up by street sweepers machines of beer and champagne bottles and mountains of confetti and ribbon from all-night street celebrations.

One thousand doves were released in Bonn, the former West German capital which remains the administrative capital and seat of government although Berlin again became the official capital.

The government of Chancellor Helmut Kohl - the first leader of a united Germany since 1945 - moved quickly to exorcise ghosts of East Germany's communist past, arresting one of several top spies of the feared East German State Security Police known as Stasi.

Authorities arrested Werner Grossmann, the former foreign intelligence director of the Stasi, at his East Berlin apartment Wednesday afternoon, prosecutor Alexander von Stahl said.

Stahl said authorities had warrants for the arrest of two other top Stasi spies, but believed that the East Germans fled the country before unification.

Another day of ceremonies, concerts and festivals was warmed by unseasonably sunny weather throughout the new nation from Dresden and Leipzig and Halle in the east to Munich, Hamburg and Duesseldorf in the west.

But in Berlin, the mood of celebration was punctured by clashes between police and more than 10,000 Berlin anarchists, leftists and neo- Nazis.

The violence erupted around the vast Alexanderplatz Square at nightfall when an anti-unification march and rally ended. Chanting ''Shut your mouth Germany'' and ''Never again,'' thousands went on a rampage.

The mob threw gasoline bombs at riot police, overturned sausage and refreshment stands set up for unity celebrations and smashed store windows. Police then moved in with water cannons and tear gas. There were no immediate reports of casualties.

At midnight Tuesday, Germany became Europe's most populous nation with 78.4 million people. Thanks to the former West Germany, it also dominates Europe and rivals the United States and Japan in sheer wealth with an annual gross domestic product of $1.3 trillion.

Wednesday, political and other leaders attended an inter-religion ecumenical service at the Marienkirche in what had been East Berlin.

A solemn state ceremony later was led by German President Richard von Weizsaecker who called on Germans to ''learn to share'' after 40 bitter years of division.

''Now we are one people,'' von Weizsaecker said.

Constantly interrupted by applause, von Weizsaecker said all of Germany has for the first time found a ''lasting place in the circle of Western democracies,'' but reminded the nation of its past history.

''This time, history looked well upon us Germans,'' he said. ''None of us will forget that without the war started by Germany under Hitler, there never would have been division.''

The separate Germanys were created after Nazi Germany's surrender in World War II. As anti-communist fervor swept Eastern Europe last year, the rush to unification began with the fall of the communist government and the breaching of the Berlin Wall.

Kohl, 60, said reunification without war or force was ''unparalleled in European history.

''It is a joyful day for we Germans and a sign of hope for all Europeans,'' he said in a message to the nation published on newspaper front pages.

Kohl and his Christian Democratic Party are expected to be easy winners in the first all-German elections scheduled for Dec. 2.

About 50,000 members of the former East German ''People's Army'' was formally absorbed Wednesday into a 570,000-strong all-German armed forces at a ceremony and parade at Strausberg just outside Berlin.

Messages from world leaders poured in throughout the day, including a telephone call from President Bush to Kohl offering his ''heartiest congratulations.''

Across the Atlantic, Bush hosted a Rose Garden ceremony marking reunification with a German military band playing the national anthem and a Bonn official apologizing for Hitler's crimes.

''Forty-five years of conflict and confrontation between East and West are now behind us,'' said Bush. ''At long last the day has come. Germany is united. Germany is fully free.''

As expected, Israeli officials cautiously welcomed the re-unification of Germany, expressing hope the country would work diligently against anti-Semitism and remember its moral obligation to the Jewish people.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir told Helmut Richter, the German Embassy's charge d'affaires in Israel, the day was of major significance for the German people, but for Israel ''this is naturally a day of reflection.''

An estimated 6 million Jews were killed during the Holocaust.

NATO held a special meeting to mark German unification, a time of ''undiminished rejoicing,'' and thanked the Soviet Union for agreeing to a united Germany's membership in the alliance.

The unification was an incorporation of East Germany into the West German Federal Republic, putting West German law in force throughout the nation. The West German Parliament, expanded with East German members, will govern until all-German elections in December.

The economies of the two states were united July 1. The merger is already causing wrenching economic, political and social changes in both halves of the nation.

(OCT. 3) UPI - President Bush shrugged off the political pressures of the threat of war in the Persian Gulf and a deficit-induced economic recession. He told a news conference in Washington today that ''nobody said it would be easy '' but he added- quote- ''I don't feel embattled at all.'' Bush held the question-and-answer session for reporters of out-of-town news organizations.

NATO held a special meeting in Brussels today to mark German unification, offering special thanks to the Soviet Union for agreeing to a united Germany's membership in the Western alliance. NATO Secretary General Manfred Woerner said nearly half a century of confrontation and frustration has come to an end for NATO. .

Israeli officials cautiously welcomed the unification of Germany today, expressing hope it will work diligently against anti-Semitism and remember its moral obligation to the Jewish people. Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir told a German Embassy official in Jerusalem that today is of major significance for the German people, but for Israel it ''is naturally a day of reflection.''

Troops from the West African peace-keeping force in Liberia pushed back rebels today in a two-pronged offensive that used heavy artillery to pound rebel positions in the capital city. Diplomatic sources say rebels from Charles Taylor's National Patriotic Front of Liberia have been seen retreating up to five miles from Monrovia in the past 12 hours.

The surgeon general sharply criticized tobacco companies today for targeting cigarette sales at women. Surgeon General Antonia Novello told a Washington news conference that 126- thousand American women die each year from smoking-related disorders. A doctors' group called the tobacco companies ''irresponsible.''

NEW YORK (OCT. 3) UPI - A Bronx judge gave psychiatric experts for both the prosecution and defense six weeks to complete their examinations of the Cuban immigrant accused of setting the Happy Land Social Club fire that killed 87 people.

Richard Berne, defense attorney for 36-year-old Julio Gonzalez, filed a motion with the court allowing him to pursue an insanity defense to charges in the worst mass slaying in continental U.S. history.

The move clears the way for medical experts to interview the defendant on behalf of the prosecution.

Defense psychiatrists have already examined Gonzalez but have not completed their reports yet, Berne told Judge Burton Roberts before a courtroom packed with reporters and relatives of the victims in state Supreme Court in the Bronx.

Gonzalez, a Mariel boatlift refugee who speaks only Spanish, wore jeans, a gray striped shirt with a white collar, and sneakers. A woman sitting next to him translated throughout the 45-minute hearing.

Gonzalez is charged with 174 counts of murder, two each for the 87 people who died in the fire. Almost all of the dead were Latin American immigrants, many from Honduras, who had come to the club for a night of dancing to salsa and reggae.

Gonzalez allegedly dumped a dollar's worth of gasoline in the entranceway of the illegal social club in the rundown section of the Bronx after quarreling with his girlfriend.

The judge set a deadline of Nov. 15 for all medical experts to complete their evaluations, for the defense and prosecution to share the results, and for Burns to formally decide whether he would be employing an insanity defense at trial.

If Berne chooses such a defense, he, instead of the prosecution, assumes the burden of proving Gonzalez's lack of mental competency, while assistant district attorney Eric Warner would have to refute the claim beyond a reasonable doubt.

Berne said he is not admitting his client's guilt by filing an insanity defense, but was seeking to move the case, which has had several non-conclusive court dates so far, forward as quickly as possible.

That explanation did not sit well with the scores of people, some of whom carried pictures of relatives lost in the fire, who filled the courtroom and lined the hallway waiting to get in.

''It seems the lawyers are better off taking care of the criminals than the family of the victims,'' said Jerome Ford, 37, of the Bronx, who lost eight relatives in the blaze, including his wife's two brothers and a sister.

''We're getting angry (at these delays). We're going to pursue this until we get justice,'' said Aracely Sanchez, who lost seven relatives.

''It's the law that's dragging its feet. He didn't drag his feet when he went to buy gas to kill 87 people,'' she said.

NEW YORK (OCT. 3) UPI - A Lower East side man accused of murdering his Swiss girlfriend and boiling her body parts was found mentally fit to stand trial Wednesday and was granted a new lawyer.

Judge Robert Haft dismissed the previous court-appointed attorney for Daniel Rakowitz, citing repeated disagreements between lawyer and client over the defense's strategy.

The lawyer, Philip Edelbaum, urged Rakowitz to plead not criminally responsible by reason of mental disease or defect.

But the 31-year-old restaurant employee rejected the insanity defense and wanted his lawyer to argue he did not commit the 1989 murder.

''Mr. Rakowitz has a different and contrary view to how to handle this case. And in this state, the defendant has the right to decide what plea should be entered,'' Haft told Edelbaum.

During mental competency hearings this summer, Rakowitz insisted on testifying over Edelbaum's objections. His testimony touched on his feelings for his pet rooster and his desire to be tried by a jury of his peers - marijuana smokers.

As a result of those hearings, the judge ruled Wednesday that Rakowitz is mentally fit to stand trial.

The judge replaced Edelbaum with Manhattan attorney Franklyn Gould, who is known for his defense of Robert Wallace Jr., 22, convicted in 1988 of killing a man outside a Manhattan bar with a karate kick.

Rakowitz, an admitted marijuana dealer, is charged with second-degree murder in the death of Monika Beerle, 26, a modern dancer who lived with him in an apartment on the Lower East Side.

Police said he made 10 statements in which he admitted killing the young woman dismembering and boiling her body parts and feeding the remains to a pet cat.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - Administration officials said Wednesday a proposed $7.3 billion arms sale to Saudi Arabia is designed to help the desert kingdom slow down an invading army until U.S. and other reinforcements can arrive.

Testifying before House Foreign Affairs Committee members who were generally critical of the sale, the officials said even with the arms, Saudi Arabia would be unable to repel an attack by a well-armed aggressor such as Iraq.

''The fundamental reality is that there is a basic imbalance in population and resources between the Arabian Peninsula countries in which we have vital interests and their two larger, stronger and frequently hostile neighbors to the north,'' said Paul Wolfowitz, undersecretary of defense for policy.

''What the Saudis can do, given the will and necessary equipment, is to build a force that would be capable of doing so much damage in a defensive role that any aggressor would have to think very seriously about invading,'' he said.

''If deterrence fails, we would expect Saudi forces to slow and perhaps stop an attacking army long enough for reinforcements to arrive. The force we and the Saudis have in mind would then be able to operate effectively with U.S. and allied reinforcements.''

The administration first planned a $21 billion arms sale to Saudi Arabia in response to Iraq's invastion of Kuwait. But after a congressional uproar, the Pentagon decided to sell $7.3 billion of tanks and other high-tech weaponry this year and the rest in a second phase, expected in early 1991.

Several members of the committee's Middle East and Arms Control subcommittees were critical of the smaller sale, accusing the administration of continuing to use the Persian Gulf crisis as a cover for the deal.

Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., Mel Levine, D-Calif., and Larry Smith, D- Fla., led the criticism, saying the tanks in the deal could not be used during the current crisis because they would take years to be delivered, and charging that the sale would erase Israel's qualitative edge in weaponry in the Middle East.

''Is it worth substantially altering the landscape of the Middle East to provide two more days worth of defense capability (for Saudi Arabia)?'' Levine said in an interview. ''Nobody is suggesting that this will obviate the necessity for the United States to come to Saudi Arabia's defense.''

Wolfowitz defended the decision to sell Saudi Arabia the 150 M-1A2 tanks, saying in the early days of Operation Desert Shield there was ''nothing on the ground'' that could protect American troops from Iraqi tanks.

The decision to sell the tanks now, he said, was made in part because increasing current production of the tanks would lower their price - saving money for U.S. forces and possibly attracting more potential buyers.

Wolfowitz and Reginald Bartholomew, undersecretary of state for internal security affairs, also both maintained that the sales would not harm Israel.

''A secure Saudi Arabia is in Israel's best interest,'' Wolfowitz said.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (OCT. 3) UPI - The shuttle Discovery's crew flew to Florida Wednesday for blastoff Saturday on a key flight to fire the European Ulysses probe over the poles of the sun in NASA's latest bid to end a five-month launch drought.

''We're optimistic that come Saturday we're going to have a good solid space shuttle (flight) with Discovery,'' commander Richard ''Dick'' Richards told reporters at the Kennedy Space Center landing strip.

''Our expectations are high that we've got a tight vehicle and we're going to be ready to go on Saturday and get Ulysses down the road (on) its five-year journey toward the sun.''

Richards, 44, co-pilot Robert Cabana, 41, flight engineer William Shepherd, 41 Bruce Melnick, 40, and Thomas Akers, 39, arrived in Florida about 12 hours after Discovery's countdown began at launch pad 39B.

''It's been a long dry spell. We haven't launched since April and that's our business, launching,'' said NASA test director Terry Willingham. ''We're looking forward to it, to have another launch here. I think we're all excited.''

Discovery's payload bay doors were closed for flight Wednesday and engineers started the ship's intricate countdown on time at 3:30 a.m. EDT. Willingham said no technical problems were under discussion.

''We're looking very smooth at this point,'' he said. ''We got the payload bay doors closed for flight this morning, we've got the aft (engine room) closed out for flight, so everything's on schedule. We're looking real good.''

With a 70 percent chance of good weather expected, Discovery is scheduled to blast off at 7:35 a.m. Saturday to kick off a four-day mission, NASA's first since April 24 because of fuel leaks that grounded the shuttles Columbia and Atlantis four times in June, July and September.

Engineers have no reason to suspect any fuel leaks aboard Discovery and Willingham said the launch team is optimistic the $2 billion spaceplane will get through fuel loading Friday night without any problems.

''I'm very confident,'' he said. ''I don't see at this point any problems with hydrogen leaks.''

Final clearance to launch will depend not only on a leak-free fueling operation Friday, but also on permission from a federal judge in Washington.

The goal of the 36th shuttle mission is the launch of the nuclear- powered Ulysses probe on a five-year $750 million voyage over the poles of the sun.

Ulysses, built by the European Space Agency, is equipped with a ''radioisotope thermoelectric generator,'' or RTG, a compact electrical power plant loaded with 24 pounds of highly toxied plutonium 238 dioxide.

Anti-nuclear activists asked U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch on Friday to block Discovery's launch, claiming NASA underestimated the odds of a radiation release in the event of a launch catastrophe. They say NASA should equip Ulysses with a solar power system, regardless of how long that might delay the flight.

But in court papers filed Tuesday, NASA called the concerns ''insignificant or misplaced'' and said it was ''critical that the launch proceed as planned since to delay now may result in the loss of an important and irreplaceable scientific opportunity.''

A hearing is scheduled Thursday in Washington and a decision is expected Friday, the same day activists plan to mount a protest at the Kennedy Space Center.

But a similar legal effort to ground NASA's Galileo Jupiter probe failed last year and agency officials were confident the court would dismiss the action this time around, clearing the way for launch.

UNITED NATIONS (OCT. 3) UPI - China and Singapore established diplomatic relations Wednesday, ending years of difficult political ties that never interfered with a flourishing trade and cultural exchange between the two countries.

The two countries' foreign ministers issued a joint communique at U.N. headquarters announcing the immediate setting up of diplomatic ties based on the ''five principles of peaceful coexistence'' and the U.N. Charter.

The communique said the two sides agreed to ''exchange ambassadors and provide each other with facilities for the functionning of diplomatic missions.''

It was signed by China's Qian Qichen and Singapore's Wong Kan Seng, both of whom met in New York while attending the U.N. General Assembly session.

The five principles mentioned in the communique - the pillar of China's international relations - involve mutual respect for sovereignty and territorial integrity, mutual non-aggression, non interference in each other's internal affairs, equality and mutual benefit, and peaceful coexistence.

Wednesday's announcement culminated months of work between the two governments to restore ties that were severed following the Chinese- supported coup attempt in Jakarta in 1965.

Chinese Prime Minister Li Peng went to Singapore in August in the first meeting by a senior Chinese leader in more than a decade and held extensive talks with the island republic's longtime prime minister, Lee Kuan Yew.

Li Peng all but set a date for establishment of full diplomatic ties, pledging to ''enhance friendship and deepen understanding and cooperation'' between the two nations.

''This is with a view to further opening up a future of better and more comprehensive relations between China and Singapore,'' Li said at the time.

Singapore and the southeast Asian sultanate of Brunei have held back from exchanging ambassadors with China out of deference to Indonesia, which cut ties in 1967 after accusing China of supporting an abortive communist coup attempt in 1965.

Jakarta restored ties during Li Peng's August visit to Indonesia.

Lee Kuan Yew has said repeatedly that Singapore would establish full ties with Beijing soon after Jakarta did so, but told Li Peng in August that the lack of diplomatic ties had not prevented the two countries from enjoying extensive cooperation.

China and Singapore have enjoyed a decade of flourishing trade and cultural relations despite the lack of formal ties. More than one-fourth of Singapore's 2.7 million citizens claim Chinese ancestry and the Mandarin and Cantonese dialects are widely spoken.

Singapore is China's fifth-largest export market and bilateral trade in 1989 totaled $3.2 billion, more than five times the figure in 1980.

MANAGUA, NICARAGUA (OCT. 3) UPI - At least four ex-Contra rebels died in a clash with police after more than 200 Contras, some of them reportedly armed, occupied a government farm cooperative in a central village, officials said Wednesday.

Interior Ministry spokesman Frank Cesar said nine other Contras and one police officer were injured in the confrontation, which took place Tuesday evening in Waslala, a small farm community about 130 miles northeast of Managua.

Witnesses said between 200 and 300 Contras converged on the town Sunday and Monday, occupying government buildings and demanding they be given land on the cooperative.

The Contras, who completed a disarmament process in June after agreeing to end their nine-year-long civil war, have been awaiting long- delayed government promises to provide them with land and resources to help ease their return to civilian life.

Tuesday, one of the Contra leaders, Pepe Matus, warned that if something was not done quickly to ease the plight of the former U.S.- backed rebels, violence would continue to escalate.

The latest attack was the second in as many weeks. On Sept. 24, five people were killed in a similar confrontation in San Juan del Rio Coco, about 50 miles west of Waslala. That attack also occurred when the former rebels occupied a farm cooperative and were repelled by Sandinista farm workers. All five of those killed were Contras or civilian Contra supporters.

''If the government does not respond soon to the land problem, we are going to have social chaos,'' Matus said Tuesday. ''The incident in San Juan del Rio Coco is lamentable, and we hope it is not repeated.''

Cesar, the government spokesman, said four people were confirmed dead in Tuesday's incident, although missionary workers in Waslala said 10 people had been killed, including two police officers. Cesar said there was no confirmed information that the Contras were armed.

He said that in addition to occupying the land, the rebels were demanding the disarmament of the civilians in the area. The Interior Ministry has been gathering the thousands of weapons that the Sandinistas distributed to civilians during the war, but Cesar admitted Wednesday, ''It is no easy task. It takes time.''

Enrique Blandon, a pro-Sandinista priest who directs the Catholic mission in Waslala, said he and several other missionaries were forced out of the town on Monday by the Contras.

''They were armed with pistols, machetes, clubs and some rifles,'' Blandon said, adding that the rebels raided local ranches, stealing live chickens and food.

Blandon said the rebels were accompanied by right-wing members of President

Violeta Chamorro's political party, the National Oppposition Union.

''We are urging the police and army to come in and restore order and protect us,'' he said.

''The government urgently has to look for land for (the Contras) other than on the cooperatives,'' said Ubaldo Geruasoni, an Italian missionary worker.

The government has provided thousands of acres of land to the Contra leadership, and $47 million in U.S. aid was doled out for the disarmament process and support of the Contras, although much of it went to the United Nations and Organization of American States to pay for the disarmament verification.

The Contras have argued that they have not received near enough land to provide for the more than 20,000 former rebels and their families.

''The government does not have the desire to participate in taking care of the former Contras,'' Matus said.

He said the Contra leadership does not support the forced seizure of land, but that he has no control over hungry Contras with no other alternatives.

Daniel Nunez, leader of the Sandinista-affiliated National Union of Farmers and Ranchers, backed Matus's pleas.

''If we don't resolve the land problems, we are going to have another war,'' Nunez said, adding that both his organization and the Contras are made up of peasants. ''We have to work together and present a common front.''

Nunez and Matus both called on the government to do away with the present, socialist system of farming and divide the cooperatives among all the peasants - Sandinistas, Contras and others.

''It is an explosive situation, not only because of the mass of former Contras but because of the mass of unemployed Sandinista farmworkers,'' said Edgar Garcia, chief of the Sandinista Association of Farmworkers.

ALESSANDRIA, Italy (OCT. 3) UPI - A tourist bus carrying 50 elderly passengers home from a seaside holiday crashed through a bridge guardrail Wednesday and plunged 130 feet into a mountain stream. Police said they feared 30 of those aboard were killed.

Most of the other passengers were injured, many seriously, police said.

The accident took place around 5:30 p.m. on the Genoa-Alessandria superhighway near Ovada, midway between the two northern Italian cities.

Police said heavy rain and drifting fog probably contributed to the accident and hampered rescue operations in the hills behind the Ligurian riviera in northwestern Italy.

The passengers had been on holiday at the beach resort of Arenzano, 12 miles west of Genoa. The bus was taking them home to Gravellona Toce, near the shores of Lake Maggiore, 50 miles northwest of Milan.

Police said as the bus came out of a tunnel and started crossing the 130-foot-high bridge over the Stura stream it skidded on the rain-slick highway and crashed through the right-hand guard rail.

BELGRADE, YUGOSLAVIA (OCT. 3) UPI - Serbian opposition parties said Wednesday they will boycott the republic's first multi-party polls in 45 years unless the ruling communists meet their demands for changes in an election law adopted last week.

The parties called on the communists, who in July renamed their organization the Socialist Party of Serbia, to move the polls now scheduled for Dec. 9 back to Dec. 27 to allow sufficient time for negotiations and enactment of a new election statute.

They gave the Serbian government of President Slobodan Milosevic seven days in which to open ''round-table talks.''

The six major opposition parties, joined by seven smaller groups, reiterated at a news conference that they believe an election law adopted Friday by the communist-controlled Serbian Assembly was designed to preserve the ruling party's grip on power.

Opposition leaders said they want a new law guaranteeing equal access and coverage on Serbian radio and television, which are firmly in the control of the communists.

The leaders also repeated demands for a two-month-long campaign and reforms ensuring that the election results cannot be rigged in the communists' favor.

Unless the demands are met, the opposition parties will boycott the elections, they said in a prepared statement.

''The boycott is the ultimate means by which the united Serbian opposition is trying to organize really free and fair elections, and by this we are giving the last chance to the communists to re-examine their stand,'' said Vuk Draskovic, president of the nationalist Serbian Renewal Movement, regarded as the strongest Serbian opposition group.

Serbian opposition parties first announced in August that they were considering boycotting the polls unless changes were made to a draft election law.

The communists, in approving the election statute last Friday, amended several provisions to partially meet some opposition concerns, including allowing the parties of all candidates to have one representative on each local election commission.

However, the opposition complained that the election machinery would remain overwhelmingly dominated by communist apparatchiks.

Milosevic was forced to agree to multi-party assembly polls following the defeat of communists in April by nationalist parties in the Croatian and Slovenian republics in the first free elections held in Yugoslavia since the communist takeover at the end of World War II in 1945.

However, he delayed announcing a poll date until the adoption last Friday of a new Serbian constitution that eliminates virtually all autonomy for the province of Kosovo, the 1.7 million-strong ethnic Albanian majority of which is agitating for self-rule.

With Kosovo a major election issue, the constitution was designed to appeal to Serbian nationalists, for whose votes the communists would be competing with opposition parties.

Yugoslavia's 8.5 million Serbs, who constitute the nation's majority but number only 200,000 in Kosovo, cherish the province with near- fanatical devotion as the ''cradle'' of their centuries-old Orthodox religion and culture.

Serbia suspended the provincial government on July 5 and took control of Kosovo after ethnic Albanian lawmakers declared it Yugoslavia's seventh republic. Large numbers of ethnic Albanians have been arrested since then.

The Serbian opposition also favors a harsh approach to the Kosovo issue, but wanted the adoption of a new constitution left until the election of a multi-party Serbian Assembly.

EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA (OCT. 3) UPI - Saudi Arabia, swamped with volunteers in case of war with Iraq, has begun graduating the first of its new reservists with a warning Wednesday that if Iraq wants war the desert kingdom is ready.

Prince Mohammed bin Fahd bin Abdul Aziz, son of King Fahd and governor of the eastern district, told over 450 new recruits who were the first to graduate in his province that ''we are ready to take them on.''

Othman Alkharaz,, a 26-year-old computer scientist from Dammam, said the prince's address centered on the desire to avoid war in the region because ''war is destructive.''

''If the Iraqis insist on this war, what he said was 'we are ready to take them on.'''

The prince, who was flanked by his 11-year old son wearing a youngster's set of camouflage clothing, told reporters in brief remarks in English that the recruits ''want to defend their country. They are loyal to the government and support the government in any decision in any matter. We have already now more volunteers than we can handle.''

''There has to be peace in the region. Everybody is searching for that peace. I hope it works because chaos can happen,'' he added.

The first class graduated a day earlier in a full-blown military ceremony at a southwestern training center. In the crowd at both locations were professionals and students.

Another 1,000 reservists will start their training in the eastern region next week.

If called to active duty, they would provide support services for front-line combat units, participate in civil defense and help keep order in urban areas.

Mansuer Al Obaid, a 43-year-old translator by profession, said that after a month of training ''now we feel that we are at last soldiers.''

Obaid and the others wore khaki uniforms devoid of any badge of rank and were led by regular army drill sergeants in their training.

''I am 43 but I feel 25, very strong, very young.'' Obaid said proudly.

Medical student Mohammed al Ghandi was able to work in his military training - two hours in the morning and two at night - in between classes at King Faisal University. He said the students studied how to protect themselves against chemical weapons, learned how to use small arms and rifles and took physical training.

At the graduation exercizes in the southwest region, watched by Prince Sultan, the defense minister, a number of senior educators from Moslem universities and jurists were trained.

The two holiest shrines in the Moslem world are in Saudi Arabia, and the King is formally referred to as the keeper of the two holy mosques at Mecca and Medina. Religion played a strong role in the remarks of many of the educators who enlisted in the reserves.

Speaking before some of the more modern weaponry in the Saudi arsenal, Dr. Abdulla Al Musih, a college dean, said, ''I volunteered because of my religion ... because I am contributing to the defense of my country. Our faith told us to come here to fight for our religion and our country.''

A number of the sons of Saudis who had signed up for the reserves also took training, but were not given any weapons courses, said Maj. Gen. Mohammed Almohaya, commander of the training facility. The youngest at Wednesday's nights ceremony was 14, and a 13-year-old joined his father at Tuesday's graduation.

Wednesday night's graduation, at which each new reservist got a certificate, was conducted on a dusty soccer field. Tuesday's was held on an asphault rectangle a half-mile long with regular troops standing opposite the reservists on a base in a 9,000-foot-high mountain valley.

The new reservists all took on their new duties below the green Saudi flag that bears the major tenet of the Moslem world: ''There is no God but one God and Mohammed is his prophet.''

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - Fed up with higher medical costs and lower benefits, thousands of workers around the country staged demonstrations Wednesday to demand national health care reform.

''We're trying to demonstrate that workers care very deeply about the health care system in this country,'' said Steve Rosenthal, spokesman for Jobs With Justice, a national coalition of labor union, civil rights, womens' and environmentalist groups that organized the actions.

Rosenthal said ''health care action day'' events, from walkouts to sticker wearing, were planned at 50,000 work locations ''to send a message to our employers that until there's a national solution to this national crisis they are still responsible for the health care of ourselves and our families.''

Many of the actions sought to highlight that 37 million Americans have no health insurance.

''The theme of our rally is 'Who Killed Linda Williams,''' said Ellen Bravo, executive director of the Milwaukee clerical employee group ''9to5'' that staged a health care reform demonstration at a downtown federal building.

Divorced and left with two children to support, Williams worked 45 hours a week at three part-time jobs, none providing health insurance, according to Bravo. In 1987, Williams needed triple bypass heart surgery, but without insurance no hospital would admit her until her plight was publicized.

After the operation, Williams got a full-time job with health insurance to support her family and a night job to pay off more than $60,000 in uninsured medical bills. The toll was a fatal heart attack.

''She died at work ... the day before her 47th birthday,'' said Bravo. ''She still owed $20,000, maybe more,'' in medical bills.

Bravo called Williams' tragedy ''the typical story of many women. ... I feel employers give health insurance to women as if they all have a spouse who is insured,'' she said.

In Norfolk, Va., Boilermakers Local 684 led ''several hundred'' union workers in a one-day work stoppage at the Norfolk Shipbuilding and Drydock Co. to protest ''declining health benefits and increasing costs to employees for their co-payments,'' said Boilermakers spokesman Robert Henrich.

''It's our No. 1 issue with Norshipco in our bargaining and we've been working without a contract since 1988,'' Henrich said. ''It's getting to the point that it could very well be a week's salary just to cover our co-payments for health care.''

In New Brunswick, N.J., New Jersey Citizen Action, a coalition of community, labor and environmental groups, held a lunchtime picket by 25 members in front of a McDonald's restaurant.

''McDonalds was chosen as the site because they are one of the largest employers in the country not to provide health care benefits to their employees,'' said Carlton Levine, a spokesman for the group. ''As the largest fast-food chain, they are representative of the entire industry in which almost no health benefits are offered.''

Several other groups also held a rally outside the office of Sen. Bill Bradley D-N.J., in Union to kick off a petition drive calling for Congress to enact legislation creating a national health program.

Rosenthal said major ''health care action day'' events were also planned in New York, where Mayor David Dinkins arranged to address an evening health care reform rally, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, San Francisco, and Salem, Ore. as well as smaller events in other cities and towns.

The Health Insurance Association of America, which represents 320 health insurance companies, issued a statement applauding the Jobs With Justice actions and other ''private/public'' efforts ''to make sure that every American can obtain affordable, high quality health care.''

Of the 37 million Americans with no health insurance, three of four are working people and their families, according to Rosenthal. An additional 50 million are ''underinsured,'' he said.

''The biggest problem is the spiraling cost'' of health insurance, he said. ''Those employers who provide the benefits are trying to shift the costs from themselves to the workers.

''If you're a public worker in Mississippi who's making $9,000 a year and you're paying $2,000 of that annually for your health care (insurance) for your family, you don't have to be a mathematician to figure out that you just can't survive on that,'' Rosenthal said.

(OCT. 3) UPI - Crude oil prices rebounded more than $3 a barrel Wednesday, regaining much of a two-day loss in which crude lost 14 percent of its value after an industry survey showed a big drop in inventories for the third consecutive week.

The U.S. benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for November delivery ended at $37.32 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange, up $3.37 on the day.

WTI had fallen $5.56 a barrel - 14.1 percent - in trading Monday and Tuesday after more conciliatory statements by President Bush and Iraqi President Saddam Hussein raised hopes of a diplomatic settlement of the Persian Gulf crisis.

WTI opened 70 cents higher on the Merc after the American Petroleum Institute's weekly survey released late Tuesday showed U.S. crude inventories dropped 9.4 million barrels last week as a result of declining imports after having fallen a cumulative 10.4 million barrels in the prior two weeks.

''The higher opening was associated with the API report,'' said Robert Baker, senior energy analyst with Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. in New York.

The analyst said he was not aware of any particular news from the Middle East that would further support a move to higher prices.

Many buyers left the market during the two-day selling binge Monday and Tuesday, said Mary Haskins of PaineWebber Inc. in New York.

''After last night's API stats, an awful lot of them came back into the market '' the trader said.

In response to the surge in oil prices, stock prices fell toward the end of the day with the Dow Jones industrial average closing down 15.84 points on the New York Stock Exchange.

Wednesday's settlement represented a recovery of about 50 percent of the market's losses from WTI's Tuesday low of $33.85 a barrel and thus represented a technically sound move up, Haskins said. WTI set a record Merc high of $40.10 a barrel last Thursday.

With no news from the Persian Gulf, the market is going to try and find a technical equilibrium, she said.

Prices are remaining this high because ''there is still the perception war is a good possibility,'' she said.

Ray Mazzeo of Shearson Lehman Hutton's International Energy Desk in New York said news reports that foreign ministers at the United Nations had indicated to Secretary of State James Baker their countries would not oppose U.S. military action against Iraq may be providing some support to the market.

''The situation is still very tense,'' Mazzeo said.

The API report showed that U.S. crude inventories are still 21.3 million barrels above last year's level, but nearly half of the U.S. supply buffer had been lost in the last two weeks.

''We could erase (the remainder) in two weeks' time,'' Mazzeo said.

U.S. stocks had stayed 40 million to 50 million barrels above last year until mid-September, when the effects began to be felt of Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait and the resulting U.N. embargo on exports of the two nations ordered four days later. The embargo has resulted in a global shortfall of about 1.5 million barrels a day.

Despite rocketing crude prices, the United States and other oil- consuming industrialized nations have been reluctant to tap their strategic reserves while large commercial stocks existed.

On the Merc, unleaded gasoline for November delivery climbed 6.21 cents to 93.14 cents a gallon and November-delivery home heating oil rocketed 7.38 cents to 99.41 cents a gallon.

On the European spot market, where crude is bought and sold for cash, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent was up $1 a barrel at midday to $36.20 a barrel, after falling $5.60 - or 13.7 percent - in the prior two days.

The United Arab Emirates' Dubai Light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East - also rose $1 to stand at $31.80 a barrel at midday. Dubai Light had declined $4.55, a 12.8 percent decline, Monday and Tuesday.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, prompt-delivery WTI was up $1.65 to $35.60 a barrel.

Sun Co., based in Radnor, Pa., and Marathon Oil Co., USX Corp.'s Findlay, Ohio-based unit, raised the posted price they will pay for crude at the wellhead by $3.25 a barrel to $36 a barrel for WTI, more than eliminating Tuesday's $3 reduction.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - A device may be able to identify mechanical heart valves in danger of failing, a study showed Wednesday, but the government wants more tests before it is approved for that use.

In the study published in the American Journal of Cardiology, developers of the Valve-Tracker Two said their computerized, accoustical device may offer a way to detect recipients of Bjork-Shiley heart valves that are at high risk of failure.

About 86,000 people were implanted with the Bjork-Shiley ''convexo- concave'' heart valve, which was voluntarily withdrawn from the market in 1986 - five years after the first reports of life-threatening valve fractures surfaced.

At least 50,000 people worldwide still have the valves in their chests, including about 20,000 in the United States. At least 250 people have died of fractured valves, although consumer groups estimate the toll may be as high as 750 because not all the deaths have been reported to officials.

In August, Shiley Inc. of Irvine, Calif., a subsidiary of Pfizer Inc., of New York, announced plans to notify all patients who have the devices in their chests of possible dangers. The company had previously only sent warning letters to surgeons who implanted the devices.

Currently, no methods are available to doctors to test valve recipients to see if their valves have a closure pattern that Pfizer engineers say causes the devices to fail.

The Food and Drug Administration has refused to approve a request by Gerald Kien, of Barrington, Ill., developer of the Valve-Tracker Two, to market his device for screening patients with potentially defective Bjork-Shiley valves, FDA spokeswoman Susan Cruzan said.

The agency wanted Kien to conduct further tests on patients to prove that the device, which uses a highly sensitive microphone to record the valve's sound pattern, is an accurate predictor of valve failure.

In an interview with The Wall Street Journal, Kien said it would be ''impossible'' to determine the accuracy of his device in that fashion because it would involve waiting for patients with defective valves to die or undergo open heart surgery.

However, Cruzan said the agency fears if the Valve-Tracker Two is approved before its effectiveness is proven, doctors needlessly may conduct surgery on patients with good heart valves. The risk of dying from the open heart surgery required to remove the valve is about 5 percent, compared to an annual death risk of about .02 percent to 1.1 percent of keeping the old valve in place.

''If I had a Bjork-Shiley valve, I'd sure as hell want the thing recorded'' on the Valve-Tracker Two,'' Richard Donnerstein, a cardiologist at the University of Arizona, told The Wall Street Journal. Donnerstein said results of the new scientific study will probably prompt many heart doctors to want to use the device as a way of double- checking the status of patients with the valves.

Valve-Tracker Two is already approved for tracing abnormal blood flow through the heart. Doctors are allowed to use FDA-approved devices for any use they deem fit, but many insurers refuse to pay for procedures involving devices used outside their FDA-authorized purpose.

In the study, which tested the Valve-Tracker Two on a heart simulator in an FDA laboratory, Kien's team found normal valves made a short, sharp noise when closing, while ones with the closure defect made a longer, duller sound. Also, a small test of 36 patients with potentially defective Bjork-Shiley heart valves found that all of their valves sounded like they were functioning normally.

FDA officials said Pfizer is currently working on its own methods of detecting the defective heart valves in patients.

BOGOTA, COLOMBIA (OCT. 3) UPI - A recent explosion at a cocaine laboratory suggests the intensifying war against the drug cartels is driving production from large jungle complexes to smaller operations in the cities, a military leader said Wednesday.

A house containing what appeared to be a cocaine production facility exploded Tuesday in the city of Medellin, killing nine people, five of them children.

Officials said volatile chemicals needed to produce cocaine and dynamite were stored in the house and exploded, apparently by accident, officials said.

The laboratory was at least the third found recently in Medellin, the headquarters city of a cartel of cocaine traffickers 160 miles northwest of Bogota.

Gen. Harold Bedoya, commander of the army's 4th Brigade in Medellin, said anti-drug operations in rural areas of the region may be driving the laboratories into the cities.

''This is a hypothesis that because of the number of operations being carried out by the National Police and the army these laboratories have been moved to cities as small laboratories,'' Bedoya told a Bogota radio station.

''Then instead of producing 1,000 kilos, 1500 kilos (2,200-3,300 pounds) in a big laboratory they are producing 10 kilos (22 pounds) in a house per week.''

Cocaine in recent years has been made mostly in large complexes hidden in the Colombian jungle. From 1987 until June 1990, police and the armed forces raided 3,214 cocaine production facilities, according to government figures.

The explosion also wounded 57 people, 12 of them seriously, and destroyed six houses.

Bedoya also said another theory is that the house was being used to store chemicals for cocaine laboratories elsewhere.

The general refused comment on whether the explosion could suggest a war between the Cali and Medellin cocaine cartels.

The war of bombs and murders between the rival cartels for control of the U.S. market was touched off Jan. 13, 1988, when the Cali cartel bombed a building in Medellin where kingpin Pablo Escobar was staying. He was not hurt.

A city spokesman said officials believe Tuesday's explosion was accidental. Bedoya said the cause remains under investigation.

Also Wednesday, the government admitted for the first time Wednesday the Medellin cartel of cocaine traffickers kidnapped and was holding seven journalists, including the daughter of a former president.

A statement from the National Security Council said there was sufficient evidence to believe the cartel had kidnapped Diana Turbay de Uribe, daughter of former President Julio Turbay, and Francisco Santos, an editor El Tiempo newspaper and son of publisher Hernando Santos, along with five other journalists.

''In accordance with the information held in reserve by security agencies, there are sufficient indications showing a sector of the so- called Medellin cartel is responsible for the disappearance of the journalists,'' the statement said.

The administration of President Cesar Gaviria had stated previously it did not have enough evidence to indicate the journalists were being held by the cartel despite phone calls to El Tiempo. The caller to the newspaper said Santos, Turbay and the others were being held by The Extraditables, the terror squad associated with the Medellin cartel.

The Security Council statement gave no further details. But it also steps were being taken to halt a wave of kidnappings that have struck Colombia recently, particularly in the city of Medellin.

Santos was kidnapped Sept. 19 by armed men who stopped his armored vehicle and killed his bodyguard in Bogota. Turbay, owner of a television news program and a magazine, and five other journalists and cameramen have been missing since Aug. 30 when they left Bogota to interview the leader of a leftist guerrilla group.

BELGRADE, YUGOSLAVIA (OCT. 3) UPI - Serbian-majority towns in Croatia remained tense but calm Wednesday after a night of anti-Croatian attacks and the federal government revealed that Serbs were in possession of large amounts of stolen explosives, weapons and ammunition.

The Croatian Interior Ministry, implementing federal orders to take steps to de-escalate tensions between Yugoslavia's main ethnic groups, announced the completion of withdrawals from Serbian enclaves of heavily armed special paramilitary police.

Milan Brezak, a ministry undersecretary, said in the Croatian capital of Zagreb that authorities were also to free the last 21 Serbs out of hundreds arrested in three days of clashes with Croatian police that began Friday over transfers of police reservists' arms out of five Serbian-dominated towns.

The transfers ignited Serbian fears of persecution by the ruling Croatian Democratic Union that have been fanned for months by Serbian politicians, particularly the ruling communists in Serbia, who have been exploiting nationalist feelings in a bid to survive Dec. 9 multi-party assembly polls in Yugoslavia's largest republic.

Fueling the frictions has been belligerent anti-Serbian rhetoric by Croatian President Franjo Tudjman's party, swept to power on a wave of Croatian nationalism in April in the republic's first free assembly elections since the end of World War II in 1945.

Serbian vigilantes maintained road and rail blockades around the town of Knin, the headquarters of the Serbian National Council, which on Monday announced it was responding to alleged ''state terror'' by assuming political control of enclaves inhabited by Croatia's 600,000 minority Serbs.

The council, which in August won recognition as the main representative of Serbs in Croatia, had said it would comply with federal orders to withdraw the vigilantes and barricades once the Croatian government pulled its paramilitary police out of Serbian towns and freed all Serbs from custody.

Local officials and witnesses reported calm in all Serbian areas of Croatia following a night of anti-Croatian incidents. They included several attacks on Croatian-owned businesses and private properties in Knin, 310 miles southwest of Belgrade, where Serbs constitute 88 percent of the 50,000 residents.

State-run Zagreb Radio also reported that a Croatian was badly wounded by knife-wielding Serbs, who overturned his car after he hit a Serbian demonstrator during an anti-Croatian rally in the town of Podravska Slatina, located near the Hungarian border.

In another incident near Knin, two police officers from a nearby town were shot and wounded Tuesday night at a roadblock after refusing to surrender their arms to Serbian vigilantes, local officials said.

Meanwhile, in Belgrade, federal Assistant Interior Minister Petar Misovic told a parliamentary committee that tensions in Croatia had brought Serbian-dominated areas ''to the brink of an armed uprising and direct conflicts between the Serbian population and the (Croatian) police force.''

He said Serbs who raided police stations during weekend disturbances in Petrinja, Glina, Dvor Na Uni and Obrovac had stolen 200 rifles, 150 pistols, 23 machineguns, and 110,000 rounds of ammunition.

Serbs in Knin, he said, had heisted 900 pounds of explosives from a local mine.

Tudjman's government on Tuesday offered amnesty to anyone who surrendered stolen weapons.

Misovic confirmed that three police officers - including the two injured Tuesday night - had been wounded since Friday.

Tudjman contends Serbia's communist regime is instigating Serbs in Croatia in a plan to topple his government and defeat its proposal to convert the loose Yugoslav federation of six republics of 23 million people into a confederation of independent states.

Croatians and other minorities fear Serbian domination following the demise earlier this year of strong national communist rule.

Serbian communists, casting themselves as the protectors of Serbs everywhere, back a federal system, in the absense of which they want to absorb Serbian areas now outside their borders.

The dispute has compounded ethnic rivalries, particularly between the 4.6 million Roman Catholic Croats, most of whom live in Croatia, and Yugoslavia's 8.5 million-strong Orthodox Serbian majority, the bulk of which resides in Serbia.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - The painless confirmation of President Bush's first nominee to the Supreme Court seemed to transform the Senate's power to give its advice and consent into the power to join a chorus of affirmation.

But some prominent Democrats are warning that the smooth ride enjoyed by New Hampshire jurist David Souter will not extend to future Bush selections for the high court.

The Senate voted 90-9 Tuesday to confirm Souter. Five days earlier, the Judiciary Committee had endorsed the nomination 13-1. Souter is slated to be sworn in next Tuesday as the 105th member in the court's history.

The chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., voted for Souter in the committee and on the floor. But Biden said, ''I want to express the hope that the administration will not learn the wrong lesson'' from such a lopsided vote.

''Our overwhelming approval, in my view, is not a sign that the Senate intends to be lax about exercising its advice-and-consent power or intends to use that power only to screen out extremist nominees,'' Biden said. ''Rather, it is a sign that we take this power seriously and that we intend to exercise it responsibly. And, in doing so, Judge Souter falls within the sphere of candidates acceptable to the Senate.''

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., the only member of the Judiciary Committee to vote against confirmation, was Souter's most outspoken opponent. With his eye on future nominees, Kennedy said, ''No president has a blank check in appointing members to the Supreme Court.''

Democrats are frustrated at the Supreme Court's conservative drift in the past decade. Souter, 51, was the eighth straight justice nominated by a Republican president and, if he matches the tenure of the man he replaces, 34-year court veteran William Brennan, he will serve on the high court until 2024.

Bush could have several Supreme Court vacancies to fill before his current term ends in January 1993. Four members of the court are 70 years old or older: Thurgood Marshall, 82, Harry Blackmun, 81, Byron White, 73, and John Paul Stevens, 70.

Marshall, Blackmun and Stevens make up the remainder of the court's liberal wing. Marshall, the court's only black member, was chosen by President Lyndon Johnson. Blackmun was a nominee of Richard Nixon and Stevens was selected by Gerald Ford. White, the senior justice in terms of service, was named to the bench by John F. Kennedy.

As part of the Constitution's checks and balances among the three branches of government, the president nominates members of the Supreme Court, but the Senate - using its power to advise and consent - must confirm the lifetime appointment by majority vote.

Souter avoided making the mistakes made in 1987 by Robert Bork, President Ronald Reagan's controversial conservative Supreme Court nominee. While Bork angered his foes during his confirmation hearings and had a record that armed his opponents, Souter, with a virtually barren judicial record, disarmed potential opponents with a charming, thoughtful and humble peformance.

He eluded the wrath of the broad coalition of liberal interest groups that rallied against Bork by voicing a moderate judicial philosophy, although by leaving his views on abortion a mystery he triggered the opposition of many women's groups.

Biden emphasized that extremism is not the only reason to vote against a nominee. He said a nominee would be ''unacceptable'' if he - or she - fails to recognize rights that are not specifically listed in the Constitution, such as privacy rights, or maintain a broad view of the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment, which has benefited to women and minorities.

''Just as the burden is on the president to convince the American people to vote for him to be president, is on every senator and Congressperson to convince the people in their state to vote for them to have this power, it is also a burden that is on the nominee to be given such awesome power for a lifetime,'' Biden said. ''Any future nominee who fails to meet that burden - and I emphasize again how close I believe this nominee came to that line - will be vigorously opposed.''

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - National Broadcasting Co. used the possible sale of MCA Inc. to a Japanese company to call Wednesday for the repeal of government rules that limit network ownership in television programs they broadcast.

NBC President Robert Wright stressed at a news conference that his network had no objection and no comment on the possibility of MCA merging with Japan's giant Matsushita Electrical Industrial Co.

But such a transaction would be another example of foreign ownership of major Hollywood studios, Wright said, that are growing so big and powerful that they are swallowing up America's independent television production industry, which is so important to networks.

Unless the Federal Communications Commission repeals the Financial Interest and Syndication Rules, Wright said, ''within three to five years production of America's television programming will be 100 percent controlled by a half dozen major studios, a majority of which will be foreign-owned.''

The rules prohibit the major commercial networks - NBC, CBS and ABC - from investing in independent producers for ownership rights in programming. The rules also ban networks from selling programs to local television stations as re-runs, a business worth $3 billion a year.

The FCC imposed the rules in 1970 when it concluded the networks enjoyed too much power over producers in buying programs for broadcast. The networks contend they no longer have that cartel-like power, and that the rules give an unfair competitive advantage to movie studios that are not restricted in financing and owning programming for networks.

The networks have asked the FCC to overturn the 1970 rule, and have been opposed bitterly by studios represented by the Motion Picture Association of America.

One independent producer in Los Angeles, Leonard Hill of Leonard Hill Films, rejected Wright's argument.

''It is a wolf-in-sheep's-clothing argument, using the specter of the Japanese purchase of American studios as a pretext for seeking the substantial deregulation of the networks,'' Hill said, adding that independent producers still need protection from networks.

''It's not reasonable to expect the networks will act at arm's length in negotiations with independent producers,'' Hill added.

Wright said NBC wants the right to invest in independent production companies to keep that industry alive in the face of growing studio power. The networks need independent producers to assure a supply of quality programming, Wright said.

Even now, he added, the eight major studios that belong to the MPAA supply 72 percent of the networks' 1990 prime time programming, including the Fox network.

In addition, the major studios now control nearly 60 percent of revenues from domestic re-runs and 80 percent of foreign syndication revenues, according to a NBC study that Wright is submitting to the FCC.

Three major studios already are owned, or in the process of being owned, by foreign interests. Japan's Sony Corp. owns Columbia Pictures, Australia's News Corp. owns Twentieth Century Fox, as well as the Fox television network; and Italian financier Giancarlo Parretti is now acquiring MGM/UA Communications Co.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - An Illinois congressman, warning of health hazards for U.S. military personnel, is criticizing a tobacco company's plans to send free cigarettes to troops in deployed to the Middle East.

''Why don't they send their lethal products to the Iraqi army,'' asked Rep. Richard Durbin, D-Ill., in a brief speech to the House Tuesday.

Durbin said the Brown & Williamson Co., of Louisville, Ky., announced plans to send the free cigarettes to U.S. troops ''to show their company's support and patriotism.''

As a result, Durbin said, ''American troops in the Persian Gulf could be subjected to a new form of chemical warfare with the full approval of the U.S. Department of Defense.''

''American servicemen, bored silly in the desert, will be invited to pass the time developing a nicotine addiction. Then they can return home like their fathers and grandfathers who served in World War II, hooked on smoking,'' Durbin said.

ANKARA, Turkey (OCT. 3) UPI - Turkey said Wednesday that it has so far inspected seven aircraft bound for Baghdad, but needed assistance from other countries in enforcing the U.N.-sponsored air embargo on Iraq.

Ferhat Ataman, a Foreign Ministry spokesman, said that since the U.N. Security Council imposed an air embargo on Iraq Sept. 27, Turkey has ordered seven planes bound for Baghdad to land for inspection.

These included an Aeroflot passenger plane, three Indian military planes, one Polish and two Romanian planes. All were passing through Turkish air space when they were ordered to land for inspection of their cargoes. They were later given permission to fly to Baghdad.

But Ataman said: ''It is unjustified to expect Turkey to take the role of watchdog.'' He said the aircraft should be inspected at the point of loading. ''The main responsibility lies with the countries where the loading occurs,'' Ataman said.

He said Turkey has received $75 million of a total of $300 million pledged by the Emir of Kuwait, Sheikh Jaber al Ahmed al Sabah, to compensate Ankara for financial losses it incurred by complying with U.N. sanctions against Iraq.

The money, sent out of the emir's personal assets, arrived recently at the Turkish Central Bank and represented the first, and so far the only, compensation Turkey has received. Ankara expects its losses to total $6 to $7 billion.

CLEVELAND (OCT. 3) UPI - George Brett, who spent four months raising his average, has gone down in history.

Brett, a .200 hitter on May 7, won the American League batting title Wednesday with a .329 average. He became the only player to win it in three decades, and the third-oldest man to do so.

Brett singled in his only official at-bat Wednesday in Kansas City's season-ending, 5-2 loss to the Cleveland Indians. That forced Oakland's Rickey Henderson to go 3-for-3, which he did not do. Henderson removed himself after going 1-for-3 and wound up at .325.

''I'm just glad I don't have to wait through this any more,'' Brett said after ending his season but before Henderson finished. ''It was stressful. Physically, I felt fine. Mentally, I was stressed out. I think the days off helped.''

Cleveland used four two-out singles in the fourth to score two runs and went on to beat the Royals 5-2 in the final game of the season.

Starting with the first week in May, Brett went 160 for 449, a .356 pace, and he hit .389 since the All-Star break. He said the media and radio talk shows were saying he was washed up, and for a time he believed it.

''I started believing it. I think that's why it took so long to come out of the slump. To come back and fight adversity it's been a good lesson for me this year.''

Brett did not start and pinch-hit for Sean Berry in the fifth with Russ Morman on third and one out. He fouled off the first pitch from Sergio Valdez before lifting a sacrfice fly that drove in Morman and kept his average at .3278.

In the seventh, Brett lined a 2-1 pitch from reliever Mauro Gozzo to right field for a single, raising his average to .3290. Bo Jackson pinch-hit for Brett with two outs in the ninth. Oakland's Rickey Henderson needs to go 3-for-3 to pass Brett.

Only Ted Williams and Honus Wagner won titles at an older age than Brett, 37. Brett won batting titles in 1976 with a .333 average and in 1980 with a .390 mark.

Valdez, 6-6, pitched six innings to win for the fourth time in his last five decisions. Doug Jones pitched the ninth for his 43rd save.

''The first time I was a little nervous,'' Brett said. ''I've never been a good pinch-hitter. The second at bat, when I knew I was going to bat all the way, I was more relaxed and the results showed that. I was in control out there.''

After the hit, Brett received an ovation from the crowd of 5,196 and from the Indians.

''I felt like I could have lifted the stadium, I felt that strong,'' Brett said of his emotions while standing on first base. ''I felt that good. To see the Indians players come over and whistle and say good going.''

Manager John Wathan pinch-hit Bo Jackson for Brett with two outs in the ninth, and said the plan all along was to give Brett one at bat to try and increase his lead over Henderson. Brett started the day with a .3272 average to Henderson's .3251.

''He's a great player,'' Wathan said. ''For him to do that in three different decades shows how great he's been. I was excited. Tickled to death. Any big situation, he's the guy that you want up there. He'll come through in the clutch.''

ANTELIAS, LEBANON (OCT. 3) UPI - Christians loyal to rebel Gen. Michel Aoun Wednesday buried seven of the 25 people killed Monday when troops imposing a 6-day government siege on an enclave controlled by Aoun opened fire on demonstrators.

About 7,000 grieving civilians, many in tears, held a funeral in front of a brick-roofed church in the Christian town of Antelias just north of Beirut for the victims of Monday's shooting.

Witnesses said Monday the fatal shots were fired from positions manned by soldiers loyal to President Elias Hrawi and militiamen loyal to Samir Geagea around the 100-square-mile enclave of Aoun loyalists.

Hrawi denied responsibility for the bloody incident. Geagea's militia said some of its gunmen opened fire in response to shots from pro-Aoun demonstrators.

The pro-Syrian army warned Aoun's followers Wednesday not to hold scheduled demonstrations near two passageways within the enclave.

''We declare that these regions are mined military zones and citizens are barred from reaching them,'' the army statement said.

In Washington, the United States said it ''deplores the loss of innocent life in this incident.'' ''We believe that General Aoun should leave Ba'abda Palace and turn over control of the Lebanese armed forces to the legitimate government in order to reduce the likelihood of further violence in the future '' State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said.

Outside the Mar Elias church, where flag-draped coffins lay in front of stricken-relatives, hundreds of citizens of the beleagured enclave expressed anger against the blockade and vowed loyalty to Aoun, a Christian general who refuses to recognize Hrawi's government.

Many protestors became infuriated as a cleric representing Maronite Patriarch Nasrallah Sfair started to speak in the square, policed by Aoun's troops.

''The (Maronite) patriarch should be ousted,'' chanted dozens of people. ''We don't want clerics.''

The crowd cheered as Brig. Edgar Maalouf, an adviser to Aoun, joined the procession, chanting ''we redeem you with our blood General Aoun.''

In Rome, Pope John Paul II condemned the new violence and said the Lebanese have become ''hostagea of violence and hate.''

Aoun, 55, a Maronite former army commander, has sought to establish himself as Lebanon's ruler and to discredit other authoritative leaders, notably Hrawi and the patriarch.

The general and his 15,000-strong army have been fighting since January to destroy Geagea's 10,000-member militia after failing to force Syria to pull out its 35,000 troops in a ''war of liberation'' last year.

The fighting has killed more than 2,500 people and forced 200,000 others in the 310-sq-mile Christian enclave to flee the country or to seek refuge in safer Lebanese areas.

Hrawi's forces blocked all entrances to Aoun's region last week, barring the entry of food, gasoline and other essential materials.

''Our God is Aoun ... down with the clerics,'' yelled some protestors, carrying a placard that said: ''We cry over the patriarch who has gone astray.''

A mob loyal to Aoun stormed the patriarch's seat last November and humiliated Sfair after the general warned him not to interfere in politics.

The patriarch has called for a settlement to end the country's civil rebellion that has killed more than 130,000 people since 1975.

A 35-year-old doctor, who refused to give his name, said, ''We consider the patriarch as the godfather of the Taif agreement.''

The Taif agreement is an internationally backed peace treaty worked out in the Saudi resort town of Taif last October by the Lebanese Parliament to end the 15-year-old civil war.

The agreement gave the Moslems more of a voice, ending more than 40 years of Maronite dominance. But Aoun rejected it on grounds it did not ensure a speedy and complete withdrawal of Syria's troops.

''This siege has boosted our loyalty to Aoun,'' said a 30-year-old architect and the father of three children, who asked anonymity.

''We don't care about food or money. Remember Kuwait,'' he said hinting at thousands of Lebanese who lost jobs and savings in Kuwait after it was invaded by Iraq August 2.

Life appeared at a near standstill in the enclave, populated by 800, 000 people, as a result of the blockade. Most shops and businesses were shut, traffic was very light and all gasoline stations were closed.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - The five-day U.S. ban on imports of Chilean fruit last year, prompted by two grapes tainted with cyanide, was justified, congressional investigators said Wednesday.

The Chilean Exporters Association says the ban resulted in $333 million in lost sales and unexpected expenses, such as destroying fruit and toughening security operations.

Imports were suspended March 13, 1989, after cyanide was found in two grapes aboard the freighter Almeria Star at Philadelphia. The discovery followed two telephone calls to the U.S. Embassy in Santiago alleging food shipments had been poisoned.

Some critics have suggested Chile should sue the United States over the incident. They point to studies, commissioned by the exporters, that suggest the grapes were not handled properly or may have been contaminated - either accidentally or intentionally - in the United States.

The studies suggest cyanide, if injected into the grapes in Chile, would have dissipated rapidly and the fruit would not have looked like the grapes cited in the U.S. ban.

However, a review by the congressional General Accounting Office concluded the Food and Drug Administration was on solid ground in shutting off the imports until a screening system could be set up to assure food purity.

In a report scheduled for release Friday obtained by United Press International, GAO investigators said, ''We found that FDA's discovery of cyanide in Chilean grapes was based on generally accepted tests that were conducted properly.

''Based on its findings, FDA acted within its legal authority.''

In addition, the report cited a number of studies showing ''grapes and other fruit appeared normal for two weeks or more after injection (with cyanide) before they began to change color, form or texture.''

An FDA study said some fruit, when refrigerated, retained normal appearance for up to 16 days and retained cyanide at the levels that prompted the ban.

Fruit on the Almeria Star was refrigerated during its 13-day voyage.

FDA conducted two tests to confirm the presence of cyanide in the suspect grapes. The agency also has said lab workers smelled cyanide.

The GAO did not comment on estimates of losses to Chile's economy but noted that shipments to the United States rebounded to record levels in the sales year following the grape scare. The United States is the No. 1 market for Chilean fruit.

NEW YORK (OCT. 3) UPI - Currency players sold the dollar Wednesday in New York after Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan confirmed interest rates would descend if Congress passed legislation to cut the size of the federal budget deficit.

The dollar dropped to a new record low against the German mark, closing at 1.5415 marks vs. 1.5485 Tuesday. The dollar's previous low close for the New York market was 1.5445 marks, set Aug. 23.

In late New York trading, the dollar was also quoted at 135.75 Japanese yen, down from 136.75 the previous day.

Foreign-exchange dealers said Greenspan's testimony to a congressional panel, in which he warned that failure to pass the legislation so President Bush can sign it into law would be a ''grave mistake,'' gave the market a green light to sell the dollar.

There was a ''complete, total dollar sell-off,'' said Michael McGuinness, a vice president with Harris Bank in Chicago.

Greenspan, in effect, ''told everybody what they wanted to hear, that if this budget backage goes through ... he'll go along with it'' by easing the Federalfunds interest rate the central bank uses to signal policy.

Added National Westminster Bank trader Hank Weiland: ''Greenspan confirming it just made the market more sure.''

McGuinness said the market is convinced Congress will approve the deficit legislation by late this week, despite pockets of opposition. That would allow the Fed to lower the Federal funds rate to 7.75 percent from 8 percent, according to McGuinness.

He said some participants believed the closely watched rate, applied to loans of reserve funds made by one bank to another, could drop as soon as Friday if the U.S. unemployment data for September due out that morning are very bad.

The British pound moved up to $1.9020 from $1.8920.

Other New York dollar rates: 1.2825 Swiss francs, off from 1.2880; 5.1690 French francs, off from 5.1900; and 1,154.80 Italian lire, off from 1,159.30.

In European trading, the dollar was lower against the main currencies after traders sold it on rumors of lower U.S. interest rates.

''I suspect the dollar will recover, but not today,'' said Henry Bennett, a currency analyst with investment bank Williams de Broe Ltd. ''The market is currently reacting to anything.''

German markets were closed for the day in honor of the official beginning of a unified Germany.

In London, the pound gained on the U.S. unit to close at $1.9005 vs. Tuesday's $1.8870. The dollar also fell in Zurich, to 1.2850 Swiss francs vs. 1.2955.

The dollar depreciated in Paris, Brussels and Milan, to, respectively: 5.1980 French francs vs. 5.2220; 31.88 Belgian francs vs. 32.07, and 1,162.15 Italian lire vs. 1162.55.

Earlier in Tokyo, the dollar slipped marginally against the yen in moderate trading amid bearish prospects for the U.S. economy. The U.S. unit closed at 136.65 yen, down from 136.73 at Tuesday's close.

But most players stood aside. ''The market couldn't move either way because of the bearish U.S. economic outlook and unstable Tokyo stock market,'' said NBD Bank currency manager Tomigishe Kobayashi.

Gold closed higher in Zurich, at $390.50 an ounce vs. $388.75, and in London, at $390.25 an ounce vs. $388.50.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $394.25 an ounce, up from $389.50 Tuesday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled contract gold at $393.90 an ounce, up from $389.10.

Silver was unchanged in both Zurich, at $4.70 an ounce, and London, at $4.71 an ounce.

Republic closed cash silver at $4.71 an ounce, up from $4.70. Comex silver ended trading at $4.69 an ounce, an advance from $4.679.

CAIRO, EGYPT (OCT. 3) UPI - Egyptian Interior Minister Mohammed Abdul Halim Moussa said Egypt has arrested a number of pro-Iraqi Palestinian extremists and seized arms and explosives they planned to use in terrorist attacks.

In remarks published Wednesday in the leading Egyptian weekly magazine al Mussawar, Moussa said the terrorists included members of the radical Palestinian group of radical Palestinian leader Sabri el Banah, better known as Abu Nidal.

Abu Nidal heads the Fatah Revolutionary Council, a splinter group of Yasser Arafat's Fatah mainstream within the Palestine Liberation Ogranization.

Moussa did not say how many extemists had been arrested, but said other elements involved were residing in Egypt and planned together to carry out acts of subversion in the country.

Asked if Egypt expected terrorist attacks by pro-Iraqi Palestinians because of Cairo's opposition to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, Moussa said, ''Members of Abu Nidal's groups and others have been sent to Egypt and we are now interrogating them on various charges of terrorism.''

''They planned to carry out subversive operations and assault a number of persons they could reach,'' Moussa said. ''These groups have been arrested ... and the arms, bombs and explosives at their disposal were seized.''

Moussa said a number of the Palestinian terrorists used false Egyptian passports to enter the country with specific terrorist tasks to accomplish in Egypt.

The minister also said three Iraqi nationals used false Egyptian passports to enter the country but that they asked for political asylum because they did not want to join the Iraqi army.

Moussa also said in other remarks published in the newspaper Al Gomhuria that subversive elements from three different Arab countries he did not name were also arrested but again gave no no further details.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - As the House moved toward a showdown vote on a bipartisan budget plan, lawmakers in both parties agonized over their decisions Wednesday and President Bush warned that unless it passes ''we are courting disaster in this country.''

The House was set to take the first critical vote Thursday on a budget resolution that adopts the outlines of the bipartisan agreement reached Sunday between Bush and congressional leaders after four months of hard bargaining.

Head counters on both sides said Wednesday the outcome was still in doubt, but one key Democratic congressman said chances were ''better than 50-50'' the measure would pass.

''I think it's up in the air,'' said Assistant House Republican leader Newt Gingrich of Georgia, who has broken with Bush and who opposes the plan.

The way was cleared for the showdown vote Wednesday when a House- Senate budget conference committee quickly approved a budget plan that substituted the bipartisan agreement's numbers for those approved earlier in the year.

The House vote Thurday also will instruct various House committees how to implement the specific tax increases and spending cuts contained in the $500 billion deficit cutting plan.

The five-year plan includes $134 billion in new gasoline, cigarette, alcohol, airline and other taxes and fees, $67 billion in defense cuts over three years limiting domestic spending increases to the rate of inflation, a $60 billion cut in Medicare and new tax breaks for investing in small companies.

Failure to adopt the deficit cutting package by Friday, and to pass separate implementing legislation by Oct. 19, would trigger up to $105.7 billion in automatic spending cuts required under the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law.

Those cuts, split between defense and domestic programs, would devastate federal services from air traffic control to meat inspection and disease research.

At the White House, Bush canceled a New England political swing to continue meeting with and telephoning undecided or wavering House Republicans, who apparently hold the key to the plan's success on Capitol Hill.

A majority of House Democrats are expected to back the plan, although there is significant liberal opposition, and it appears it will pass the Senate, which has scheduled a vote for Friday.

So most attention has focused on House Republicans, where several GOP leaders, including Gingrich, are bucking Bush and House Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois and opposing the plan.

A majority in each party in each house must vote to approve the plan to ensure passage. That will prevent one party from blaming the other for the politically painful parts of the agreement a month before November's congressional elections.

At a news conference, Bush warned that failure to pass the plan would create economic chaos.

''If we linger along and don't get a deal, I'll tell you we are courting disaster in this country,'' said Bush, who appealed for support in a nationally televised address Tuesday night. ''The overall good things outweigh the negative. And besides, the country has got to be governed.''

He urged Congress to support the plan ''and to prove to the American people that we can solve problems, that we can go out and get something done and put this nation back on the path to long-term economic growth.''

On Capitol Hill, however, members of both parties agonized. Both sides predicted that while the plan should pass, in part due to Bush's personal lobbying of Republicans, the outcome remains in doubt.

The vote appeared particularly tough for conservative Republicans, who were forced to choose between ideology and political loyalty to a popular president who is putting his credibility on the line to win passage.

''This is an agonizing process,'' said Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill, who said he was ''leaning no.''

Hyde said he declined repeated invitations to meet with Bush at the White House because ''I don't want the pressure'' and because ''I want to decide my vote without extraneous considerations.''

''I don't want to decide this issue on the basis of loyalty but what's good for the country and the economy,'' Hyde said. ''I don't expect to make up my mind until the (House electronic voting) board is lit up and the time is getting down to the precious few seconds.''

Hyde said that for most Republicans, he felt ''the politics more than the economics'' of the vote will decide the outcome because ''it's a leap in the dark economically.''

''I was trying to find some way to help him out and I just can't,'' said Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Calif., a Bush backer. ''I agonized to find a way to help the president. ... I kept looking around in the manure pile for the pony and guess what? I couldn't find the pony.''

Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., said she was undecided but dislikes the plan.

''I really think it stinks,'' Schroeder said. ''I think all Democrats look at this package and wonder how they keep a large 'D' behind their name and vote yes. It's very unfair to the middle class.''

(OCT. 3) UPI - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev sent a senior aide on a ''special mission'' to the Middle East Wednesday and President Francois Mitterrand headed to the region as Iraq offered to release all French hostages apparently in response to the French leader's peace proposal.

Gilles Munier, chairman of the French-Iraqi Friendship Association, told reporters in Amman, Jordan, that while he was in Baghdad, the Iraqi government told him it ''was willing to release all French hostages if a top official from the (French) government or opposition goes to Iraq.''

The French hostages are believed to be held along with other Westerners at key sites as a human shield against possible attack by the U.S.-led multinational force in the gulf region.

The flurry of diplomatic activity came amid the arrival in Amman, Jordan, of nine French hostages released earlier. France's Ambassador in Amman, Denis Pouehard, said the former hostages, who include three French Moslems, ''were all in good health'' and would leave for Paris later Wednesday.

The release of the Frenchmen and the more generous offer to release all French hostages followed Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein's stated willingness to consider the peace plan Mitterrand presented at the United Nations last week, which calls among other things for a complete Iraqi withdrawal from occupied Kuwait.

President Bush has praised the French initiative, and doing so, offered optimism that the crisis could be resolved peacefully,

Saddam Hussein reportedly made his first visit to Kuwait Wednesday since the Aug. 2 invasion, and Iraqi Television showed footage of the Iraqi leader being being warmly greeted and scenes from Kuwait City with classical music playing in the background.

The official Iraqi News Agency said the Iraqi leader toured streets ''that appeared flourishing afters its return to the mother homeland'' and met with soldiers who reportedly told him they were ready to die to defend their country.

As the Iraqi leader toured Kuwait, Mitterrand arrived in Abu Dhabi on a surprise visit to inspect French troops in the Persian Gulf region as part of the multinational force deployed to counter Iraqi aggression.

He was to board the French frigate Dupleix to meet Thursday with French commanders in the region. Later Thursday, Mitterrand planned to travel to Saudi Arabia to meet with King Fahd before going on to the Red Sea port of Yanbu to chat with some of the 4,000 Foreign Legionnaires and other troops.

As part of the apparently more conciliatory political climate, Gorbachev dispatched a senior aide to the Middle East Wednesday on a ''special mission '' but it was not immediately known if the envoy would meet the Iraqi leader.

State-run Amman Radio said King Hussein received Yevgeny Primakov, a member of Gorbachev's presidential council and a Middle East expert, in Amman on Wednesday and received a message from Gorbachev. The Jordanian radio gave no details of the message or the talks.

Primakov was also scheduled to meet PLO leader Yasser Arafat.

The official Tass news agency did not specify whether the trip was related to the gulf crisis, describing it as ''a special mission from the head of state'' Gorbachev.

Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu, also in the region, held talks in Cairo with his Egyptian counterpart Atef Sedki, and Egyptian newspapers said Tokyo had pledged to give $600 million in aid and soft loans to frontline states such as Egypt, Jordan and Turkey which have suffered economic hardship because of the crisis.

Kaifu arrived later in the day in Amman, part of his seven-day, five- nation tour. A spokesman said Kaifu may meet with Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Taha Yassin Ramadan, ''depending on the prime minister's schedule.''

In Larnaca, Cyprus, authorities detained the Honduran-registered tanker Fiona and arrested its Lebanese officers on suspicion of breaching U.N. sanctions by transporting Iraqi oil to Lebanon, a Cypriot government official said Wednesday. Shipping insurers Lloyd's of London said samples of oil taken from the Fiona were ''sent to England for analysis and verification of origin, as no certificate of origin exists on board.''

The Fiona investigation is the first since the U.N. sanctions were imposed.

The Cypriot official told United Press International in a telephone interview the Fiona was believed to have sailed from the Turkish port of Dortyol, where Iraq's trans-Turkey pipeline ends, to the Christian Lebanese port of Jounieh.

One Western diplomat in Cairo said pro-Iraqi Gen. Michel Aoun's Christian enclave in Lebanon is a potential point for sanctions-busting efforts.

In other developments Wednesday:

-Egypt's interior minister said in a newspaper interview that Egyptian authorities had arrested an undisclosed number of suspected pro-Iraqi terrorists and seized arms and explosives. He said the prisoners were members of the radical Palestinian group controlled by Abu Nidal and had come to Egypt to ''assault a number of persons.''

-Vietnam was waiting for United Nations approval to send ships carrying rice to some 17,000 of its workers still in Iraq, state-run Hanoi Radio reported.

-Palestinian Liberation Front leader Abul Abbas was quoted in an Iraqi newspaper as saying his organization would retaliate if under the U.N. air traffic embargo on Iraq if Iraqi aircraft were exposed to ''American piracy.''

-Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati said force should be a last resort in resolving the crisis and Iran would not contribute to any such effort. Velayati also ruled out Tehran restoring diplomatic ties with Egypt because of Cairo's commitment to the Camp David peace accords with Israel.

-U.S. officials in Saudi Arabia said an army OH-58 Mohawk observation-scout helicopter crashed while landing during a training flight Tuesday evening, but two crewmembers aboard were not hurt.

-The Centers for Disease Control downplayed a report that a virus it supplied to an Iraqi scientist ended up in Saddam Hussein's arsenal of chemical weapons. CDC officials acknowledged that shipments of the West Nile fever virus were sent to Salman Pak, a bacteriological research facility near Baghdad, in 1985. The federal health agency, however, said it was unaware that the virus, intended for use in medical research, inadvertently ended up in biological warheads, a charge made by the Simon Wiesenthal Center Tuesday.

-Administration officials said a proposed $7.3 billion arms sale to Saudi Arabia is designed to help the desert kingdom slow down an invading army until U.S. and other reinforcements can arrive. Testifying before House Foreign Affairs Committee members who were generally critical of the sale, the officials said even with the arms, Saudi Arabia would be unable to repel an attack by a well-armed aggressor such as Iraq.

-Turkey said it has so far inspected seven aircraft passing through its air space bound for Baghdad, but needed assistance from other countries in enforcing the U.N.-sponsored air embargo on Iraq.

RIO DE JANEIRO (OCT. 3) UPI - Brazilians gave a strong vote of confidence to President Fernando Collor de Mello Wednesday by electing a majority of his political allies to the Chamber of Deputies and regional governorships, early exit polls showed.

Analysts have said victories for pro-Collor candidates would signal a show of confidence for the president's free market economic reforms ordered in March to slow runaway inflation and lower the fiscal deficit.

The prestigious Brazilian Institute of Public Opinion and Statistics said the Liberal Front Party, the leading political party allied with Collor, and smaller conservative groups won 65 percent of the 503 seats in the Chamber of Deputies, at least 17 of the 31 Senate seats up for election, and a majority of the 27 governorships.

The Institute interviewed voters leaving a sampling of the 255,000 voting places around Brazil.

Partial official returns are not expected to be made public until Thursday, and complete official returns will not be available until next week, according to Sidney Sanches, president of the Supreme Electoral Court, the organism that administrates Brazilian voting.

Collor, 41, appeared confident when he cast his vote at 9:30 a.m. in his hometown, the northeastern city of Maceio.

''I hope that the Virgin enlightens our way, so that we continue fighting for progress and for peace in our country,'' Collor said.

Despite the importance of the election, turnout appeared to be poor in Rio de Janeiro after polls opened at 8 a.m., with none of the long lines that characterized last year's presidential elections.

Television stations showed massive turnouts of voters in Sao Paulo, Brazil's industrial center, as well scenes of Indians in the Amazon basin traveling to remote voting stations in canoes.

In Rio de Janeiro, however, apathy was widespread and thousands took advantage of the public holiday to go to the beach.

''We are getting tired of politicians and so many elections,'' said Zelia Rodriguez, 52, a housewife who voted in a northern neighborhood of Rio de Janeiro.

''I would have preferred to go to the beach,'' said Moyses Cohen, a 27-year-old university student. ''The truth is, voting should not be obligatory.''

Voting is a legal obligation in Brazil. Those who fail to vote and cannot prove a valid reason for their absence at the polls are required to pay a fine equal to $76 and are prohibited from traveling abroad.

In practice, however, non-voters are rarely sanctioned because the government regularly grants them amnesties from the penalties.

An estimated 83 million Brazilians are eligible to vote for a total of 1,500 federal, state, and local officials, but the key race will be for the 503 federal deputies and 31 senators of Congress, where Collor must seek approval for his program.

Collor is pledged to eventually eliminate Brazil's cumbersome economic controls and sell off state companies to the private sector.

He has been limited by opposition from Congress, now dominated by left-wing and center-left parties that favor maintaining high state employment and bettering wages in the public sector.

In the 27 races for Brazil's state governships, winners who fail to gain an absolute majority of votes will have to face the runner-up in a runoff on Nov. 25.

Wednesday's election was also important in charting Brazil's constitutional future.

The new Chamber of Deputies and Senate together will compose the Constituent Assembly that will amend the constitution in 1993. The new constitution is expected to endure into the 21st Century.

BOSTON (OCT. 3) UPI - A 2-cent per gallon tax on home heating oil was inserted into the federal deficit reduction bill in reaction to a maneuver by White House Chief of Staff John Sununu and ''perhaps others, '' Gov. Michael S. Dukakis said Wednesday.

The former Democratic presidential nominee said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, Dukakis's runningmate in 1988, told him he had demanded the tax be included as negotiations between congressional leaders and the White House were being concluded.

But Bentsen said he was reacting to an 11th-hour move by Sununu, the former governor of New Hampshire, Dukakis told reporters at a news conference called to criticize the bill.

''As I understand it from Senator Bentsen, the package in its near final form contained a 10-cent increase in gasoline tax. He wasn't happy about that since they drive a lot in Texas. But he said okay,'' said Dukakis.

''He then reported to me that Mr. Sununu proposed an additional 2 cents (in taxes) across the board for refined products, including home heating oil,'' said Dukakis. ''Senator Bentsen was even more reluctant to go along with ... that 12-cent increase in gasoline, but finally reluctantly he agreed to do so.''

''He further reports to me that, at the 11th hour, apparently upon the motion of Mr. Sununu and perhaps others the 2 cents was deleted for the heating oil without the gasoline. Senator Bentsen was very upset and said it's either across the board or not at all,'' Dukakis related.

The heating oil tax has received a chilly reception in New England, which is 58 percent dependent on the fuel, most of it imported.

SANTA ANA, CA (OCT. 3) UPI - A teacher with AIDS who won the right to return to his job after being barred from the classroom because of his disease has died, his lawyer said Wednesday.

Vincent Chalk, 45, died of AIDS-related complications Tuesday at Coastal Community Hospital. He was admitted to the hospital five days earlier.

Chalk's case against the Orange County Department of Education was said to be the first attempt by a teacher infected with AIDS to fight his transfer out of the classroom.

His court battle began with a major setback: In September 1987, U.S. District Court Judge William P. Gray in Los Angeles refused to reverse Chalk's reassignment, saying his return to the classroom posed a potential ''catastrophic'' risk to students.

But, in November 1987, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeal ordered that Chalk be allowed to return to his classes, where he taught hearing- impaired children.

The appeals court found that Chalk's rights protecting him from discrimination of the handicapped were violated.

It was believed to be the first time that a court had ruled that AIDS victims are protected by the same job discrimination statutes that cover the handicapped, his attorney, Marjorie Rushforth, said.

Two of the appellate judges chastised the Education Department, saying its stance against Chalk was based on a ''know-nothing'' argument. The comment was an apparent reference to witnesses called to testify at a federal court hearing who disputed opinions that AIDS is transmitted only through blood, sexual intercourse or other exchange of body fluids, and not through casual contact.

Prior to the ruling in Chalk's case, courts had upheld the rights of children with AIDS to remain in school.

After the appellate ruling, Chalk, a homosexual, resumed teaching full time at University High School and Venado Middle School, both in Irvine.

Last spring, Chalk's illness forced him to cut back his hours in the classroom Rushforth said.

''He was a wonderful man,'' she said. ''He had inner strength. He was a marvelous example, not just to people with AIDS, but people with any handicap or condition.''

Rushforth said Chalk had no further problems with school authorities after the appellete court ruling and, on campus, ''some very fun things happened to him.''

''Kids he had never had any professional contact with - surfer kids, about 14 or 15 years old - would walk across campus and shake his hand and tell him they respected him,'' she said.

When Chalk sued for his job, parents and students rallied behind the teacher. Chalk said only one parent, a nurse, had asked that he stop teaching her child a request Chalk complied with.

Chalk, who came from a religious Mormon family in the small town of Lewis, Kan., attended Brigham Young University, where he received a degree in psychology.

In a 1988 newspaper interview, Chalk said he realized that, for many of his students, his death would be the first time someone close to them had died.

''But we all have to face death and dying some time in our life. It's much better to face it ... with someone like a teacher than with someone closer, someone in your family,'' he said.

(OCT. 3) UPI - President Bush postponed a New England campaign swing for G-O-P candidates so he could stay in Washington and lobby for congressional passage of his budget package. He had been scheduled to campaign tomorrow and Friday for Republican candidates.

A controversy in Texas focuses on Baylor University. Officials of the Baptist General Convention of Texas voted to withhold one-point-five- Million dollars in funding for Baylor pending a study of the school's declaration of independence. .

Trustees of Baylor, the nation's oldest and largest Baptist university, angered state Baptist leaders last month when they did NOT consult them before voting to remove a liberal arts school in Waco from their control.

In Hanover, New Hampshire, Dartmouth College officials rejected a public apology from the editors of the Dartmouth Review. The apology came after the off-campus weekly published an anti-Semitic quote from Adolf Hitler during the Jewish holidays.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (OCT. 3) UPI - The U.S. Justice Department has confirmed it would not intervene in a lawsuit against US Sprint by two former employees, a newspaper said Wednesday.

The Kansas City Star said the agency confirmed recent reports that it was not expected to proceed with its involvement in the lawsuit.

The suit alleges Sprint illegally obtained information about its competitors' bids for the FTS2000 contract with the federal government. The contract, awarded in late 1988, is estimated to be worth $10 billion to $25 billion over 10 years.

Sprint received 40 percent of the contract. The remainder went to American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Former Sprint employees James Hottle and Ronald Romonchuk, both of Fairfax, Va., filed the lawsuit in August 1989 under a so-called ''whistle-blowers'' law, the Star said.

Under the law, the Justice Department must investigate allegations of fraud against the government. If the government decides not to intervene, a whistle-blower can proceed with the suit and keep 25 to 30 percent of any award ordered by the court.

The Justice Department said in a news release the former employees' complaints were investigated by the FBI and the General Services Administration. Neither agency confirmed ''any of the allegations of wrongdoing,'' the release said.

Richard Devlin, executive vice president of United Telecommunications Inc., said the company was pleased with the Justice Department's decision.

''Our internal investigation indicated that we acted properly and lawfully,'' Devlin said.

Sprint is the long distance unit of Kansas City-based United Telecom.

CHICAGO (OCT. 3) UPI - Chicago's two largest futures exchanges will send a delegation overseas later this month to establish ties with new markets in Hungary and the Soviet Union, the exchanges said Wednesday.

In an unprecedented move, the delegation from the Chicago Mercantile Exchange and Chicago Board of Trade will sign agreements to provide educational assistance which could lead to the further development of commodities markets in the two nations.

The agreement will be signed with the Budapest Commodities Exchange in Hungary on Oct. 29 and the State Commission on Food and Procurement in the Soviet Union on Nov. 1.

The goal is to encourage mutual understanding of the markets in those countries, promote the exchange of information, pursue other mutually beneficial business opportunities and work to strengthen economic and trade relations between the countries involved.

''We are looking forward to building a friendly and mutually beneficial relationship,'' CBOT Chairman William O'Connor said.

Leo Melamed, chairman of the CME's executive committee, said both Hungary and the USSR have tremendous untapped human capital and natural resources.

''We will help them any way we can to achieve a better standard of living for their people,'' he said. ''One way will be through the valid price information provided by futures markets.''

In addition to O'Connor and Melamed, the delegation will include CME Chairman John Geldermann, CBOT President and CEO Thomas Donovan and CME President and CEO William Brodsky.

ARDMORE, PA (OCT. 3) UPI - An original autograph manuscript for two of composer Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart's greatest works is safe and sound and soon will be auctioned off to the benefit of a suburban Philadelphia seminary.

Manfred Brauch, president of the Eastern Baptist Theological Seminary, said Wednesday that the rag paper manuscript containing ''Fantasy in C Minor'' and ''Sonata in C Minor'' was found in a safe this summer by an accountant looking for legal documents. It had not been seen by scholars since the early part of this century, and had been considered lost.

''We had known of the existence of the manuscript, but it has not been in the active consciousness of the seminary and its administrators since the mid-1950s,'' said Brauch, who has been with the seminary since 1978 and was just recently appointed president.

The 14-page score for piano, penned by Mozart's own hand in brown ink in 1784 and 1785, is scheduled to be auctioned off by Sotheby's in London on Nov. 21 and is expected to draw a winning bid of between $945, 000 and $1.42 million, according to the auction house.

The Fantasia and Sonata, which are usually performed together, have been played regularly since Mozart performed it himself in Leipzig on May 12, 1789, according to Sotheby officials.

Scholar Stephen Roe of Sotheby's said the manuscript gave him a particular thrill when he realized it contained some music left out of published versions.

''The re-emergence of this manuscript is an event of considerable importance for Mozart scholarship,'' Roe said.

Brauch said the manuscript was willed to the seminary in 1950 by Marguerite Treat Doane, daughter of Cincinnati industrialist William Howard Doane, a collector of music manuscripts.

The industrialist obtained the manuscript from Julian Marshall's collection in the late 19th century, according to Sotheby's.

Brauch said the Eastern Baptist Theological Seminary also planned to sell other music manuscripts discovered in the safe in July, including works by Haydn, Meyerbeer, Spohr and Johann Strauss the elder. Those pieces are expected to fetch about $112,000.

''We really believe the seminary is not in the business of holding onto important music manuscripts,'' Brauch said. ''We want to make them available to the the larger music world.''

The Mozart manuscript will be exhibited at the seminary on Oct. 15 and 16, and at Sotheby's in New York from Oct. 17 through Oct. 19.

DETROIT (OCT. 3) UPI - The Honda Accord overtook the Ford Escort as the top-selling car for the 1990-model year, but Ford Motor Co. said Wednesday this happened because of a break ordered in Escort production to change to an all-new model.

Ford also blamed the general decline in subcompact car sales. Together, those factors caused the Escort to tumble to sixth place for the model year that ended Sept. 30.

Ford's mid-sized Taurus, however, moved up one notch to second place. The Cavalier compact made by General Motors Corp.'s Chevrolet division rose to third from fifth place, while Toyota Motor Corp.'s Camry was fourth, jumping two notches from its 1989-model year ranking.

The Beretta coupe and Corsica sedan, which Chevrolet counts as a single model line, dropped one spot to fifth place for the 1990- model year.

Ford's F-series pickup truck maintained its position as the nation's best-selling vehicle - car or truck - for the ninth model year running, followed by Chevrolet's C/K pickup truck in terms of vehicle sales.

Here is a list of the five best selling 1990- model cars and light trucks vs. 1989:

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (OCT. 3) UPI - Yellow Freight System Inc., a trucking company, said Wednesday it would introduce a 2.4 percent fuel charge beginning Monday, if federal regulators approve.

Implementing the surcharge is contingent on Interstate Commerce Commission approval, the company said.

''This action comes in response to a continued rise in fuel costs,'' President and chief executive officer George E. Powell III said. ''We have held our surcharge steady at 1.9 percent for the past four weeks, but continued increases in fuel costs have accumulated to the point that we cannot ignore the negative impact on our operating costs.''

The surcharge is based only on the increased of fuel, Yellow Freight said, and as such is a cost-based surcharge.

Yellow Freight serves customers in more than 35,000 destinations in all fifty states, Puerto Rico, and several Canadian provinces.

The company is a wholly owned subsidiary of Yellow Freight System Inc. of Delaware.

UNITED NATIONS (OCT. 3) UPI - The United States and the Soviet Union announced Wednesday that they had reached agreement in principle on a treaty that would drastically cut the number of troops, aircraft, artillery and armored vehicles in Europe.

The final agreement was announced jointly by Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and U.S. Secretary of State James Baker after more than five hours of private talks in the Soviet mission to the United Nations.

If the agreement had not been reached this week, U.S. officials said it would have been impossible to hold a 35-nation summit in Paris scheduled in mid-November. The United States had made such a conventional forces arms control treaty - known as CFE - a prerequisite for attending the Paris meeting.

Baker said it was an agreement in principle. ''We have agreed on all major issues,'' he said.

''A few peripheral issues remain to be settled. (But) we have reached agreement on the reduction and destruction of a significant amount of weapons '' the secretary said.

Shevardnadze, standing at Baker's side, said one relatively minor matter - counting rules for helicopters - remained unsettled but could be dealt with by technical experts.

The United States will take the framework of the agreement to the NATO countries for their assent, which is expected, since they were consulted at every stage of the long proceedings.

No numbers were given at the announcement of the agreement. The two sides wanted to consult with their allies, with the United States checking with NATO and the Soviet Union consulting with what is left of the Warsaw Pact alliance.

But officials had said previously that the number of troops had been set for 195,000 for both sides in central Europe, with the United States being permitted 30,000 more troops to be based in Britain and Italy, outside of the European Central Zone.

Officials have said that both sides will be limited to about 6,700 aircraft.

In one of the issues settled Wednesday, it was agreed land-based naval aircraft will be handled in a side letter, and that maritime patrol aircraft will not be included in the treaty at all.

Baker and Shevardnadze spent almost all of their 5 1/2 hours Wednesday on the conventional forces agreement, and barely touched on the treaty reducing strategic nuclear arms. Both men said they will probably get together on Friday to try to settle the remaining issues in the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks, reducing offensive nuclear missiles by up to 50 percent.

Both the United States and the Soviet Union have expressed the hope that they can have a START treaty ready for signing at a U.S.-Soviet summit before the end of this year.

The conventional forces negotiations have been going on, in various forms, since 1975. But the bargaining got serious in January 1989, with the coming to office of the Bush administration and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's program of political and military reforms beginning to gain momentum.

About one year ago, U.S. negotiators noticed a slowdown in the talks, a pause they ascribed to Soviet military officials objecting to the deep cuts in troops at a time when those soldiers and their weapons might be needed to quell nationalist violence inside the Soviet Union.

In the past two months, U.S. negotiators detected a new willingness by the Soviets to bargain seriously, something that was seen as a sign that Gorbachev and Shevardnadze and their allies in the Kremlin had asserted their authority over the Soviet general staff.

BOSTON (OCT. 3) UPI - Duff & Phelp's Wednesday lowered Bank of Boston Corp.'s credit rating, joining the other major credit agencies in downgrading the ratings of New England's largest bank for the second time this year.

Standard & Poor's Corp. and Moody's already had lowered Bank of Boston's credit ratings twice in 1990.

In Wednesday's announcement, Duff & Phelps cited ''the continuing deterioration within the corporation's commercial real estate portfolio caused by weak regional and national markekts.''

Bank of Boston only last week disclosed it expected a loss for the latest quarter of as much as $250 million. That is double the company's $125 million quarterly loss a year ago that stunned the regional financial community.

Duff & Phelps praised the company for ''intensive management'' of its problem loan portfolio but warned that weakness in the Northeast real estate market and elsewhere ''will keep problem loan levels high.''

The credit agency lowered Bank of Boston's senior debt to triple-B from single-A-minus and dropped its subordinated debt to triple-B-minus from triple-B-plus Its preferred stock was dropped from triple-B to double-B.

(OCT. 3) UPI - The remnants of tropical storm Rachel soaked the Southwest, closing roads and sending streams over their banks Wednesday while another front that moved in from the Northwest left a dusting of snow on the Rockies.

In western Texas, flood warnings remained in effect along the Rio Grande River from Presidio to Langtry. The river was near its crest Wednesday at Castolon, 4 feet above flood stage. The river was expected to crest 5 1/2 above flood stage on Thursday at Presidio.

Flood watches over other portions of western Texas were canceled.

To the north, a cold front brought wintry weather to Colorado and Idaho. Snow was reported as low as 5,000 feet in the Idaho mountains and 8,000 feet in the peaks of Colorado.

The snowfall was generally light, with up to 3 inches falling in the passes above 10,000 feet in Colorado.

The front moved through Denver during the night with rain and winds gusting to 30 mph as temperatures dropped to near 40 degrees.

Advisories were posted Wednesday night for the first frost of the season in the San Luis Valley of Colorado.

Elsewhere, rainshowers and a few thunderstorms were widespread across the nation's midsection. Rain fell over Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana and Illinois.

Showers also doused parts of Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Florida and the Pacific Northwest.

GEORGETOWN, TX (OCT. 3) UPI - A judge Wednesday set Dec. 3 as the execution date for condemned murderer Henry Lee Lucas, who once confessed to killing more than 600 people.

Williamson County State District Judge John Carter ordered Lucas, 54, to be put to death by injection. The case will be appealed to the Supreme Court.

''Essentially the confessions (by Lucas) were basically a hoax, perpetrated by my client and with the active assistance of Texas law enforcement,'' Lucas' lawyer, Richard Allen, said Wednesday. ''In fact, the Dallas Police Department had my client confessing to crimes that they had completely and totally made up.''

After he was arrested in north Texas June 11, 1983 on a weapons charge, Lucas began confessing to hundreds of killings across the United States and in five foreign countries.

The Blacksburg, Va., native later recanted his confessions, but authorities in several states closed the books on more than 210 killings based on his initial claims.

Lucas was convicted in 1983 and sentenced to death for the 1979 rape- slaying of an unidentified woman, dubbed ''orange socks,'' whose nude body was found along Interstate 35 in central Texas.

Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox in 1986 released a comprehensive report saying Texas Rangers and other law enforcement agencies mishandled the investigation of Lucas and his bogus confessions of mass murder. The report said Lucas could not have committed many of the crimes to which he confessed.

The report also cast doubt on Lucas' lone capital murder conviction, citing a polygraph report indicating Lucas did not kill the woman.

But former Williamson County District Attorney Ed Walsh, who won the capital murder conviction, said Wednesday he remains convinced that Lucas killed the woman in Georgetown and as many as 100 other people.

''There were just too many cases he gave details of that he wouldn't have really known had not he committed the crimes,'' said Walsh.

Lucas was also convicted in 1984 and sentenced to life in prison for the murder of Becky Powell, 15, his common-law wife, and he was given a 75-year prison term after pleading guilty to the murder of Kate Rich, 80, of Ringgold.

In addition he received life in prison without parole for the murder of police officer Clemmie Curtis of Huntington, W.Va. Lucas confessed he forced Curtis to write a suicide note and then shot him.

At first Lucas was believed to be the most prolific serial murderer in U.S. history.

Authorities in 26 states swallowed Lucas's confessions, which he later said were made in an attempt to avoid a date with the executioner and also to embarrass the law.

Among his claims were that he supplied the cyanide used in the 1978 murder-suicide of more than 900 people at the People's Temple colony of the Rev. Jim Jones in Jonestown, Guyana. He also confessed to the slaying of union boss Jimmy Hoffa.

Lucas began his life of crime in 1960 when he killed his mother, Viola Lucas, 74, in Michigan by stabbing her a number of times. He was in and out of prisons and mental hospitals until 1970 when he was released on parole.

TORONTO (OCT. 3) UPI - Canada and the United States will in the next few months begin negotiating a far-reaching, ''liberalized'' agreement on air transportation, it was announced Wednesday.

In a joint announcement with U.S. Secretary of Transportation Samuel Skinner, Canadian Transport Minister Douglas Lewis said negotiations should begin in 1991.

Lewis said the bilateral agreement was last renegotiated in 1974 and is now out of date.

He said a new agreement is intended to give Canadian industry greater access to American markets and to facilitate flying between the U.S. and Canada.

Citing personal experience, Lewis said that flying from Canada's capital in Ottawa to Washington can be an ''adventure'' that required changing flights in Syracuse, N.Y.

Lewis also asserted American carriers would have an ''advantage'' under a ''liberalized'' arrangement and said negotiators would have to find ways to compensate Canadian carriers.

Lewis said both of Canada's national carriers, Air Canada and Canadian Airlines International, indicated they welcome a new arrangement.

Lewis and Skinner said they will consult all interested parties on the direction the new arrangement should take.

They said they would consider setting up a system that would allow carriers from each country to operate services between any point in one country and any point in the other as well as between points within the other country.

The joint statement said a bilateral air agreement would specify such points as: the cities that airlines may serve and under what conditions, frequency of flights, routes, tariffs or pricing, safety and security and ground handling.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (OCT. 3) UPI - Mutinous soldiers seeking the ouster of President Corazon Aquino seized an army brigade camp on Mindanao island Thursday, prompting the armed forces chief to place troops on red alert.

In addition, Gen. Renato de Villa said, a bomb exploded at an army water pumping station near the capital, but no injuries were reported.

De Villa said he had contacted regional commanders who reported ''all their men are in place and support the chain of command.''

He said a small group of soldiers took over a remote brigade headquarters in the logging town of Butuan on Mindanao island, about 500 miles south of Manila shortly after midnight Wednesday.

De Villa said a bomb exploded at the suburban Fort Bonifacio army headquarters at 5:30 a.m., disabling its water pumping station but causing no injuries.

The capital appeared calm, but de Villa said he had requested Philippine Airlines and shipping companies to suspend shipping services to Butuan and the nearby cities of Iligan, Cagayan de Oro and Surigao.

Following the pre-dawn incidents, security aides of Aquino convened an emergency meeting at the presidential palace, according to national security adviser Rafael Ileto, who said he had been monitoring the situation.

De Villa, in a radio interview, said the soldiers who took over the army brigade headquarters in Butuan were led by two officers he identified only as Maj. Serdeno and Lt. Batac.

''We think this is a small thing that we can control within the day,'' de Villa said. He said there was no cause for concern, but that he had placed the 159,000-member armed forces on its highest state of readiness.

The bombing of Fort Bonifacio was the third in a month and 40th in the capital and surrounding towns since rebel soldiers mounted a destabilization campaign Aug. 13. The bombings caused severe damage and injured about several dozen people.

Aquino, 57, has crushed six coup attempts since she took power in a civilian-backed military revolt in 1986.

The last uprising in December killed some 100 people and wounded more than 500.

The current incidents came amid reports rebel soldiers would mount a coup attempt code-named ''August Moon,'' which under the Chinese calendar fell on Wednesday.

Under the plan, rebel soldiers would take over key cities in the south in a bid to spark a rebellion against Aquino in Manila, according to published news reports.

NEW YORK (OCT. 3) UPI - The number of U.S. mergers and acquisitions fell by 16 percent in the first three quarters of 1990 compared with the same period in 1989, a financial information company reported Wednesday.

However, according to IDD Information Services, M&A activity in Europe soared over the same three quarters as the number of deals rose 42 percent.

Some 3,193 M&A deals were announced in the United States through Sept. 30, down from 3,829 in the same period a year earlier, IDD Information Services said, noting that the total value of the 1990 transactions dropped by 47 percent to $172.4 billion from $331.5 billion in the 1989 nine months.

The number of completed U.S. acquisitions fell to 1,878 in the 1990 period from 2,076 in the year-earlier nine months, while the dollar value of the 1990 acquisitions fell to $136.4 billion from $174.5 billion.

In Europe, there were 3,993 deals in the first three quarters compared with 2,810 in the same period of 1989, IDD said. But the dollar value of those deals fell off by 22 percent, to $99.5 billion from $127.1 billion.

IDD attributed Europe's surge of M&A activity to the ongoing integration of the economies of the 12 European Community nations against a 1992 deadline. ''The removal of national barriers increases the potential for M&A, as industries consolidate and restructure to compete more effectively,'' IDD said.

The company said foreign buyers still show interest in U.S. acquisitions. To date in 1990, foreign companies or individuals have announced offers or bought a minority interest in 436 U.S. companies worth $46.8 billion, according to IDD figures.

Japan led the way, with 73 bids worth some $11 billion, followed by Britain, with 17 bids worth $9.9 billion, and France, with 29 bids worth $9.8 billion.

Among investment banks, Shearson Lehman Hutton's Lehman Brothers division led in the underwriting of M&A deals, with 63 deals worth some $34.6 billion in the first three quarters of 1990. In second place was Wasserstein Perella, with 26 deals worth $28.3 billion, and Lazard Freres placed third, with 28 deals worth some $27.3 billion.

There was a pronounced falloff in tender offers and leveraged buyouts, which IDD tied to the collapse of the market in high-yielding ''junk'' bonds issued by corporations. There were 82 tender offers in the first three quarters, down 53 percent from 178 in the same period of 1989. LBOs fell off 73 percent, to 11 from 38.

IDD said there had been only 10 issues of junk bonds so far this year, a 90 percent decrease.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 3) UPI - The Senate approved deep cuts Wednesday in President Bush's funding request for a manned space station and refused to give any money for his plans for manned missions to the Moon and Mars.

By a vote of 90-8, the Senate passed a $78.6 billion 1991 appropriations bill that included funding for a several government bodies, including NASA, the departments of Housing and Urban Development, Veterans Affairs and the Environmental Protection Agency.

The measure goes to a conference committee to iron out differences with the House appropriations bill before being presented to the president.

The Senate approved $13.4 billion for the NASA, a $1.2 billion increase over this year's funding level, but made dramatic cuts in key future projects. The total of $5.6 billion appropriated for NASA research and development projects fell nearly $1.5 billion below the administration's request.

The space station project, under which the United States would establish a permanent station orbiting the Earth, was tabbed for $1.6 billion, $863 million less than President Bush had asked.

The report by the Senate Appropriations Committee said the funding cut meant NASA would either have to push back the planned 1995 launch schedule for the plan or restructure the program that could lead to an abandonment of the permanent space station.

The Senate shunned the proposed manned missions to the Moon and Mars, a cornerstone of the president's desire for ambitious space explorations. The committee report called NASA's $500 billion estimated price tag for the plan an ''underestimate.'' The administration had asked for $360 million in 1991 research and development funds for the project.

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., called the affected projects ''very laudable,'' but said, ''When you consider the costs of the space station, when you consider the cost of the moon-Mars mission, you have to ask yourself, 'Are those really that critical when we're running these kinds of deficits and this country is facing this kind of trauma?'''

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, a one-time passenger on a space shuttle mission, said the cuts were ''unfortunate,'' noting that many medical and scientific advances stem from space programs.

The appropriations bill fell $2 billion below the amount already approved by the House for the same departments and programs. Included were a cut of $83 million in veterans medical care from the House level and a $1 billion cut in HUD programs. The Senate NASA budget is $839 million less than the House version.

NEW YORK (OCT. 3) UPI - Detroit Tigers slugger Cecil Fielder hit his 50th and 51st home runs of the year Wednesday night, becoming the first major leaguer in 13 years to reach those figures.

Fielder hit a 2-1 pitch from New York rookie Steve Adkins to join 10 other major leaguers with at least 50 in a season. He drew a standing ovation from the Yankee Stadium crowd, and his teammates greeted him as he crossed the plate.

In the eighth, Fielder hits his 51st homer, a three-run shot off rookie Alan Mills. Fielder's blast, on a 3-2 pitch, easily cleared the left-field wall.

The homer gave Fielder five RBI on the night and raised his major league-leading total to 132.

Not since Cincinnati's George Foster hit 52 in 1977 has any major- leaguer reached 50. Only one other Tiger, Hank Greenberg with 58 in 1938, has hit 50 or more homers. The feat has now been achieved 19 times, with Babe Ruth doing it on four occasions.

Fielder, a 6-foot-3, 230-pound native of Los Angeles, played last season with the Hanshin Tigers of the Japanese Central League. He hit 38 homers and had 81

RBI for Hanshin, which purchased him from the Toronto Blue Jays Dec. 22, 1988. He signed with Detroit on Jan. 15.

His major league-high for homers was 14 with Toronto in 1987. Entering the 1990 season, Fielder had hit only 31 major-league homers.

Daytime calls made during the week will be discounted 10 percent. This plan is tailored for the mid-sized customer who spends an average of $10-30 a month on long distance.

Out-of-state evening/night/weekend calls after the one hour flat rate are billed at a low competitive rate of less than 11 cents per minute. With this plan, at no additional charge, consumers also get 5 percent off direct dialed intrastate calls, international calls, and out-of-state FONCARD calls.

NEWBURY PARK, CA (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Semtech Corp. (ASE:SMH) Thursday announced that it has completed the purchase of assets of Lambda Semiconductors, a division of Lambda Electronics Inc. located in Corpus Christi, Texas, and Reynosa, Mexico.

Terms of the purchase were not immediately available.

The division, renamed Semtech Corpus Christi, was started in 1975. Products manufactured by Semtech Corpus Christi include linear and switching voltage regulators both monolithic and hybrid designs, darlington transistors, interface drivers, pulse width modulators, overvoltage protection devices, rectifiers, and a wide selection of semiconductor die for hybrid circuit applications.

Products have traditionally been manufactured for commercial and industrial power supply customers. Semtech said it intends to continue this emphasis but will explore military and aerospace applications as well.

Wafer fabrication, hybrid assembly and test, semiconductor test, engineering, marketing, and administration are located in Corpus Christi. Semiconductor assembly is located in Reynosa. The division currently has approximately 100 employees in Corpus Christi and 40 employees in Reynosa.

Semtech stated it plans to consolidate its silicon foundry business in Corpus Christi. All products manufactured at Semtech's wholly owned subsidiary, Polycore Electronics, will be transferred to Corpus Christi within about three months.

During the third quarter the company expects to record a one-time, non-operating charge of approximately $300,000 to write-off the remaining unutilized assets of Polycore Electronics. Closure of this facility is expected to save about $250,000 per year once all products are moved.

A company spokesman stated that the purchase represents a significant step in Semtech's plan to diversify its product offering and customer base. Semtech said its sales should be approximately 50 percent military/aerospace and 50 percent commercial and industrial.

Semtech was founded in 1960 and is a leading manufacturer of power rectifiers transient voltage suppressors, power voltage regulators and integrated circuits and power hybrids.

LOS ANGELES (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - The McDonald's Operators' Association of Southern California (M.O.A.S.C.) Thursday unveiled a breakthrough recycling program whose initial goal is to recycle 70 percent -- or an estimated 20 tons daily -- of the restaurant chain's in-store waste stream.

Initially, 80 McDonald's restaurants will participate in the program. More restaurants will come on the program as their current trash hauling contracts expire or as local city governments with exclusive trash hauling agreements allow McDonald's a special exemption to recycle in their community.

Partnering with McDonald's on the development and execution of the program is Perdomo & Sons Inc., a trash hauler based in East Los Angeles. Via specially routed trucks, Perdomo will pick up daily from the participating McDonald's restaurants and source separate the trash at his recycling facility.

McDonald's is the largest user of recycled paper in its industry, and is presently introducing new recycled bags made of unbleached paper in its restaurants.

McDonald's Operators' Association of Southern California is comprised of 340 restaurants located in a diverse geographic region that incorporates Los Angeles, Orange, San Bernardino, Riverside and Ventura counties.

McDonald's is the world's leading foodservice organization, serving 22 million people each day in more than 11,200 restaurants in 52 countries. About 75 percent of McDonald's restaurant businesses are locally owned and operated by independent entrepreneurs.

SACRAMENTO, CA (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Foundation Health Corp. will receive an interim adjustment in payments amounting to $6.2 million per month from the U.S. Department of Defense to handle projected increased health care costs in California and Hawaii related to the Operation Desert Shield deployment, the company announced Thursday.

''From a fiscal viewpoint, this is very good news for Foundation because the Department of Defense has quickly recognized that Operation Desert Shield will impact its medical benefits program cost,'' said Foundation Health Corp. President and Chief Executive Officer Daniel D. Crowley.

''Essentially, this is like receiving an additional military contract to handle unanticipated health care expenses generated by Desert Shield.''

The increased military costs are due to a reduction of medical resources at military bases due to Operation Desert Shield deployment, forcing more military families to seek medical care in the civilian sector under the government's CHAMPUS medical benefits program, which covers active duty dependents and retired military families.

''The military hospitals are continuing to do a fine job in providing services for military families, and reserve units are filling in some medical shortages '' Crowley said. ''But there nevertheless are gaps that must be handled by the civilian sector.''

Foundation administers the CHAMPUS Reform Initiative in the two states under a five year, $3 billion contract with the Department of Defense. Under that contract, the company receives approximately $525 million a year to provide health care services for 860,000 CHAMPUS eligibles in California and Hawaii.

The contract provides additional compensation for events which prompt certain unanticipated useage of the CHAMPUS program, such as military base closures or a reduction in military medical resources.

Operation Desert Shield has reduced hospital services by about 16 percent, and outpatient services by about 13 percent, in various military hospitals in California and Hawaii. That would mean that about $7.5 million per month in costs could be shifted to the CHAMPUS program if everyone continued receiving care at the same levels.

However, a government analysis of the situation lowered those estimates slightly because of the possibility that a small percentage of the affected population would simply refrain from receiving care because of the additional out-of-pocket expenses of the civilian program.

The calculations do not take into consideration possible additional expenses prompted by the call-up of reserves, whose families are immediately eligible for CHAMPUS benefits, or the fact that additional medical reserve units may balance military hospital capability. As more data becomes available, compensation levels to Foundation will be adjusted accordingly.

Crowley added that although the financial impact of the deployment was important, the human aspect of the CHAMPUS Reform Initiative should not be overlooked:

''The United States government has made a promise to military families that they'd receive health care when they need it, and we believe we're helping the Department of Defense meet that commitment during and extraordinary point in history.

''We're very proud to step into the breach to support the DoD at a time like this, and that our military and private-sector partnership is helping meet the health care needs of tens of thousands of military families.''

SAN DIEGO (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Starting in October, StatesWest Airlines Inc., a growing regional airline, operating as USAir Express, will be smiling all over the west as it displays a ''Smile'' on the nose of all its aircraft.

USAir and StatesWest officials made the announcement Thursday surrounded by employees with buttons and stickers with the slogan, ''A Little Smile Goes A Long Way.'' USAir Express unveiled the newest aircraft in the regional carriers fleet, a Dash 8-100, the first plane to have the smile painted on the nose.

''The smile will be an integral part of our fun-oriented West Coast customer service attitude and marketing campaign. Passengers will be able to connect on one of our smiling aircraft to the entire USAir system,'' said Rudy R. Miller, chairman and chief executive officer of StatesWest Airlines Inc.

Before it was bought by USAir, Pacific Southwest Airlines had painted smiles on the front of their fleet of aircraft as a marketing tool. The question at the time of the merger concerned the value of continuing to use the smile on all USAir aircraft.

''USAir completed extensive marketing studies which indicated that while the smile worked for PSA, a regional carrier whose route system was focused in California and other western states, it had little marketing benefit in other parts of the USAir system,'' said Lawrence M. Pickett, assistant vice president of corporate communications for USAir.

''The smile on USAir Express aircraft flying in the west will have a definite marketing appeal for our western regional passengers,'' said Pickett.

With the October schedule, USAir Express will operate approximately 108 daily departures between these locations.

The newest addition to the fleet, the Dash 8-100, is an advanced, 37-passenger propjet with flight attendant service, overhead storage and comfortable seating comparable to the Boeing 737 jet. USAir Express' current fleet of Beech 1900s are 19-passenger propjets that are pressurized and can obtain altitudes of up to 25,000 feet.

According to Miller, the smile will be painted on the entire fleet before the end of October. The company has a major aircraft acquisition program underway with all new planes displaying the smile.

PARK CITY, UTAH (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Fields Software Group, a sister company of Mrs. Fields Cookies, and Burger King Corp. Thursday announced the purchase by Burger King of a special computer software system known as Retail Intelligence Operations or ROI.

The announcement was made jointly by Randall K. Fields, chairman of Mrs.

Fields Inc., and John E. Foley, vice president of management information systems, Burger King Corp. Kathleen Dahlberg, director of retail develoment, Burger King Corp., will head up the system rollout to the company restaurants.

ROI is a knowledge-based propriety software system that has been developed by Mrs. Fields Cookies as a complete store information management system. ROI software is now used by Mrs. Fields in all the company's U.S. retail stores and in the company's La Petite Boulangerie bakery stores.

The system not only provides corporate management with daily sales data and other vital information, but also serves as a local management tool for the store manager.

''Management of any retail operation must have daily data to determine how the business is doing,'' said Fields.

''This is expecially true of multi-store operations such as Burger King and Mrs. Fields. At the same time, local managers should be spending most of their time addressing customer and employee matters instead of spending excessive time preparing and administering the necessary corporate paperwork.''

Top management will receive a wide variety of data daily from hundreds of field operations. ROI software is designed to be user-friendly so individual store managers can quickly learn how to operate it. The software helps identify daily and hourly sales targets and can also create weekly and daily work schedules.

Fields Software Group is currently engaged in marketing ROI software to other multi-store retail operations.

SAN DIEGO (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Sym-Tek Systems Inc. (NASDAQ:SYMK) has anounced the opening of Sym-Tek Korea Inc., a manufacturing, assembly and service facility in Korea.

This facility is a joint venture owned 50 percent by Sym-Tek and 50 percent owned by Aju Exim Inc., a Korean manufacturer's representative who formerly handled Sym-Tek sales in Korea.

The new facility is in leased space in an industrial complex outside of Seoul. Sym-Tek Korea has also purchased land in the area and plans to build its own facilities in the future, said Ray Twigg, president of Sym-Tek Systems Inc.

''Our commitment to own and operate here is based on the strong, continued growth of Korea's semiconductor memory market,'' said Twigg. ''We have been serving the Korean semiconductor market since 1988 from our facility in San Diego. Now we can serve the Korean market from a local company staffed mostly with Korean nationals,'' Twigg said.

''The success of this approach is seen in the bookings for Sym-Tek Korea, which were $3.9 million in the first six months of 1990, reflecting a $3.5 million order from Hyundai Electronics largely for our MP-3050 handler.''

The MP-3050 handler was introduced earlier this year and allows customers to test up to 16 memory semiconductor devices at one time. This handler can also process a veriety of device types with short changeover times from one device type to another.

NEW YORK (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Holiday Inn Worldwide, the world's leading hotel chain, will enter the upper economy segment of the hotel industry's middle market with the introduction of Holiday Inn Express, company officials announced Thursday.

Holiday Inn Express is the newest extension of the Holiday Inn brand portfolio which also includes Holiday Inn Crowne Plaza and Holiday Inn Garden Court hotels.

Holiday Inn Express offers only those facilities and services that guests want -- and are willing to pay for. Research shows that the two most important features to consumers in this segment are clean, comfortable rooms and efficient check-in and check-out. The company also found that a breakfast offering represents an added value to these customers.

As a result, Langton said the Express hotels will offer a stand alone breakfast and focus on functional standard rooms and quick transactions, as the name implies.

Upper economy brands have led the industry in growth over the past three years even as supply has increased, Langton said. With Holiday Inn and Holiday Inn Crowne Plaza both outperforming the industry in both occupancy levels and revenues in their respective segments, he said the company has great expectations for the new line.

Consumers are also looking for different hotel products for different travel occasions. ''The middle market is defined by lifestyle and travel experiences. As a result, consumers want a variety of products to meet their different travel needs. With this new product we offer consumers another choice under the Holiday Inn umbrella.

Langton said that company research shows that consumers are not as cost-conscious as they are value-conscious and that their expectations rise with price. ''Consumers don't want a cheap room. What they want is a good, clean room that's an excellent value. And that's why they get with Holiday Inn Express.''

Three Holiday Inn Express hotels will open initially, all conversions of company-managed hotels, in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., Nashville, Tenn. and Abilene, Texas.

Holiday Inn's brand portfolio is evolving to meet these distinct needs in the middle market with Holiday Inn Express and Holiday Inn Garden Court hotels in the upper economy segment, Holiday Inn hotels in the full-service segment, and Holiday Inn Crowne Plaza hotels in the upper end of the middle market.

EVERETT, WA (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - INTERMEC Corp. (NASDAQ: INTR) Thursday announced that the U.S. Federal Communications Commission (FCC) has granted the company the first and, so far, only license to offer for sale spread spectrum Radio Frequency Data Collection (RF/DC) systems.

RF/DC is widely regarded to be the wave of the future in data collection as it eliminates the need for cabling of interconnected devices. Spread spectrum technology offers three distinct advantages over conventional RF/DC. It transmits data at much faster rates. It is less susceptible to interference. And it requires no FCC license by the user at the site.

Many companies have recognized the trend toward spread spectrum RF/DC and are actively pursuing it. INTERMEC, as of Oct. 2, 1990, is the first and only company to have earned FCC approval to provide this leading edge technology.

REDONDO BEACH, CA (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - TRW has produced what it believes to be the most advanced working circuit using high-temperature superconductors TRW's Space & Technology Group announced Thursday.

The critical breakthrough was developing reproducible superfast switches, known as Josephson junctions, for the circuit.

Containing four active devices, TRW's circuit is a four-bit, analog-to-digital converter made from the rare earth compound yttrium barium copper oxide, often referred to as the 1-2-3 compound. Such circuits transform ordinary analog signals into the bits and bytes used by digital signal processing circuits found in computers and other modern electronic devices.

The circuit incorporates superconductors which operate between 40 and 77 degrees Kelvin (-420 to -360 degrees Fahrenheit). Superconductors made from easier-to-process metals typically operate between four and eight degrees Kelvin (-495 degrees Fahrenheit).

TRW's work is funded by the Defense Advanced Research Project Agency (DARPA) and monitored by the Office of Naval Research as part of its high-temperature superconductivity development program.

Superconductivity is the scientific phenomenon in which certain materials lose all resistance to the flow of electric current when they are cooled to hundreds of degrees (Fahrenheit) below zero. These materials can then conduct electricity without wasting power in overcoming resistance.

High-temperature circuits like the one demonstrated at TRW could be used in sophisticated digital electronic systems for spacecraft where power consumption and thermal control are key considerations.

TRW used innovative techniques to produce the superfast switches known as Josephson junctions in high-quality superconductor films. After intensive investigations of a variety of methods for producing a Josephson junction, the company was able to develop a process for creating reproducible devices with high performance.

TRW will apply this process to many different electronic circuits -- from magnetic sensors to analog-to-digital converters to microwave receivers and antennas.

The Josephson junction is named after Englishman Brian Josephson, who predicted that if two superconductors were placed very close together with an insulating barrier between, a current would flow between them through the insulating barrier with no applied voltage.

These junctions are built into radio frequency superconducting quantum interference devices, called RF SQUIDs. A SQUID in its simplest form consists of a Josephson junction and a loop of superconducting wire.

SQUIDs are extremely sensitive detectors of small magnetic fields. TRW's SQUIDs, operating at temperatures as high as liquid nitrogen temperatures (77 degrees Kelvin), demonstrated performance capabilities approaching those of commercially available low-temperature superconductors operating at liquid helium temperatures (four degrees Kelvin).

TRW's Space & Technology Group, based in Redondo Beach, has become a leading U.S. company in building superconducting integrated circuits after more than 10 years of ground-breaking research and development in is Applied Technology Division.

WESTBOROUGH, Mass. (OCT.4) BUSINESS WIRE - New England Electric System (NEES) the region's second largest electric utility, has dedicated more than $4 million in 1990 to conduct research on environmental concerns such as acid rain and global warming, and to spearhead advances in energy conservation.

Some of the environmentally-oriented research projects which NEES is independently conducting this year include:

-- Indentify and test different types of coal which can be burned in existing units and emit less sulfer dioxide.

-- Test new types of coal and oil burners in our power plants to improve efficiency, utilize a wider range of fuels, and reduce emissions.

-- Analyze downstream migration habits of Atlantic salmon to determine methods which could assist the fish as they bypass hydroelectric plants on the Connecticut River.

-- Investigate various methods to manage vegetative growth in wetland areas under transmission lines in an effort to minimize environmental impacts.

In addition to environmental research, NEES also is conducting research to increase efficient energy use by its customers through development of innovative conservation and load management programs.

NEES also has committed a total of $4.5 million to work on a broad range of research initiatives in cooperation with other utilities across the country through the Electric Power Research Institute (EPRI), a non-profit organization headquartered in Palo, Alto, Calif. Approximately $1.6 million of the EPRI funding is included in the $4 million cited earlier.

LITTLETON, MA (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Alliant Computer Systems Corp. (NASDAQ:ALNT) reported Thursday that third quarter 1990 revenue will be approximately 10-15 percent lower than third quarter 1989 and that the company will report a loss from operations of between $5 million and $6 million, or approximately 40 cents per share.

In addition, the company will record a nonrecurring charge in excess of $20 million consisting primarily of a writedown in the value of certain assets. Final results for the quarter will be disclosed in approximately three weeks. For the 1989 third quarter, revenue totalled $17.2 million and earnings were 6 cents per share.

''Revenues for the third quarter were impacted by the continuing product transition to the FX/2800 supercomputer, and further affected by the adverse economic and business climate,'' said Craig Mundie, president and chief operating officer. ''The FX/2800 continues to generate significant customer inquiry and evaluation, and new FX/2800 system bookings increased over last quarter,'' Mundie added.

''Alliant will record the nonrecurring charge and will institute tight expense controls in order to improve cash flow and return to profitability as quickly as possible,'' Mundie said.

CARLSBAD, Calif. (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - GASCARD Inc. (OTC) of Carlsbad Thursday announced earnings for its fourth quarter and a record profit for the fiscal year ended Aug. 31.

The company reported net profits of $11,614, or .02 cent per share, on $1,357,222 in revenues for the fourth quarter ended Aug. 31, compared with a gain of $74,068, or .1 cent per share, on $1,348,966 in revenues for the fourth quarter in the prior year.

The company reported net profits of $155,635, or .2 cent per share, on $5,065,569 in revenues for the fiscal year ended Aug. 31, 1990, compared with a loss of $568,192, or 1 cent per share, on $4,722,826 in revenues for the prior year.

GASCARD believes that environmental concerns and fleet managers' growing interest in fuel management will benefit the company in the coming year.

Thomas L. Jewell, president and chief operating officer, said: ''GASCARD anticipated the need for fleet managers to automate their fleet fueling operations and its reporting in order to contain rising fuel costs. GASCARD provides the best business solution for these managers.

''In addition, the Environmental Protection Agency regulations affecting the owners and operators of underground fuel storage tanks will further increase demand for the company's services as those owners and operators decide to remove those tanks in favor of using GASCARD's network of fleet fueling locations.''

Background

GASCARD provides fuel management services to tens of thousands of commercial fleets that transact over 12 million gallons of fuel per month through more than 2,000 locations in 39 states. GASCARD has developed and markets nationally a comprehensive card-activated fuel management system designed to reduce commercial and governmental fleet fueling costs.

The GASCARD system can prevent unauthorized purchases, lower accounting, administrative and other costs of fleet fueling, and eliminate or lessen the environmental risks of underground fuel storage tank ownership or operation.

Each billing cycle, the GASCARD system reports complete fleet fueling transaction data -- date, time, site, vehicle, driver, odometer, miles per gallon, cents per mile, product, volume, price, extension and excise tax details -- that fleet managers can use to maximize fleet efficiency.

Through the company's franchisees, which are typically independent petroleum marketers, the GASCARD system is marketed primarily for use by local and regional delivery, sales and service fleets, such as fuel and beverage distributors, overnight package delivery services, taxis, public utilities and government agencies.

The company was originally organized in May 1981 and went public through an offering of its common stock in March 1987. In January 1990, the U.S. Patent Office issued Patent No. 4,891,503 to GASCARD for its Distributed Authorization System.

This sophisticated database management program automatically maintains individualized subsets of the company's national database in local point-of-sale terminals, which enables them to authorize and process transactions almost instantaneously without recourse to GASCARD's central computer and thus at a greatly reduced telecommunications cost.

GASCARD's common stock is traded on the over-the-counter market.

MILPITAS, CA (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Logic Modeling Systems Inc., developer of the LM-1000, the industry-standard hardware modeling system, Thursday announced general availability of the 68040 Logic Model, the first full-function simulation model of the Motorola 68040 microprocessor.

Limited quantities were previously distributed to certain Motorola customers under Logic Modeling's Early Availability program.

The 68040 Logic Model is the latest addition to Logic Modeling's extensive library of 32-bit microprocessors that already includes the other members of the Motorola 68000 family plus products from the Motorola 88000 family.

''New, complex technologies and increasing market pressures have made accurate full-function simulation models of microprocessors necessary tools for system designers,'' said Roy Druian, 68040 product manager at Motorola. ''So necessary, in fact, that Motorola and Logic Modeling worked closely together to provide 68040 Logic Models to certain customers well before the release of production silicon.

''These customers have already realized substantial improvement in the quality of their designs.''

Hardware modeling solves the simulation model availability problem for system and ASIC designers by allowing the physical VLSI device to be used to model its own behavior during design verification. Logic Models can execute actual system code enabling more thorough system verification.

The LM-1000 Logic Model Library provides designers with access to over 600 hardware models of important VLSI devices on the market today. The LM-1000 hardware modeling system is platform- and simulator-independent.

Logic Modeling sells through OEM relationships with EDA vendors including Cadence, GenRad, IKOS, Mentor Graphics, Racal-Redac, Scientific Calculations, Siemens, Teradyne, Valid, Vantage Analysis Systems, Viewlogic Systems, Zycad Corp., and to companies with proprietary simulators.

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (OCT.4) BUSINESS WIRE - GE Power Generation announced Thursday that it has signed two offshore contracts totaling $62.8 million for the supply of gas turbines for use in the production of electrical power.

The first contract is for a 230-megawatt Uruguayan power plant to be built in consortium with an Argentine constructor, Techint. The total project cost is $79 million; GE's share of the project is $56 million. Based on U.S. usage, this power plant could meet the electrical power needs for a city of 165,000 people, roughly the size of Chattanooga, Tenn.

The contract is with the national utility of Uruguay, Administracion Nacional de Usinas y Trasmisiones Electricas (UTE), and calls for the supply and installation of two GE MS9001E gas turbines -- the first 9Es to be installed in Latin America. The power plant will supply back-up power for the UTE system. It will be located at La Tablada, a suburb of Montevideo, the capital of Uruguay.

The project includes supply and installation of equipment and spares, transportation, plant construction and start-up. It also calls for the construction of a pipeline from a nearby refinery to supply oil for fuel, as well as a short transmission line to a main substation for the existing 150 KV grid.

The first gas turbine is slated for shipment in December of this year and the second during the first quarter of 1991. The two units are scheduled to be installed by the second half of 1991, with total project completion slated for the second quarter of 1992.

The second contract is for the supply of an MS5001PA gas turbine-generator for a power plant to provide electricity to Caltex Petroleum Corp.'s oil fields in Sumatra, Indonesia. GE received the $6.8 million order through the consortium of P.T. Imeco and Tripatra Engineering, which is developing the project for Caltex.

The 26-megawatt turbine-generator will be installed as unit no. 6 in Caltex's Minas Power Station and will use natural gas, crude oil and distillate as fuel. Five MS5001LA units are currently installed in the power station.

In addition to the gas turbine-generator GE will provide controls for the unit. Slated for shipment in December of this year, the unit is scheduled for operation during the first quarter of 1992.

BASKING RIDGE, N.J. (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - AT&T Thursday announced that it is expanding its DESERT FAX service to include 23 military bases in the United States.

DESERT FAX is a free service that enables family and friends to send one-page fax messages to American military personnel serving in the Middle East. Previously, the service was available only from AT&T's 400 Phone Centers nationwide.

However, the service has proved so popular that the military asked AT&T to set up fax machines or fax collection points at designated bases. These bases have sent large numbers of troops to the Middle East and are not near any AT&T Phone Center.

In addition to the 23 bases with direct connections to the DESERT FAX system, six other bases are collecting faxes for transmission elsewhere.

''By expanding the service in this way, thousands of additional people will be able to send fax messages to friends and family participating in Operation Desert Shield,'' said Robert Dalziel, AT&T Vice President - Global Networks.

More than 40,000 messages have been sent via DESERT FAX since it began Sept. 21. AT&T will operate the service through the end of the year, and is spending $1 million in start-up and operation costs. After the faxes are sent to the Middle East, the Military Postal Service delivers them to troops at regular mail calls.

''The Military Postal Service has the last and most difficult leg of a DESERT FAX message's long journey from a Phone Center to a foxhole, air base or ship '' Dalziel said. ''We couldn't do it without them.''

Because the fax messages are sent electronically, the time required to reach the Military Postal Service in the Middle East is significantly reduced.

Special fax forms for the service are available at the bases listed below. People fill in the forms with the name of a person stationed in the Mideast, the APO/FPO address, and the person's military identification number. A designated space for a written message or drawing occupies three-fourths of the form. Without a valid APO/FPO address, the message cannot be sent.

Military Bases offering DESERT FAX are: Fort Hood, Texas; Ft. Huachuca, Ariz.; Ft. Stewart, Ga.; Ft. Bragg, N.C.; Ft. Campbell, Kty.; Ft. Drum, N.Y.; Dover Air Force Base, Del.; MacDill Air Force Base, Fla.; Pope Air Force Base, N.C.; Keesler Air Force Base, Miss.; Shaw Air Force Base, S.C.; McGuire Air Force Base, N.J. (also serves Ft. Dix); Griffis Air Force Base, N.Y.; Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.; (also serves Hurlbert Field); Chanute Air Force Base, Ill.; Columbus Air Force Base, Miss.; Vance Air Force Base, Okla.; Laughlin Air Force Base, Texas; Goodfellow Air Force Base, Texas; Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas; Camp Lejune, North Carolina; Marine Air Station, Yuma, Ariz.; Marine Corps Air/Ground Combat Center, 29 Palms, Calif.

In addition, DESERT FAX collection points have been set up on the following bases, with messages transmitted from a site off-base: Kaneohe Marine Corps Air Station, Hawaii; Naval Station Pearl Harbor, Hawaii; Hickam Air Force Base Hawaii; Ft. DeRussy, Hawaii; Roosevelt Roads Naval Station, Puerto Rico; Fort Buchanan, Puerto Rico.

ROSLYN, N.Y. (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Cheyenne Software Inc. (AMEX:CYE) (''Cheyenne'') reported that for the year ended June 30, consolidated revenues of Cheyenne and its 53 percent owned subsidiary, Gates/FA, a microcomputer distributor, (NASD:FACO) were $168,209,000 as compared to $99,223,000 for the year ended June 30, 1989.

The net loss was $2,062,000, or ($.21) per share, for fiscal year 1990 vs. a net loss of $2,118,000, or ($.23) per share, in the prior period.

Cheyenne's management anticipates that Cheyenne will be profitable on a consolidated basis for the quarter ended Sept. 30, and for the year as a whole. Gates/FA's sales continue to build and cost savings realized are expected to contribute to its profitability. Cheyenne's software sales increases are anticipated principally from recently signed original equipment manufacturers (''OEM'') agreements.

Gates/FA's sales grew from $98,625,000 for fiscal year 1989 to $166,490,000 for fiscal year 1990, a 69 percent increase over the previous year.

Operating income (before interest expense) increased to $2,927,000 as compared to $1,458,000 in the previous year. Income before income taxes and extraordinary credit for fiscal year 1990 was $110,000.

Management expects lower sales growth but higher profits during fiscal year 1991.

In fiscal year 1990, Cheyenne's software business emerged from the development stage; its sales grew 187 percent from $598,000 to $1,719,000. The successful introduction of ARCserve and Monitrix, widely acclaimed data backup and management products for the rapidly growing local area network (LAN) marketplace, were mainly responsible for the sales growth.

A number of important OEM agreements for those products were signed during the last seven months. Revenues from some of these agreements were initiated during the fourth fiscal quarter of 1990, accelerated during the first fiscal quarter of 1991 and are expected to continue to grow during the current fiscal year.

AMSTELVEEN, The Netherlands (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - KLM results for the second quarter of 1990/91 (July through September), though positive, are expected to show a considerable decline compared to last year's second quarter.

This can mainly be attributed to sharply rising fuel prices and insurance premiums and the influence of weakening currency exchange rates on revenues. These factors are affecting many airlines in the world, including those in which KLM has holdings.

If these factors continue to exert their influence through the coming winter, then the results for fiscal 1990/91 - as far as can currently be foreseen - will show a significant loss.

ROUYN-NORANDA, QUEBEC (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Lyon Lake Mines Ltd. (LLL:ME) announces that drilling has started on the Beta Vargas property located in Costa Rica.

Lyon Lake has the right to acquire a 50 percent interest in this property. The exploration program consists of 21 drill holes to confirm and possibly increase the 6,700,000 tons of reserves grading 0.034 ounce of gold per short ton, as evaluated by Minera Nacional S.A. (Minasa), Costa Rica's governmental exploration office.

Following receipt of the required permits and rights-of-way, drilling started in August 1990. Four drill holes have been completed up to now. Assays are conducted by MetricLab, a Canadian laboratory. The results from drill hole No.1, located at the south-eastern extremity of the deposit, are as follows:

16.7 m to 34.7 m	18	59	0.035
including 20.5 m to 31.4 m	10.9	35	0.049

In addition, the geologist in charge of the drilling program has reported having observed the same alteration and mineralization in drill holes No.2, 3 and 4. The drilling program should be completed in December 1990 and will be followed by heap leaching tests and a feasibility study.

The actual reserves of the Beta Vargas property occur in a 70-meter high, non wooded hill, located near infrastructures necessary for a mining operation (paved road, electricity, water, manpower). In the event of a positive decision to start production and the receipt of operation and environment permits, the company plans a 3,000 to 5,000-tonne per day open pit operation, without the use of explosives, owing to the state of oxidation of the ore and the heap leaching method used to treat the ore. The property could be put into production by the end of 1991.

In other respects, Lyon Lake was advised by Mosquito Consolidated Gold Mines Ltd., at the end of September 1990, of its intention to resign as Operator of the Mosquito Project located in British Columbia. Transfer of operatorship will be effective on Nov. 1, 1990. The interest held by Lyon Lake in this former gold producer will then be approximately 52 percent.

WHITE PLAINS, NY (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - NYNEX Corporation announced Thursday that its New England Telephone and New York Telephone subsidiaries have entered into a Consent Decree with the Federal Communications Commission resolving allegations of excessive charges to them by NYNEX Materiel Enterprises Company (MECO) for equipment and services from 1984 through 1988.

The FCC said that such charges included MECO profits that exceeded the telephone companies' prescribed interstate rate of return.

As part of the Consent Decree, the FCC will terminate its proceeding against the NYNEX telephone companies without any finding of violation or liability on their part, and without any finding that forfeitures are necessary.

The NYNEX telephone companies will make a one-time $35.5 million reduction in interstate rates and a $1.4 million payment to the U.S. Treasury. As part of the agreement, the telephone companies have already reduced their capital accounts by $32.6 million to remove the alleged excess profits on plant and equipment purchased from MECO.

The Consent Decree resolves issues raised when the FCC released a Notice of Apparent Liability on February 8 that said New England Telephone and New York Telephone booked their purchases of equipment and services from MECO at prices that violated policies requiring telephone companies to book transactions with affiliates at prices reflecting the prescribed interstate rate of return. This, according to the report, resulted in MECO overcharges of $118 million to the telephone companies from 1984 through 1988.

NYNEX denied any wrongdoing, citing that it had complied with the Commission's cost allocation rules when they became effective in 1988 and that the FCC staff based its findings on an interpretation of a 1977 ruling relating to transactions between Western Electric and AT&T in the former Bell System. NYNEX continues to disagree with the FCC's interpretation.

NYNEX also created an Affiliate Transaction Compliance Office in July. This office ensures the corporation's continuing compliance with all accounting standards, legal precedents and regulatory rules as they apply to transactions among NYNEX affiliates.

DALLAS (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Oryx Energy Co. (NYSE:ORX) Thursday announced the completion of 18 successsful horizontal wells, including three exploration discoveries, in the Pearsall Field during the quarter ending Sept. 30.

The wells tested at a combined rate of 13,100 barrels of oil per day (BOPD) and 7 million cubic feet of gas per day (MMcf/D).

During 1990, Oryx Energy has increased its Pearsall Field average gross daily production by 230 percent -- from 6,600 BOPD in January to the current level of 22,000 BOPD. Associated gross natural gas production increased by about 450 percent over the same period, from 2 MMcf/D to 11 MMcf/D. The company's average income interest in its horizontal wells is 80 percent.

Through September, Oryx Energy has completed 55 gross horizontal wells, including 12 discovery wells, and expects to complete 75 gross wells in the Pearsall Field by year's end.

Based in part on data provided by Oryx Energy, the Texas Railroad Commission (TRC) has made permanent the temporary special rules regulating horizontal drilling in the Pearsall Field.

The TRC rules provide for higher allowables and acreage assignments for horizontal wells. The TRC hearing examiner said it is clear that the field is continuing to be developed with horizontal drainhole wells at a remarkable rate and that the temporary field rules appear to be appropriate in the effective and efficient depletion of the reservoir. The temporary rules were adopted in August 1989, in response to an Oryx Energy petition.

Dallas-based Oryx Energy Co. is the largest independent oil and gas producer in the world, with assets in excess of $5 billion and proved reserves of more than 1 billion equivalent barrels.

Oryx Energy conducts its domestic operations through Sun Energy Partners L.P., of which it is managing general partner and 98-percent owner. Oryx Energy trades on the New York Stock Exchange with the symbol ''ORX'' and the partnership with the symbol ''SLP.''

PORTLAND, ME (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Peoples Heritage Financial Group Inc. (NASDAQ:PHBK) announced Thursday that the results for the third quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990 would not be publicly released until near the end of October 1990.

The company stated the two-week delay provides an opportunity to incorporate into the third quarter results some of the preliminary views of federal and state examiners who recently commenced their regular examination of the company's principal banking subsidiary, Peoples Heritage Bank.

William J. Ryan, president and chief executive officer of the company said, ''Although the federal and state examiners may not have completed their respective examinations by the end of October, the value to our shareholders associated with incorporating a significant amount of their work warrants the slight delay.''

Ryan further stated that preliminary results of the third quarter indicate that the unfavorable real estate market and a weakening economy in general continue to adversely affect the company. ''At the end of the third quarter we will announce an increase in our non-performing loans, loan writedowns and a corresponding increase in our reserves for loan losses.

The combination of these events, he stated, ''will result in a significant third quarter loss and a management recommendation to suspend the payment of the company's regular quarterly dividend until economic conditions improve.'' At June 30, 1990, the company's stockholder equity amounted to $225.5 million or 7.8 percent of total assets.

Peoples Heritage Financial Group Inc. is the largest Maine-based bank holding company with assets of $2.9 million as of June 30, 1990. FAIRFIELD, NJ (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Measurement Specialties Inc. announced Thursday that a two member committee of the National Association of Securities Dealers Inc. voted to delist the company's common stock from trading on the NASDAQ system effective Oct. 2 as a result of the company's failure to timely file its Annual Report on Form 10-K for the year ended March 31 and its quarterly report on Form 10-Q for the three months ended June 30.

NEW ORLEANS (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Freeport-McMoRan Copper Co. Inc. (NYSE:FCX), Thursday declared a cash dividend for the three months ended Sept. 30, 1990, of 55 cents per share on its Class A and Class B common stock payable Nov. 1, 1990, to all common shareholders of record at the close of business on Oct. 15, 1990.

The amount of the dividend significantly exceeds the minimum cumulative quarterly dividend on the Class A common stock through the five-year period ending May 1, 1993, which is currently 10-1/4 cents per share.

The dividend amount reflects the continued excellent operating and financial performance of the company's Indonesian copper/gold operations, despite increased interest expense attributable to placing into operation certain facilities to accommodate production from the Grasberg copper/gold ore body. Prior to 1990, all interest costs associated with the Grasberg project had been capitalized.

Future quarterly cash dividends will continue to be based on actual operating and financial results and capital requirements. The amount of this dividend may not be indicative of future cash dividends.

CHICAGO (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Medical Management of America Inc. (NASDAQ:MMOA) announced Thursday that it will omit its regular quarterly dividend of 6-3/4 cents per share of common stock which would have ordinarily been declared this October.

SAN FRANSISCO (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - The board of directors of Phoenix Laser Systems Inc. (NASDAQ:PXLS) Thursday announced that they have adopted a voluntary conversion plan for the holders of Phoenix Preferred Stock (NASDAQ:PXLSP).

The conversion offer calls for each share of Phoenix Preferred Stock to be converted into 4.25 shares of the company's common stock plus a warrant permitting the holder to purchase a share of Phoenix common stock at $1.50 per share.

On Oct. 2, the company's preferred stock closed at $8.13 bid/$8.50 asked; the common stock closed at $1.94 bid/$2.06 asked; and the warrant at $1.00 bid/$1.22 asked. The offer will expire on Friday, Oct. 26 at 5 p.m., Pacific Time.

The company is making the offer in a move to end arbitrage between the preferred and common stock. Following an analysis of market patterns for the past four months, the company believes that this arbitrage is maintaining an artificial downward pressure on the market prices of the company's common stock. In the conversion, the company seeks to eliminate the potential for arbitrage profit and remove the negative pressure on the stock price.

Currently there are 357,205 shares of Phoenix Preferred Stock outstanding; 8,414,963 shares of Phoenix Common Stock outstanding; and 1,718,950 Phoenix warrants outstanding.

Phoenix Laser Systems Inc. is a developer of integrated laser workstations primarily for use by the medical community. DALLAS (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Just over a year ago, the Law Enforcement Television Network (LETN) became the first satellite television network to broadcast news, training and information programs 24-hours-a-day to police departments and the law enforcement community.

Today, LETN serves more than 2,000 law enforcement agencies and is endorsed by prominent law enforcement organizations. The innovative network also has been installed in the offices of Richard Thornburgh, U.S. attorney general, and William Bennett, director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy.

''LETN has far exceeded many expectations in its first year on the air,'' said Billy Prince, president of LETN and 24-year law enforcement veteran. ''We are delighted with the support we have received in our efforts to provide law enforcement professionals with the training they need to combat today's criminals.''

The following are among LETN's achievements in the past year:

- LETN established a formal relationship with the International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP). The LETN-IACP alliance continues to grow and strengthen, with LETN broadcasting IACP training bulletins, legislative updates and model policies.

LETN also broadcasts information on upcoming IACP events and news about members. Many IACP training instructors assist with LETN programming and LETN transmits programming from the annual IACP conference.

''The IACP is recognized as the leading authority for law enforcement professionalism worldwide,'' said Prince. ''IACP's relationship with LETN adds immeasurably to our credibility as a training resource.''

- On the federal front, LETN finalized an agreement with the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center (FLETC), one of the primary training centers for federal law enforcement employees. LETN will broadcast 40 hours of instruction each year provided by FLETC.

- LETN began producing the ''Drug Crackdown'' program, which is taught by Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) agents in cooperation with state and municipal law enforcement agencies.

''Drugs are recognized as our nation's most devastating problem,'' said Neal Trautman, LETN director of training. ''For the first time in the history of American law enforcement, the officers battling in the street drug war are being furnished with the world's best drug enforcement training, news and information constantly through LETN.''

- The Southern Police Institute, a division of the University of Louisville began working with LETN to offer continuing education credits and certifications based on training received from the network. The arrangement allows officers to take exams based on particular programs, receive test results and have these results become part of their permanent record.

LETN broadcasts its unique programming five days a week via a scrambled signal that is received by a satellite dish installed at the location of each subscriber. Subscribers pay a monthly fee of $288 to $588, depending on the size of the police department or agency. For their monthly fee, subscribers receive training programs and updates on drugs, officer survival, weapons and scientific techniques to use in fighting crime in their communities.

LETN also offers up-to-the-minute newscasts covering the latest developments in the law enforcement profession.

LETN is operated by Westcott Communications, the nation's largest business television firm. In addition to LETN, the company operates the Automotive Satellite Television Network (ASTN), which broadcasts training, news and information programming to more than 5,000 car dealerships in North America.

Westcott Communications also provides customized satellite television services to Fortune 1000 companies through its Business Television Services Division. The company recently announced the 1991 launch of the Professional Security Television Network (PSTN), which will broadcast to professional security managers, specialists and officers. Westcott Communications (NASDAQ:WCTV) is headquartered in Dallas.

CHICAGO (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - As disclosed in an interview with a major wire service Thursday, Wells-Gardner Electronics Corporation reported preliminary earnings for its third quarter ended September 30, 1990, should be substantially higher than its previous breakeven estimate on much higher volume.

Frank J. Myers, Wells-Gardner's chairman and president, stated, ''Review of our just completed third quarter shows that sales more than doubled to $11.8 million from the prior year's third quarter sales of $5.7 million. Our preliminary estimate indicates net income will fall somewhere between $410,000 and $525,000 or, on a per share basis, between 11 to 14 cents. In last year's quarter we lost $881,000, or 23 cents a share. Of that, the loss from continuing operations amounted to 679,000, or 18 cents a share.

''In our earlier forecast, we anticipated more softening in the market durin the quarter. Instead, the momentum of the first half of the year continued. We continued to strengthen our customer base and exports plus we saw demand remain at reasonable levels for large screen monitors which resulted in a positive earnings swing in excess of $1 million. All this was accomplished despite the fact that the large television assembly contract we've announced has not contributed to the extent we expected,'' Myers continued. ''It has added 13 percent of the third quarter's sales gain and 26 percent of the nine months' increase.

''For the nine months, that would put us on a preliminary basis at about $35.8 million in revenue and 35 to 38 cents in net earnings with 25 to 27 cents from continuing operations and 10 or 11 cents from tax credits,'' he added. ''Net sales for all of 1989 were $33.2 million.

''Improved third quarter results were due to the increased sales, improved product mix and material cost reductions. Export sales have strengthened, particularly in the U.K. and Mexico, and, through a major U.S. customer, we are initiating a pilot program in Germany during the fourth quarter. We have broadened our customer base. We now have 10 customers in the million dollar sales category and our top three customers account for less than 30 percent of sales,'' he said.

''Our outlook for the fourth quarter is positive, although we are beginning to see further signs of softness in certain market segments. We expect to better our fourth quarter 1989 results when we had sales of $8.6 million with an $88,000 loss on continuing operations.'' he concluded.

The company also announced that it has entered into a Letter of Intent with James Electronics, Chicago, to sell its previously discontinued power supply business, effective October 1, 1990.

Wells-Gardner Electronics Corporation designs and manufactures electronic products which are marketed both domestically and internationally. Its major products are video monitors for the data display and gaming industries.

Paris (OCT. 4) - Fourth-quarter oil consumption in countries belonging to the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (Oecd) will drop about 1 per cent to 38.9 barrels a day compared to a year ago, the International Energy Agency (Iea) said Thursday.

The drop would be ''primarily a consequence of higher oil prices and lower economic growth'', the Iea said. The agency expects oil consumption during the first quarter of 1991 to increase slightly over the figure of 38.5 million barrels a day recorded this year.

French Economics and Finance Minister Pierre Beregovoy, speaking in Paris, said that despite the United Nations-imposed embargo on Iraq and Kuwait, there was currently ''no oil shortage''. He attributed price speculation to pessimistic expectations.

According to the Iea, ''Eight weeks after the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, world supplies of crude oil remain adequate.'' It estimated that the Oecd had 95 days of oil reserves on October 1, adding that there were commercial reserves that would last for another 67 days.

In the Oecd, which groups 25 industrialised democracies, oil consumption during the third quarter rose 3 percent compared to a year ago - to 37.6 million barrels a day. In the U.S., consumption rose by 2 percent, and in Europe by 3 percent.

ANKARA (OCT. 4) - The current troubles of British group Polly Peck International are causing concern in Turkish-controlled northern Cyprus, where Polly Peck chairman Asil Nadir controls some 30 per cent of the economy.

The success of Mr. Nadir's activities in northern Cyprus have aided the economic recovery of the area held by Turkey and which Ankara hopes to see achieve "economic independence" by 1993.

Northern Cyprus has seen average seven percent economic growth in recent years largely thanks to funding from Ankara since the Turkish invasion in 1974 and the high level of investment by Mr. Nadir's group.

In addition to Polly Peck International's fruit concern Del Monte and Japanese electronics concern Sansui, Mr. Nadir's investments cover northern Cyprus' leading building, tourism, textile, citrus fruit, medicines and press groups, employing 10,000 people out of a total population of 160,000.

Exports from the northern part of the island totalled 57 million dollars last year, two thirds of it from Mr. Nadir's concerns.

Mr. Nadir, seen as an ambassador abroad for Turkish-controlled northern Cyprus whose government is recognised only by Ankara, is considered in some circles as a possible successor to Turkish Cypriot leader Rauf Denktash.

He is a close associate of Turkish President Turgut Ozal and controls 40 per cent of the Turkish press.

There are fears here that the recent troubles of Polly Peck, which has halted payments to its creditors and is asking for a roll-over of 117 million pounds (222 million dollars) in short-term debt, could have a severe effect on the northern Cyprus economy.

Polly Peck has been taken off the Footsie index of 100 leading shares in London since trading in the stock was suspended last month in the wake of a halving of the share price in a single day.

Talks between Mr. Nadir and Mr. Ozal in the United States last week focussed on possible financial aid from Ankara to help the group, said by the Turkish foreign minister to be the victim of a bid by Greek Cypriots to damage northern Cyprus' economic development.

KUALA LUMPUR (OCT. 4) - Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad said Thursday he would dissolve parliament Friday and call for a snap election one year ahead of schedule.

King Sultan Azlan Shah consented to the dissolution of the 177-seat parliament Mahathir told reporters after meeting with officials of his multi-racial National Front coalition government.

The date of the election will be fixed by the Election Commission soon, he said.

Mahathir will meet the chief ministers of the 11 states in Malaysia to dissolve their state assemblies on the same day.

''Our National Front coalition party is all set for the battle. We are confident that we will not only win but gain a two-thirds majority in parliament,'' Mahathir said.

''The verdict of the people will be with us,'' he added.

KABUL (OCT. 4) - Government and mujahedeen fighters are engaged in a fierce fight for control of the central Afghan province of Uruzgan, but the province has not fallen to the resistance, the Kabul government said Thursday.

"The governor has not surrendered and the government is in control of Tarin Kot (the provincial capital)," spokesman Humayun Mukammel said here.

He was replying to mujahedeen claims early Thursday that Uruzgan had become the fifth Afghan province to fall under their control after three weeks of heavy fighting.

The reports, from mujahedeen sources in Pakistan, said green resistance flags were flying at Tarin Kot airport and on other important buildings in the town after the surrender of province governor Abdul Shakoor.

"There has been long range (mujahedeen) shelling and rocketting, the government is also carying out attacks against the opposition (mujahedeen)," Mr. Mukammel said, but was unable to give further details.

He described the battle for the province as "fierce long-range combat" and said it was continuing.

There was no independent confirmation in Kabul of either the mujahedeen reports or the government denial.

PARIS (OCT 4) - European Commissioner Martin Bangemann called here Thursday for an end to the excessive fears of some European businessmen and governments towards Japanese competition, particularly in the auto industry.

Mr. Bangemann, the deputy Commission president for industrial affairs stressed at a press conference however that European car makers would not have their sales blocked at their current level during a transitional period to an opening of the European markets to the Japanese up to 1998.

Former French European Affairs Minister Edith Cresson had said that this would be the case, with any increase in the market during the period being given to Japanese cars.

Stressing that the European industry was already performing well, Mr. Bangemann said that a 19 per cent Japanese share of the market in 1998 mentioned by Mrs. Cresson was a ceiling level.

He also said that the Commission was planning "a safeguard clause for European vehicles" if the market shrank.

The European Economic Community "must not create the impression that its businessmen are too weak to face up to the Japanese," he said, citing "a certain French businessman who wants to see relations with the Japanese government by a series of principles which he alone supports."

The president of French car maker Peugeot, Jacques Calvet, said this week he wanted to see a halt to market opening negotiations with Japan.

He called for the adoption of a series of principles including a halt to building new Japanese car plants in Europe and continuing quotas on Japanese imports for 10 years from January 1, 1993.

"There is no alternative to the progressive opening of the market, unless it is the immediate opening of the European single market" in 1993, Mr. Bangemann said.

RIO DE JANEIRO (OCT. 4) - Results of Wednesday's first round legislative and local elections in Brazil have shored up support for President Fernando Collor de Mello and his free market economic austerity program, according to preliminary results available Thursday.

In the polls, some 84 million registered voters were choosing 31 senators -- a third of the chamber, new representatives to the 503-seat Chamber of Deputies, 27 state governors and 1,049 delegates to regional leglislatures.

The final results of Wednesday's vote are not expected for two weeks.

Although the election was not billed as a referendum or Mr. Collor's radical economic policies, the results appeared to have favored candidates from his center-right coalition or others identified as supporters of the new president's plans to open the country to free trade and greater foreign investment.

A runoff is scheduled for November 25 for gubernatorial candidates who failed to win at least 50 per cent of the vote Wednesday. Those elections will determine, among others, the victors in Sao Paulo and Minas Gerais -- the country's most populous states.

In Sao Paulo, conservative candidates Paulo Maluf, a former governor from the Social Democratic Party, and Luis Fleury of the centrist Brazilian Democratic Movement Party will go on to the second round.

In Minas Gerais, former rightist governor Helio Garcia and populist conservative Helio Costa or Pimenta da Veiga, of the center left, were to face off in the runoffs.

In those races already decided after the first round, former president Jose Sarney was elected senator for the northern Amapa State, while Rio de Janeiro reconfirmed its traditional opposition to the government by electing as governor former presidential candidate Leonel Brizola of the leftist Democratic Workers' Party.

NAIROBI (OCT. 4) - Kenya and South Africa are to establish airlinks between them, following recent moves by the South African white minority government to abolish apartheid, Kenya Airways sources said here Thursday.

Kenya Airways was expected to operate a weekly flight from Nairobi to Johannesburg from December, with South African Airways operating a similar flight from Johannesburg to the Kenyan capital.

Negotiations on the airlink were at an advanced stage and followed a recent appeal to Kenya by African National Congress (ANC) deputy president Nelson Mandela to allow South African Moslems to transit through Nairobi on their way to and from pilgrimage in Mecca, the sources said.

Currently, South African Airways and Air Malawi ferry the pilgrims to the Malawian capital, Lilongwe, where Kenya Airways has agreed to pick them up for the onward journey to Mecca.

HAMBURG (OCT 4) - Eastern Europeans are facing a winter of chilly apartments, long queues at petrol stations and on-again, off-again electricity as oil supplies dwindle, correspondents of the German Press Agency dpa report.

The cause of the problem is twofold: the Gulf crisis and the transformation in the Soviet Union.

The Soviet Union - the world's largest producer of oil - has slashed oil deliveries to its former Communist allies, which have been almost totally dependent on them. Problems in maintaining drilling rigs and pipelines is partly to blame.

For the oil they do export, the Soviets now demand hard currency. Previously, oil trade within the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance (Comecon), to which the Eastern European countries belong, was conducted on a rouble or barter basis.

The situation was exacerbated by the United Nations trade embargo against Iraq which had been using oil to pay off its debts in Eastern Europe. Since Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on August 2, prices on the world's oil markets have more than doubled - another blow.

In Czechoslovakia Thursday, there were long lines of autos at petrol stations. Prime Minister Marian Calfa had announced earlier that the country's oil supplies would last another week.

The Hungarian government has urged belt-tightening in view of Soviet plans to cut oil exports by 30 percent.

In Bulgaria, oil supplies will presumably last until year's end. Electricity is already being shut off every four hours in the capital of Sofia. Emergency measures are also being contemplated in Poland and Romania.

WARSAW (OCT. 4) - Polish Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki is to announce Thursday that he will challenge Solidarity leader Lech Walesa in presidential elections due on November 25, well-informed sources said here.

Mr. Mazowiecki will make the announcement while facing questions by three journalists in a live television talkshow late Thursday.

Apart from candidates from two fringe parties, Mr. Walesa has until now been the only declared candidate for Poland's first post-war democratic presidential elections.

Mr. Mazowiecki, a moderate Roman Catholic intellectual, was a close aide to the union leader during Solidarity's nine-year battle for democracy.

He had been proposed by Mr. Walesa for the post of East Europe's first non-Communist prime minister last year.

The premier has become immensely popular with Poles which helped him to carry out drastic economic reforms as the country switches from a state-controlled to a free-market economy.

At the same time his relationship with the union leader, who has no direct say in Polish politics, has soured. Mr. Walesa has repeatedly criticized the government for not moving fast enough to reform the still widely communist-dominated country.

Mr. Mazowiecki has the backing of Democratic Action (ROAD), a movement that groups former Solidarity leaders who have distanced themselves from Mr. Walesa and said he would be the only politician to effectively challenge the Nobel peace prize winner.

Mr. Walesa has caught up with the prime minister in the latest popularity polls.

PAP news agency earlier announced that a rightist party and the Polish Greens, the ecological party, also presented candidates to run in the presidential race.

The Real Political Union, a rightist grouping with some 2,000 members, said its leader, Janusz Korwin-Mikke, would run for the executive post to succeed current President Wojciech Jaruzelski.

The Polish Green Party of ecologists, whose membership is higher at 6,000, said it would put up one of its leaders, Janusz Bryczkowski.

Before their candidacies can qualify as official, however, the two must each collect signatures from 100,000 supporters, as set down in recent amendments to the Polish constitution.

Mr. Walesa began his campaign tour on Monday.

The elections are set for Sunday, November 25, with a possible runoff on December 9.

Mr. Jaruzelski has been head of state since 1985. His current six-year mandate started in July last year. But for many he is still seen as a symbol of the old communist regime, and faced with mounting pressure to resign has agreed to step down.

The former communists and their allies retain 65 per cent of the seats in the lower house or Sejm under an arrangement reached before the June 1989 elections in which only 35 per cent of seats were open to other parties.

Analysts expect democratic parliamentary elections to take place early next year.

BRAZZAVILLE (OCT 4) - A former senior official in the sole, ruling Congolese Labour Party (PCT), Clement Mierassa, has formed a new Congolese Social Democratic Party (PSDC), he told journalists through an authoritative source on Thursday.

Mr. Mierassa, ex-central committee secretary in charge of state-run firms, added that he had handed in the party's statutes and programme to the ministry of territorial administration. The party was co-founded by former journalist Celestin Nkoua.

The PSDC will "militate for a democracy that protects minorities, recognizes differences, is extended to the domain of work, strengthens initiative and promotes the associative movement," according to its programme.

Mr. Mierassa and Mr. Nkoua were arrested last July and accused of plotting to overthrow national institutions. Police seized several documents at Mr. Nkoua's home. The two were freed by President Denis Sassou Nguesso last month.

Mr. Mierassa indicated that the PSDC was the fourth new party officially to register with the ministry.

FRANKFURT (OCT. 4) - Two Palestinians were brought to trial before a German court here Thursday for attempting to attack two U.S. military trains in August 1987 and April 1988, officials said.

Hassem Kassem Dalkamoni, 45, and Abdel Tattah Ghadanfar, 48, have also been charged with attempted murder.

In the first attack, between the towns of Kassel and Goettingen, central Germany, explosives damaged a freight train after the real target, a military train with 150 U.S. soldiers and their families, was delayed.

Only the driver of a car which passed near the freight train was injured in the explosion.

Nobody was injured in the 1988 attack on the same railway line.

Police found many weapons, several kilograms (pounds) of explosives and four homemade bombs in an apartment let to the two Palestinians. Police said the bombs were destined for attacks on aircraft.

The two Palestinians are suspected of setting up an organization close to the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command (FPLP-GC) in West Germany in early 1987. The FPLP-GC is headed by Ahmad Jibril.

FORT-DE-FRANCE, Martinique (OCT 4) - Flooding caused by torrential rains from tropical storm Klaus left at least five persons dead and two missing on the French Caribbean island of Martinique, officials said Thursday.

The dead included a farmer who drowned in flood waters in the southern part of the island and two girls who were swept away by a swollen river in the central town of Saint Joseph, authorities said.

The bodies of two adults were also found in the Monsieur River here in the capital.

Two fishermen were reported missing after their boat disappeared Tuesday off the southern tip of the island.

Local officials said the heavy rains from Klaus were expected to last three more days and they warned the public about the likelihood of landslides.

Thursday the storm, with winds of up to 100 kilometers per hour (60 miles per hour) was centered about 220 kilometers (140 miles) north of Martinique, an overseas department of France with a population of about 340,000.

Tropical storm warnings were also in effect Thursday for Guadeloupe and other neighboring French islands, according to the U.S. National Hurricane Center in Florida.

AMMAN (OCT 4) - Iraq declared Thursday that it would "prefer war to surrender" in the Gulf crisis and called for a settlement without preconditions that would also deal with the Palestinian question.

Iraq "prefers war to surrender in the face of foreign hegemony that puts the wealth of the Arab world in the hands of foreigners," Iraqi First Deputy Prime Minister Taha Yassin Ramadan told a press conference here.

"We say it frankly," he added. "We prefer war to capitulation. It is the stance of all the whole Arab nation."

"We wish peace. But if war is imposed on us we have to face up to it," said Mr. Ramadan as he wound up a 24-hour visit to Amman.

The deputy premier, whose remarks were translated into English by an interpreter, ruled out an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait, saying his country wanted dialogue "within international legitimacy and without preconditions."

He said however that a U.S. withdrawal from Saudi Arabia "would pave the way for a settlement to the crisis and other Middle East problems."

"We refuse any international initiative that does not take into account our Arab problems, notably the Palestinian question," Mr. Ramadan said.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein on August 12 proposed a comprehensive settlement to all Middle East conflicts, including those caused by the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait August 2 and Israeli occupation of Arab territory.

The suggestion was promptly dismissed by Western leaders, who remain wary of a global approach to regional problems.

Mr. Ramadan was challenged during the press conference by a British journalist who asked him to allow him into Kuwait to investigate allegations of Iraqi torture of Kuwaitis.

"You are not concerned," he replied. "Kuwait is an Iraqi province and we cut off the leg of whoever enters it illegally."

Mr. Ramadan, who met here earlier with Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu, said his talks with him had not resulted in agreement between the two sides although they had been able to produce a "new approach" to the crisis.

He called for both countries to pursue their dialogue.

A Japanese spokesman said Mr. Kaifu had stressed that any settlement required an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait.

The meeting dealt largely with the fate of 141 Japanese held hostage by Iraq, sources close to the talks said.

KAMPALA (OCT. 4) - Fighting between anti-government rebels and government troops in the northeast of the central African state Rwanda continued Thursday radio reports said.

The estimated 2,000 rebels had captured the Gabiro and Gatsibo villages, advancing to positions 70 kilometres from the Rwandan capital Kigali, the reports said.

The fighting erupted Sunday when the rebels - mainly Rwandan Tutsi refugees who have been living in camps in neighbouring Uganda for the past 30 years - crossed into the country. They had fled from tribal conflict between the Tutsis and the Hutus.

President Juvenal Habyarimana returned to Kigali Wednesday night from a visit to the United States, Rwandan radio said. On his way home he stopped over in Brussels to ask the former colonial power for military assistance against the rebels.

Belgium announced Thursday that it would send an unspecified number of troops and weapons to ensure the safety of its nationals. Brussels earlier said it would send 200 paratroopers.

France, also in response to Rwanda's request, said it would send 150 troops to ensure the safety of French nationals.

The Rwandan Patriotic Front (Rpf) rebels fighting to overthrow the Kigali government are led by Nandeurs Fred Rwigyema, a Tutsi, who was dismissed last November as deputy Ugandan defence minister under President Yoweri Museveni.

If other Rwandan refugees in neighbouring Tanzania, Zaire and Burundi joined the rebels, Habyarimana's government was at risk, diplomatic sources said. Habyarimana, 53, has ruled the country since he seized power in a 1973 coup.

MONACO (OCT. 4) - The funeral of Stefano Casiraghi, the husband of Princess Caroline, has been set for Saturday, it was announced here Thursday, as members of the Monaco royal family gathered here to mourn his accidental death.

The funeral is to take place at 11.00 a.m. at Montecarlo cathedral. Monaco authorities and the Casiraghi family on Thursday were putting the remaining details together for the funeral ceremonies.

Princess Caroline, who was in Paris when her husband was killed when his speedboat flipped over as he was defending his offshore championship title, returned home with her brother Albert on Wednesday.

Prince Albert and his sister Stephanie cut short separate visits to the United States when they heard the news. Princess Stephanie was on her way to the principality from Los Angeles on Thursday.

Thousands of local residents, Italians and French nationals Thursday filed past Mr. Casiraghi's body, exposed in a diver's suit, to pay their last respects.

Condolence telegrams meanwhile poured in, including from the English, Swedish, Danish and Lichtenstein monarchies.

"It's very sad. It's as if they were our own family," said one resident of Monte Carlo where flags have flown at half-mast since Wednesday.

Mr. Casiraghi's death is the second to strike the Grimaldi family in eight years. Princess Caroline's mother, Princess Grace, was killed in the hills behind Monte Carlo in 1982 in a car accident which also injured Princess Stephanie.

Karlsruhe (OCT. 4) - Former East German intelligence chief Werner Grossmann was released from pre-trial detention Thursday on the order of a judge at Germany's Federal Court, his defence attorney told newsmen.

Grossmann, 61, had been arrested a day earlier when German unification became effective. A general in the former East German army, he had taken over in 1986 as head of foreign intelligence of the former communist ministry of state security.

The federal attorney's office said Grossmann had been cooperative. He had not tried to escape arrest although he knew he would be sought after reunification.

Grossmann was ordered to surrender his identity papers and report to police once a week. Whether a trial will be opened against him has not been announced.

His defence lawyer explained that while Grossmann had violated the laws of the Federal Republic, this was in the very nature of espionage and, with Germany reunited, he should not be punished.

Armed with arrest warrants, German federal officials had attempted Wednesday to arrest several other former East German spies including the legendary Markus Wolf, Grossmann's predecessor who retired in 1986.

Wolf however was not willing to be arrested. He went into hiding after contacting federal prosecutor Alexander von Stahl before October 3.

ROME (OCT 4) - Italian Prime Minister Gianni De Michelis said Thursday his government was preparing a proposal to reform the United Nations which would likely be discussed next week by foreign ministers of the 12 European Community nations.

Mr. De Michelis said he backed a proposal made by Italian Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti several weeks ago that the EEC and Japan should both be given permanent seats on the U.N. Security Council in view of the new order in Europe and Japan's economic weight.

The proposal is likely to be discussed at the informal meeting to be held on October 6 and 7 in Venice by the 12 EEC foreign ministers and could be adopted as formal EEC policy at the formal meeting scheduled for October 22-23 in Luxembourg.

Italy currently holds the six-month revolving presidency of the EEC so can initiate this type of proposal.

Mr. De Michelis said the proposal was made to counter a Soviet suggestion that a sixth Security Council seat should be given to Germany.

He also suggested that the U.N. "military committee" which advises the Security Council on purely military matters should be reformed, but gave no details as to how this could be achieved.

BAGHDAD (OCT 4) - Iraqi President Saddam Hussein Thursday met Palestine Liberation Organisation leader Yassir Arafat for talks on the Gulf crisis, the Iraqi News Agency Ina reported.

Arafat has expressed sympathy for Iraq's August 2 invasion of Kuwait, which triggered an international trade embargo against Baghdad.

The talks were also attended by Iraq's deputy premier, Tariq Aziz, Ina said. Arafat arrived in Baghdad from Amman, where he also held talks on the Gulf situation.

BERLIN (OCT. 4) - Jenoptik Carl Zeiss Jena GmbH, the opticals specialist that was the pride of East Germany, announced a cooperation accord on Thursday with west German industrial giant MAN Technologie AG, the news agency ADN reported.

The firms will set up two jointly-owned ventures, Optosys GmbH, which will develop remote-sensing technology and space equipment, and Coramed GmbH, which will develop lasers and sensors for medical use, it said.

The two firms will be based in Jena, where Jenoptik Carl Zeiss Jena is located.

Wolfgang Brunner, head of MAN Technologie, said he aimed for annual turnover of at least 50 million Deutsche marks (32.2 million dollars).

Analysts said the tie-up benefited MAN by giving it access to laser and optical work that had been massively funded by the East German government, chiefly for military reasons. At the same time, Jenoptik Carl Zeiss Jena would get access to funds and marketing skills.

The division of Germany after the war also divided the Carl Zeiss group into a branch in the capitalist West, based in Oberkochen, and a branch, owned by the Communist state, at Jena in the East.

The group reunified last month, but for administrative and marketing reasons, decided to keep separate identities until they reviewed their products, many of which compete.

The western branch retains the name of Carl Zeiss group, whose products are marked Zeiss. The eastern products carry the label Jenoptik Carl Zeiss or Zeiss Jena.

The group, with products ranging from binoculars to lasers, will have total annual turnover of 3.6 billion marks (2.3 billion dollars), with an estimated pre-tax profit of at least 200 million marks (129 million dollars).

AMMAN (OCT 4) - Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu held separate talks here Thursday with King Hussein and Iraq's first deputy prime minister, Taha Yassin Ramadan, without any apparent breakthrough towards a diplomatic solution to the Gulf crisis.

Kaifu, who later arrived in Turkey on the third leg of his Middle East tour, said here Japan insisted on an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait, a restoration of the former Kuwaiti regime and freedom for all foreign nationals held in Iraq and Kuwait before any negotiations could start for a peaceful settlement to the Gulf dispute.

Kaifu's spokesman Shideo Takenaka told reporters that he did not notice any flexibility in the Iraqi position from Ramadan's meeting with the Japanese premier.

He also said no progress was reached on a release of over 300 Japanese nationals kept against their will by Iraq and Kuwait.

Ramadan told a press conference that Iraq ''would not fire the first shot'' in the Gulf but warned the United States that ''if it starts a war, it will not be able to stop it or limit it to any area or time frame, and it will lose all its allies in the region.''

He said his talks with Kaifu ''focused on the need to intensify efforts to develop conditions that are more conducive to a peaceful settlement through an open dialogue over all the problems of the region.''

Ramadan welcomed French President Francois Mitterrand's peace proposals which he described as ''a window of opportunity that offers some hope, especially since it comes from a party that has good intentions.''

Kaifu reportedly told Ramadan during the meeting that ''only when Iraq implements Security Council resolutions will there be fruitful and constructive negotiations for peace.''

King Hussein stressed to Kaifu the importance of keeping alive the diplomatic option so as to avoid a destructive war in the region.

A spokesman for Kaifu said Japan had agreed to extend to Jordan 250 million dollars in assistance, including 100 million dollars in emergency commodity aid and the rest in soft loans.

Jordan, along with Turkey and Egypt, was considered in a 2 billion dollar Japanese package as the three frontline countries worst hit by the Gulf crisis and the economic embargo imposed on Iraq.

Jordan's Crown Prince Hassan and Prime Minister Mudar Badran said in a meeting with Kaifu earlier that Jordan was faithfully abiding by the U.N. sanctions impsed against Iraq, which they described as one of the kingdom's political allies and its biggest trading partner.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 4) - The U.S.-Soviet agreement on reducing Conventional Forces in Europe (CFE) set a ceiling of 70,000 combat vehicles and artillery pieces for both the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) and the Warsaw Pact, Secretary of State James Baker said Friday.

President George Bush, speaking before Mr. Baker, said the agreement in principle concluded Wednesday between Washington and Moscow would "redraw the military map" to match the dramatic political changes undergone in Europe.

Mr. Baker said the agreement set the following CFE ceilings for each alliance: 20,000 tanks, 20,000 artillery pieces, 30,000 armored combat vehicles (ACV) and 2,000 helicopters.

The overall ceiling for any country in either pact is as follows: 13,300 tanks 13,700 artillery pieces, 20,000 ACV's and 1,500 helicopters.

No agreement had been reached on an overall ceiling for combat aircraft, he added, but they did agree on a country maximum of 5,150 combat aircraft, Mr. Baker added.

The secretary of state said that all the allies were previously consulted on the agreement in principle which he concluded Wednesday in New York with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

Mr. Bush said he hoped a final treaty could be drawn up before the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (CSCE) is held in Paris next month. Washington has made conclusion of the CFE treaty a precondition for attending the CSCE summit.

BAGHDAD (OCT 4) - The Iraqi authorities have renamed oil refineries and terminals in Kuwait in their latest move to absorb the occupied emirate, the Iraqi News Agency (INA) reported Thursday.

The Iraqi oil ministry has renamed the al-Ahmadi and Mina-Abdallah refineries al-Nida and Saddam, after Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, INA said.

Five terminals also had their names altered.

Al-Ahmadi-East has become al-Nida-East, the King Faisal Avenue terminal is now Babylon Avenue, Mina-Abdallah is Mina-Saddam, the terminal at Sabbah Al-Salem is called Saddam and al-Jabriya is al-Shoumoukh (Pride).

The measure was the latest of several taken by Baghdad to absorb the emirate politically and socially. On September 27, it announced the abolition of Kuwaiti identity cards.

Iraq invaded and annexed Kuwait in early August and later proclaimed part of the emirate as the 19th Iraqi province, naming a cabinet minister, Ali Hassan al-Majid, as its governor.

MASSY, France (OCT. 4) - An explosion demolished a five-storey apartment building here early Thursday, killing at least five people, injuring eight and leaving eight others believed buried in the debris, firemen said.

Four of the injured were seriously hurt in the blast, which was believed caused by a gas leak. They included a baby which was badly burned and a girl who lost a foot.

Firemen feared the worst for those still buried, as a fire was still burning under the debris and could have asphyxiated survivors.

They said they needed about another 24 hours to shift all the debris, as they were having to exercise maximum care not to cause a further collapse on those still inside.

A rescue worker said the whole building in this town south of Paris had collapsed "like a house of cards".

A total of 37 apartments were wrecked in the blast, which was followed by a fire. There was a strong smell of gas at the scene after the tragedy.

JOHANNESBURG (OCT. 4) - South Africa's white population will get two separate chances to vote in a referendum to introduce a new constitution while all other South African citizens will get only one vote, a senior government official said Thursday.

If the proposed constitution was adopted it would give South Africa's majority black population the right to vote.

Roelf Meyer, deputy minister for constitutional development, told foreign journalists there would be one referendum for the nation's five million whites and another in which all races could vote.

But he said it was considered unlikely that whites would vote against the referendum while the rest of the nation voted for it. Mr. Meyer said the white extreme-right wing "has not put forward any viable constitutional proposal of its own," despite its alleged increased popularity and its hostility to current government reforms.

Both referendums would only take place in 1993 or early 1994, Mr. Meyer said, because it would take "two to three years" to conclude the constitutional reform talks due to begin early next year.

The talks would take the form of a round-table rather than a face-to-face between the government and the opposition, Mr. Meyer said. "All political parties that have a recognized constituency" could take part in the round-table, he added.

He said only the Panafricanist Congress, its ally Azapo, and at the other end of the political spectrum, the extreme right-wing white Conservative Party, were not prepared to take part in the talks.

The main players in the talks would be the ruling National Party, the African National Congress and its conservative rival, the Zulu Inkatha party.

Mr. Meyer said the recent murderous fighting between ANC and Inkatha supporters in the townships around Johhanesburg had "caused a delay" in the pre-round-table talks.

The nation's future constitution, which would replace the one introduced in 1984, would have to meet "two fundamental goals," Mr. Meyer said. It "must be democratic, meaning one man, one vote" and "must eliminate all potential for violent conflict," between the country's different ethnic groups.

The government favoured a "federalist approach," he said, with the country divided into a dozen more or less autonomous regions, a two-tier parliament and a "bill of rights."

Race and skin colour would no longer define or limit the various groups or regions represented in parliament, he added.

NEW YORK (OCT 4) - The chairman of the nonaligned movement, Yugoslavia's Foreign Minister Budimir Loncar, Thursday proposed an initiative by the organisation on the Gulf crisis.

Loncar, speaking at a meeting of the movement's foreign ministers at the United Nations, said the initiative should be based on U.N. Security Council resolutions demanding the withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Kuwait and the restoration of the Kuwaiti government.

He suggested that he be charged with preparing such an initiative.

The president of the U.N. General Assembly, Maltese Foreign Minister Guido de Marco, said ''the movement could seek to ensure the necessary combination of firmness, humaneness and consensus that must accompany all action by the international community''.

Both ministers emphasised that a Gulf settlement could help solve other conflicts in the region. That view was also expressed by U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Kuwaiti Foreign Minister Sheikh Sabah al-Ahmad al-Jaber as-Sabah asked the non-aligned movement for help in implementing the Security Council's resolutions on the Gulf crisis.

''Peace can be reached only through the full and immediate implementation of international resolutions that match the noble principles on which the non-aligned movement is based,'' he said.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 4) - The USS Independence, the first U.S. aircraft carrier to enter the Gulf since 1974, left the waterway Thursday after a two-day show of strength, the Pentagon said.

"We consider the mission of the Independence in the Gulf a success," said Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams. "The mission was to demonstrate to our friends and allies in the region that it is possible to put a carrier in the Gulf and carry out operations.

"Those were the goals, and they were accomplished."

He did not say what the carrier would do next. Before entering the Gulf Tuesday the Independence and its battle group had been stationed in the northern Arabian Sea.

Lieutenant Commander Mark Walker, a Navy spokesman, said the brief Gulf tour by the Independence, which was carrying at least 70 aircraft, was not meant to increase regional tensions but was rather "a visible demonstration of the operational capabalities of a carrier battle group to our friends and allies in the region."

WASHINGTON (OCT 4) - Angolan rebel leader Jonas Savimbi Thursday implored the United States to continue aiding his Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA) until a peace accord is reached.

President George Bush, who received the rebel leader at the White House on Tuesday, expressed optimism that the UNITA rebels and the Angolan Government would sign a ceasefire agreement by the end of the year.

Peace negotiations to end Angola's 15-year civil war are expected to resume at the end of October.

"There will be no peace, no reconciliation if there are no elections in Angola " said Mr. Savimbi, adding that he wanted the vote before the end of 1991 and after the last Cuban soldier leaves by mid-July next year.

Cubans are no longer in combat, he said, but "the Russians are the ones who are doing the job that the Cubans were doing."

One of the main points of disagreement is over whether UNITA will be recognized by Luanda as a legitimate political party. Mr. Savimbi has insisted that UNITA should be recognized once a ceasefire accord is signed.

Mr. Savimbi said his presence in Washington, only days before Congress is to consider continuing financial assistance to the Angolan rebels, was a "coincidence," and he maintained he did not come to lobby legislators.

"We think it important that U.S. assistance continue, to cut assistance will jeopardize the process of negotiations," said Mr. Savimbi. He expressed optimism on funding after meeting with Mr. Bush.

Vienna (OCT. 5) - Some 5.6 million Austrians go to the polls on Sunday to elect a new parliament in general elections which will establish the country's political direction for the next four years.

Opinion polls forecast losses for the two parties in Austria's grand coalition - the Socialist Party (Spoe) of Chancellor Franz Vranitzky and the conservative Austrian People's Party (OeVp).

However both are expected to hold on to their positions as the two strongest political forces in the country.

Election pundits believe the Spoe, with 43 percent of the votes at the last elections, will struggle to beat the 40 percent mark.

The OeVp is heading for a loss of five percent from 41 percent in 1986, according to the latest surveys.

The biggest gainer is expected to be the right-leaning Freedom Party of Austria (Fpoe) under its chairman, Joerg Haider.

The party has been enjoying rising popularity in the last few months. Opinion polls show that at least a six-point increase is possible on its 10-per-cent share last time round.

The Fpoe made large gains at recent communal elections under the leadership of Haider who has steered the party clearly to the political right from its liberal base.

TOKYO (OCT. 5) - The rate of increase in Japanese bank lending slowed by 13.8 percent from a year earlier in August, the Bank of Japan said.

Japanese banks' outstanding loans as of the end of August showed an increase of 3.015 trillion yen (22.3 billion dollars), down 13.8 percent from the 3.495 trillion yen (25.5 billion dollars) recorded a year earlier, the central bank said in a report Thursday.

Central bank officials attributed the slowdown mainly to the authorities' call for restraints on loans for land purchases and major commercial banks' curbs on loans to meet international capital-adequacy targets set by the Bank for International Settlements.

Annual interest rates on short- and long-term loans by commercial banks in August averaged 6.929 percent, up 0.085 points from the preceding month, it said.

It represented the 16th consecutive rise in such interest rates, the Bank of Japan added.

Japanese financial authorities have been asking banks to control lending to other industries, particularly real estate firms allegedly responsible for raising land prices in Japan.

In a bid to head off inflation, the Bank of Japan raised its official discount rate -- the interest on loans to commercial banks -- by 0.75 points to six percent a year on August 30.

It was the fifth straight rise in the key money rate since May 31 last year.

NOUMEA (OCT. 5) - New Caledonia's northern province has officially assumed ownership of nickel mines from opposition deputy Jacques Lafleur, provincial authorities said.

Eighty-five percent of the shares of the South Pacific Mining Company belonging to Mr. Lafleur were bought by the northern province's finance and investment firm for 99 million francs, the officials said Thursday.

The investment firm, created on September 17, is a holding company charged with overseeing the financial operations of the province which cannot act directly as an investor.

When the mining company's shares were transferred, Northern Province President Leopold Joredie thanked Mr. Lafleur for having "kept his word."

He hailed the "links of mutual understanding" developed during the negotiations that led to the purchase of the mines and said he hoped the operation would "serve as an example and a psychological trigger."

Mr. Lafleur, meanwhile, said that the sale of the mines "was done in a spirit of justice and economic redistribution among New Caledonia's provinces."

Mr. Lafleur is a leading figure in the Rally for Caledonia in the Republic Party, which seeks to maintain New Caledonia's links with France. The northern province is dominated by ethnic Melanesians who want independence for the territory.

Colombo (OCT. 4) - Seven soldiers were killed in an ambush by suspected Tamil rebels in northwest Sri Lanka Thursday morning, military officials said.

The soldiers were ambushed by suspected rebels of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (Ltte) at Cheddikulam, some 230 kilometers from here, officials said.

Rebels took weapons and communications equipment following the incident in which one soldier was also critically injured. The soldiers had been on a routine patrol.

Meanwhile, in the eastern Ampara district, an Ltte area leader was shot dead by security forces during an operation against Tamil rebels fighting in the northeast of the country for an independent homeland for the minority Tamils.

Two rebels were also killed in the same district while in a separate incident in the adjoining Batticaloa district, security forces opened fire at a group of suspected rebels harvesting paddy field of some Sinhalase farmers.

Kankestanthurai and Elephant Pass military camps also came under sporadic fire by rebels Wednesday night, military officials said.

Civilian sources who fled Jaffna said that Tamil rebels had begun leaving Jaffna Fort camp, which they occupied after government troops pulled out last week. They were reported to be moving to other operational areas.

JAKARTA (OCT. 4) - Bank Duta, a large financial institution connected with Indonesian President Suharto, announced Thursday that it incurred losses of 420 million dollars through foreign exchange transactions.

Bank Duta's board of commissioners told a meeting of shareholders that the losses dated from as far back as 1988.

"The total was an accummulation of losses from foreign exchange transactions through correspondent banks in increasingly larger volume," the bank said in a

The bank is Indonesia's second largest private bank with assets of more than one billion dollars at the end of 1989. It is 73 percent owned by three charity foundations chaired by Mr. Suharto.

During the meeting at Castle Bellevue, the president's Berlin residence, the exiled political ruler of Tibet expressed his congratulations at Wednesday's reunification of Germany, a spokesman said.

It was the first time that a Western head-of-state had received the Dalai Lama who lives in India.

China, which asserts sole sovereignty over Tibet, protested at the meeting. The Dalai Lama favours a Tibet largely free of Chinese influence.

BRUSSELS (OCT. 4) - The European Community Commission here early Thursday approved a proposal for a 30 percent cut in farm subsidies around the world, a policy line likely to put the E.C. on a collision course with the U.S. at the "Uruguay Round" of Gatt talks.

The proposals put forward by Farm Commissioner Ray MacSharry and approved by the 17 E.C. commissioners, will be reviewed by the E.C. Council of Ministers next week in Luxembourg.

Official sources said Arafat met with Krimapov as part of the Soviet envoy's talks in the region which included a meeting with King Hussein of Jordan Wednesday and talks in Baghdad with Iraqi leaders.

Krimapov, special envoy of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and member of the presidential council, delivered a message to King Hussein from Gorbachev ''dealing with the dangerous situation in the Gulf''.

King Hussein emphasised Wednesday Jordan's keenness on reaching a political settlement to the Gulf crisis and other Middle East issues and said Amman shared the Soviet view that ''military force should not be used to settle regional and international disputes''.

No details on the contents of Arafat's talks with Krimapov emerged, but the Plo leader told the Jordanian news agency, Petra, that there were ''moves to crystallise a comprehensive Arab initiative aimed at averting the catastrophe which will result from the option of war'' in the Gulf.

''Efforts are underway to avert an explosion in the region,'' Arafat was quoted as saying. ''We see changes in the international positions, as are obvious in French President Francois Mitterrand's initiative, the European-Soviet joint statement and U.S. President George Bush's speech to the United Nations,'' Petra quoted him as saying.

The Plo leader said international law must also be applied in the Israeli-occupied territories.

''International legitimacy cannot be selective,'' he said. ''If it is applicable in the Gulf crisis then it is also applicable in Palestine.''

BELGRADE (OCT. 4) - "Bread, sugar and flour are almost unaffordable. But everyday needs like locomotives and power plants are getting cheaper."

Such was the gallows humour assessment of the Yugoslavia's price developments by Belgrade radio recently.

At the outset of 1990, the Yugoslav government had predicted an inflation rate of 15 percent for the year. But more than 90 percent of goods in the country have already become more expensive than that.

The government never tires of reporting successful cases in its program to combat inflation, but in September alone, electricity rates were 24 percent higher, furniture 25 percent, railroad fares 35 percent, and bread 45 percent more expensive than a year earlier. On top of it, rents have already been raised by up to 1,100 percent.

Once again, price developments are slipping beyond the government's control. In Sepember alone, the cost of living index jumped 7.6 percent from August levels, more than double the government's three percent prediction.

The new wave of inflation has been the final death blow to Premier Ante Markovic's already floundering program to try to revamp the crisis-ridden economy.

Despite every new pronouncement to the contrary, the completely outdated banking system has not been reformed, and the money-losing factories continue to wrack up losses.

DHAKA (OCT. 4) - Leading opposition parties in Bangladesh announced plans Thursday for a joint demonstration in the capital next week to press for the resignation of the government of President Hussain Muhammad Ershad.

Amir Hussain, a spokesman for the Awami League, the largest opposition group, told newsmen that over 200,000 party workers will be called up from across the country to assemble in central Dhaka on October 10.

Another 100,000 people are expected to be mobilised by the Bangladesh Nationalist Party (Bnp) to join the anti-government rally.

Hussain said Sheikh Hasina Wazed, chief of the League, and fellow opposition leader Begum Khaleda Zia of the Bnp will lead a protest march which is expected to include half a million people.

President Ershad, whose eight-year rule has come under severe criticism from the opposition, trade unions and student groups for corruption, economic mismanagement and high prices, is seeking re-election next year.

The former army chief, who seized power through a military coup in 1982, denied the charges, claiming the country's economic problems were due to recurrent floods and the present Gulf crisis.

Ershad has said he would hold elections between March and October next year but he has refused so far to announce a definite date. The League and the Bnp have decided to boycott the polls unless Ershad steps down first and allows a caretaker government to organise the elections.

More than 20 smaller opposition parties and six trade unions have announced support for the October 10 demonstration. dpa wo 041331 okt 90

COLOMBO (OCT. 4) - Three persons charged with conspiring to murder former Sri Lankan president Junius Richard Jayewardene in parliament 19 days after the signing of the Indo-Lanka peace accord in 1987 were acquitted by the high court Thursday.

The three, all employees of parliament, were acquitted for lack of evidence. The court also found that their pre-trial statements had been taken under duress. The three had been on trial for a year on charges filed under emergency regulations and the prevention of terrorism act.

A member of parliament and a government official were killed in a grenade explosion while more than 25 MPS were injured on August 18, 1987, in an incident for which the Sinhala Marxist Janatha Vimukthi Peramuna (JVP - People's Liberation Front - was blamed by the government.

The Sinhala rebels unleashed a terror campaign against the state following the signing of the Indo-Lanka peace accord under which nearly 100,000 Indian troops were deployed in the northeast of the country.

COLOGNE (OCT. 4) - Ford of Germany, unveiling its new Escort and Orion model cars Thursday, said its production plants were running at nearly top capacity and that additional work shifts were scheduled to try to keep up with demand.

Ford said its plant at Saarlouis was producing 1,120 Escort and Orion cars a day. By November, production is to rise to 1,360 cars daily, while 300 new workers were to be hired on a temporary basis.

At the same time, the Cologne plant, now producing a total of 1,340 Fiesta and Scorpio cars daily, was scheduled for four additional special work shifts.

Ford said its plant at Gent, Belgium, was also running at full capacity, producing 1,500 Sierra and 380 transit van vehicles daily.

PRAGUE (OCT. 4) - Finance ministers from Czechoslovakia, Poland and Hungary are due to meet in Budapest on Saturday with a view to pressing the Soviet Union to ease their oil-supply problems, an economic newspaper reported here on Thursday as motorists queued to buy petrol.

The daily Hospodarske Noviny newspaper said that the meeting, intended to co-ordinate efforts to ensure supplies in response to a sharp fall in deliveries from the Soviet Union, was suggested at a meeting of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) in Washington last week.

The three countries hoped together to be able to persuade the Soviet Union to give priority treatment in the distribution of available reserves to its traditional markets.

The government of Czechoslovakia has calculated that of 16.5 million tons of oil due to be delivered by the Soviet Union by the end of the year, only 13 million tons would be supplied.

The Prime Minister of Slovakia, Vladimir Meciar, said on television on Tuesday that Slovakia had petrol reserves for only two days of consumption.

This caused panic buying by motorists, and people were queuing for hours at petrol stations on Thursday, an AFP correspondent reported.

The management of the national Benzina company has denied that supplies to petrol pumps were threatened.

It said that it had stocks of 30,000 tons of petrol and 18,688 tons of of super petrol, and that these amounts were greater than those held in July when panic buying led the government to increase the price of oil products by 50 percent.

PARIS (OCT. 4) - The world oil market is not short of oil, and IMF-supervised control of the trading and pricing of oil is required to ensure a stable market, French Economy Minister Pierre Beregevoy said on Thursday.

He warned that the world faced a threat of "stagflation", and repeated a suggestion that the rise in oil prices caused by the Gulf crisis should be used as an opportunity "to try to put the market in order".

Mr. Beregevoy told a regular press conference that he had been struck at the favourable response to his proposals to organise and regulate the market.

He stressed the need to co-operate at international level to obtain some stability in the price of oil "which today has a decisive effect on economic activity".

The solution was to organise concerted action between oil companies, oil-producing countries and authorities in consuming countries, through the International Monetary Fund (IMF), "regulation which avoids sudden price changes" and "possible use of reserves".

"If one sticks to the law of supply and demand on this market, given the production capacity being used, there is no shortage of oil."

He said that speculation on the price of oil was "due mainly to anticipation of uncertainty" and "On the futures market, a crisis has been anticipated."

Mr. Beregovoy said that "the economy cannot be a closed area functioning without laws" and that it was necessary to steer a passage between inflation which "leads to recession", and a braking of the economy "by a monetary policy which would be too tight" given inadequate savings throughout the world.

"Stagflation is a danger which weighs on the world economy today because of a slowing of the U.S. economy, the growing debt owed by developing countries, and the increase in the price of oil," he said.

While German unification and changes in eastern Europe were likely to boost growth in Europe "there is a real problem in the financing of recovery in East Germany," he said.

TOKYO (OCT. 4) - Japan's economy can cope with oil prices of up to 40 dollars a barrel for one to two years, an energy expert with the Institute of Energy Economics (IEE) said here Thursday.

Tsutomu Toichi, chief economist of the IEE, which was set up by 160 major Japanese energy sector companies, said Japan could cope with oil at 30 dollars a barrel -- or even with the current price of about 40 dollars -- for one to two years.

"The question is how long it will continue (at that price)," Mr. Toichi told a press conference here.

He said there were three possible scenarios arising from the Gulf crisis sparked by Iraq's August 2 invasion of Kuwait: stability, an Iraqi withdrawal or limited armed conflict.

In any of the three scenarios, oil prices will not stay at current levels for more than two years, Mr. Toichi said.

He said the effect of oil imports had fallen markedly since the first oil price rise shock in 1973 but Japanese businesses would still have to renew energy saving efforts if oil prices stayed above 30 dollars for two years.

Energy consumption had grown by 0.7 percent annually in Japan from 1973 to 1987, Mr. Toichi said, while Japan's gross national product (GNP) had increased by an average four percent a year in the same period.

The cost of oil was now less than one percent of GNP, against four percent a few years ago, he said.

Mr. Toichi said the first oil shock had made Tokyo aware of the need to save energy and to look for alternative energy sources but its conservation efforts had slackened off in recent years.

If the Gulf situation did not deteriorate, the new oil shock would be a good catalyst for Japan to look at supply problems and environmental issues, he added.

Mr. Toichi said solar energy was Japan's most promising alternative energy source, particularly next century.

Two million Japanese houses now have solar power systems.

NAIROBI (OCT. 4) - Sudan, already suffering from serious food shortages, faces poor harvests again this year because of inadequate rain, the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization (Fao) reported Thursday.

The Fao appealed for immediate pledges of emergency food aid.

Basing its report on an on-the-spot review of the crop situation, the Fao said there were already serious and increasing food supply difficulties because of last year's poor harvest. Pledges of aid for 1990 do not meet even the current need.

A substantial increase in food aid requirements in 1991 is inevitable, the Fao said. Donors are asked to make immediate emergency food aid pledges against the current unmet needs, following last year's poor harvest, and to plan for further substantial allocations and shipments in early 1991.

Despite increased plantings and government efforts to supply necessary inputs, such as fertilizer, the production of millet, mostly grown in the drought-prone western regions of Darfur and Kordofan, will be drastically reduced, the Fao said.

The harvest of sorghum is also expected to be well below average, particularly in northern Gedaref, one of the main surplus-producing areas.

A khartoum newspaper reported Thursday that more displaced persons are expected to arrive in the Sudanese capital, fleeing the drought that has hit Kordofan. Over 4,000 migrants have already arrived and are squatting in Omdurman, Khartoum's twin city.

CAIRO (OCT. 4) - Egpytian President Hosny Mubarak Thursday, in a speech broadcast live on national television and radio, accused Iraq of sending forces to Egypt to carry out acts of sabotage and create instability in the country.

Mubarak, in his speech to mark the 17th anniversary of the 1973 Arab-Israeli war, said some of the forces had already been arrested. He warned that Cairo would resolutely crack down on those who endangered the country's stability.

''Iraq has been sending forces - we have arrested them and will arrest the rest - to provoke a state of instability here, sabotage some interests, hurl some grenades and use weapons to attack buses and similar targets,'' the president said.

''They are doing this to create a state of instability in Egypt,'' he said.

He urged Palestinians to remain in Egypt ''and not listen to Iraq's incitement because if they do so they will harm themselves''.

He defended the U.S.-led multinational troop presence in Saudi Arabia, saying the country had had no other choice than to ask others for military assistance.

Mubarak said Egypt was doing everything possible to prevent the outbreak of a devastating war in the region. But a solution to the crisis could be achieved only through a withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Kuwait, he reiterated.

BERLIN (OCT 4) - A greater role for Germany in the world -- but also anxiety at the domestic problems that lie ahead -- dominated debate Thursday as parliament held its first session to chart the country's course after unification.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl, the first chancellor of a united Germany since Hitler, seized the occasion to stress that Germany expected to play a bigger role in the world but would never forget its responsibility for the past.

"We must never forget, suppress or play down the crimes committed in this century by Germans, the suffering inflicted on people and nations," he said.

"We owe it to the victims to keep alive the memory of the darkest chapter of our history. Above all, we owe this to the victims of the Holocaust, the unparalleled genocide of European (Eds:correct) Jews."

His words represented an olive branch to Jews in Germany, Israel and elsewhere who have criticised the treaty of German unification for lacking any reference to collective responsibility for the Holocaust, in which an estimated six million Jews were put to death."

The meeting, the day after unity, was steeped in symbolism.

Deputies flew from Bonn to gather at the Reichstag, the former parliament building in Berlin that has been at the centre of a stormy century.

The neo-classical edifice was set ablaze in 1933 by a mentally-disturbed Dutchman, in an plot engineered by Hitler to strengthen the Nazis' grip on power and crack down on dissent.

Twelve years later, Soviet troops hoisted the Red Flag on its shell-battered gable as they fought, street by street, into the heart of the Third Reich.

But Mr. Kohl on Thursday promised that the Federal Republic of Germany, was after 41 years, a stable democracy, rooted in the institutions of the West, that sought only to be a good neighbour and a committed European.

WELLINGTON (OCT. 4) - New Zealand opposition National Party leader Jim Bolger may yet be defeated in elections October 27 if the ruling Labour Party reaps a pay-off from the gamble of changing its leader.

Nominations closed here Thursday for candidates in the elections, which opinion polls have all year tipped as a National landslide. Mr. Bolger, it was said, was sleep-walking to victory.

But Labour's decision on September 4 to replace Prime Minister Geoffrey Palmer with Mike Moore has made the race a close call.

Opposition backbencher Winston Peters, National's top-polling MP in preferred prime minister polls, warned Wednesday night that his party may lose and said it may not be worth voting for.

"We know that the public has ended its affair with Labour, but does National evoke a transfer of that affection," he asked? "I think not."

Polls this week showing a closing of the gap between National -- up to 40 points ahead of Labour at one point in the last year -- were "some cause of concern" he said.

Up to 48 percent of voters were undecided in polls, Mr. Peters said, noting that in the past three elections two-thirds of the "don't knows" voted Labour.

"The latest poll results indicate that the undecided voters who supported Labour in 1987 appear to be swinging in their direction once again."

Mr. Peters could profit from his party's defeat; a second election loss in a row would see Mr. Bolger resigning, willingly or otherwise, and Mr. Peters sees himself as successor.

Policy and promises, lynchpin of normal Westminister politics, are meaningless here because the differences between the two main parties are minor.

It has developed instead into a presidential style showdown.

A Dominion newspaper TV3 Gallup poll published here Thursday showed the majority of the 500 people surveyed saw Mr. Bolger as a weak, indecisive and uninspiring leader.

Mr. Moore was seen as strong, positive and capable and able to communicate with all kinds of people.

BERLIN (OCT. 4) - Chancellor Helmut Kohl told parliament here Thursday Germany would be firmly anchored in the west and urged a sweeping modernization program in what used to be East Germany.

Giving a policy speech the day after German unity, he called on Germans to work to overcome 45 years of division.

"After the union of states, we are in many ways just at the beginning," he said. The conversion of the former eastern part of Germany into a western-style welfare state was a "task with no precedent" and could not be performed in just weeks or months.

The next few years would demonstrate the enlarged Germany was a "gain for the whole of Europe". Germany was "irrevocably" tied to the western alliance and would continue to show solidarity with the free democracies of the West, especially the United States.

Contrasting to the multipartisan harmony of unity day Wednesday, the first debate of the expanded Bundestag, with representatives seconded from the east, was marked by the give-and-take of campaigning for nationwide elections December 2.

Kohl's main challenger for the chancellorship, Oskar Lafontaine of the Social Democrats (Spd), said unity had not been accomplished until social justice prevailed in both parts of Germany.

LAHR, GERMANY (OCT. 4) - Canadian troops stationed in this southwest German town Thursday started ferrying personnel and equipment to Qatar in the Gulf region, the Canadian command announced.

Troops - 450 army members from the Lahr base and 100 from nearby Baden-Soellingen - will be flown to the Canadian Middle East base by the end of the week, a Canadian military spokesman said.

Twelve Hercules troop transports are to leave Lahr, or Canada via Lahr, as well as 18 CF-18 fighter planes of the 409th Baden-Soellingen group.

The CF-18's are to support three Canadian vessels and other allied ships on patrol in the Gulf, the spokesman said, adding that Canada has only deployed defensive naval and air forces in the Gulf.

Durban (OCT. 4) - State President Frederik de Klerk said Thursday it was time for South Africans to put down their instruments of conflict and to speak their minds in a peaceful manner.

De Klerk was on a brief tour of black townships in the eastern Natal province, where some 4,000 people have been killed in a four-year power struggle between supporters of the Zulu Inkatha Freedom Party (Ifp) and the liberation movement the African National Congress (Anc).

He said he was disappointed that Inkatha President Mangosuthu Buthelezi would not be meeting Anc deputy President Nelson Mandela to discuss communal violence in the country.

The Zulu leader said this week he would not attend an Anc conference of black leaders Friday to discuss the violence, despite his frequent demands for a meeting with Mandela.

''There is a tremendous responsibility on all leaders and on the youth of South Africa ... to bring an end to violence and conflict which has undermined the stability and opportunities of all South Africans,'' De Klerk said.

His visit was well received by the black community, as was a similar tour of Soweto, the black city outside Johannesburg, last month.

OSLO (OCT. 4) - The Norwegian government on Thursday joined the European trend of cutting defense spending, citing the reduced military threat from the Soviet Union.

The budget proposal for 1991 put forward Thursday by the coalition government called for virtually zero growth on defense, representing a cutback in real terms for the first time since World War II.

Next year's defense budget totals 22.4 billion kroner (3.7 billion dollars), a nominal increase of 527 million kroner (87 million dollars) but a cutback in real terms as it does not even cover inflation.

In recent years the Norwegian armed forces have grown accustomed to a real growth of three to 3.5 percent, the official NATO goal.

At the same time it made it clear that it considered environmental issues a priority, increasing taxes on petrol by 25 percent.

It also warned that taxes on consumer goods would be increased by more than the rate of inflation.

Alcohol is to go up by nine percent, tobacco 11 percent and milk 10 per cent.

Families with children under three years of age will receive a one-off allocation of 10,000 kroner (1,660 dollars) a child, a promise made by the Christian People's Party, one of the coaliton partners, during the last election campaign.

But most families will have to pay higher kindergarten fees next year.

The budget set state spending for 1991 at 403 billion kroner (67 billion dollars), with a budget deficit of 47.7 billion (7.95 billion dollars).

Taxes on personal income were down by 2.6 billion kroner (433 million dollars) but this will be offset by an increase in state tariffs and taxes of 2.4 billion (400 million dollars).

Finance Minister Arne Skauge, presenting the budget, said that the unemployment rate, currently at five percent, would fall next year while inflation would remain at four percent.

But he stressed that Norwegian wage levels would have to be brought closer to those of competing countries if the number of jobless were to be reduced.

Wagest in Norwegian industry are currently some 20 percent higher than in competing countries, Mr. Skauge said.

The budget, the first from the government of Prime Minister Jan P. Syse which took office a year ago, contained no major surprises but included concessions to all three parties in the center-right coalition.

PARIS (OCT. 4) - France is to send light weapons and ammunition to the beleaguered Rwandan government "in the next few hours" in response to an official Rwandan request, authoritative sources said here Thursday.

The sources said that rebels from neighboring Uganda, who were within 70 kilometres (43 miles) of the Rwandan capital Kigali, had not made further headway Thursday.

A riposte by government forces caused heavy losses among the rebels, according to the sources.

The east central African state and Paris are linked by a technical military cooperation accord, providing for personnel training in Rwanda, but no defense agreement has been signed.

About 200 French nationals live in Rwanda, a former Belgian colony.

Rwandan President Juvenal Habyarimana stopped in Paris and held airport talks with a ranking official from the French Cooperation Ministry during a stopover on his way from the United States to Belgium after Tuesday's insurgency, informed French sources said.

SINGAPORE (OCT. 4) - Kuwait's government in exile was cleared Thursday to take a nearly 11 per cent stake in the Singapore Petroleum Company (SPC) but lost a bid to take more than twice that level of holding.

SPC said in a statement that the London-based Kuwait Investment Office (KIO), the investment arm of the exiled government, had applied to buy an entire 80 million share issue but would be able to buy only 33.95 million.

SPC, which is 28.4 percent owned by the government-owned DBS Bank, said its public subscription offer of last month was over-subscribed by 1.6 times when the offer closed Wednesday.

It said a total of 7,904 local applicants and 418 foreign applicants applied for shares.

SPC issued 80 million shares on September 17 with a par value of 50 Singapore cents (18 U.S.) at 1.25 dollars (71 U.S. cents) each, as part of its plan to construct an oil terminal on the island of Pulau Sebrok.

The issue represented 25 percent of SPC's enlarged capital. The portion alloted to the KIO, still conducting business after the August 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, represented 10.6 percent.

Earlier SPC President and Chief Executive Cheng Hong Kok confirmed that KIO had applied for 80 million shares worth 100 million Singapore dollars (57 million U.S.).

SPC is principally engaged in oil refining, marketing distribution, trade of crude and petroleum products, third party processing and tanker transportation.

Besides the DBS, other shareholders in SPC are the local firm Oceanic Petroleum (Asia) and the rest by Japan's C. Itoh trading group.

Seoul (OCT. 4) EFE - South Korean Foreign Minister Choi Ho-joong Thursday said his country was seeking to establish diplomatic ties with China by the end of 1991.

Ho-joong told the Seoul-based news agency Yonhap that China, a long time ally of North Korea, was delaying the process and has so far only agreed to opening joint trade offices.

"We strongly want to normalize our relations with China without having to take the first step of exchanging commercial offices, but everyone knows that it takes two to have diplomatic negotiations," the minister said.

South Korean press said the two countries would announce the opening of the trade offices, which are to also act as consulates, by mid-October.

But Beijing has maintained its support for North Korea, which observers said explains China's timid moves to recognize South Korea.

South Korea does not even exist as a political entity on official Chinese maps they said.

Korea was divided after World War II with communist China supporting the north and the United States the south.

China sent troops to North Korea in the 1950-53 war with U.S.-backed South Korea.

Last week South Korea established full diplomatic ties with the Soviet Union, another long-time ally of North Korea, in a move South Korean President Roh Tae Woo said signaled the beginning of the end of his country's cold war with the north.

In what is being considered a milestone in unification efforts, the foreign ministers of both Koreas are due to meet this month for the second time since August.

Moscow (OCT. 4) EFE - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev Thursday said he believes war will not break out in the Gulf, despite the massive military build-up seeking to force an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait.

Gorbachev made the comment as he was about to begin talks with the Deputy Premier of the Sultanate of Oman, Qais Abdel Munin al-Zawawi, who was in Moscow to discuss the Gulf crisis as well as other regional and bilateral issues.

Asked by a reporter if the Soviet Union was planning to send troops to join the multinational forces in the Gulf, the Soviet president replied "I think there are enough troops there as it is."

While strongly supporting the economic sanctions imposed following Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, the Soviet government has said it would join the build-up only if the troops involved were put under the command of the United Nations.

Athens (OCT. 4) EFE - Three stays in hospital intensive care units over the Papandreou's 36-year-old wife, Demetria, said Wednesday, "Anyone who's dreaming that this means retirement better forget it. Andreas is a political being, it is his entire life, and there is simply no chance he will retire."

The leader of the Pan-Hellenic Socialist Movement (PASOK), Papandreou served as Greek Prime Minister from 1981 to 1989.

Baghdad (OCT. 4) EFE - A team of five Spaniards led by an opposition deputy arrived Thursday in the Iraqi capital in a bid to negotiate the release of 15 of their remaining countrymen still being held in Iraq.

"Ours is a peace mission, we want to avoid war, and get out whoever we can," Deputy Cristina Almeida, of the United Left coalition, said on arriving in Baghdad aboard an Iraqi Airways flight from Jordan.

The team, invited by the Iraqi authorities, was made up of Gustavo Villapalos, the rector of Madrid's Complutense University, lawyer Ignacio Montejo, and two members of the Spanish Human Rights Association, Eugenio Sanchez and Facet Saka, who is of Palestinian origin.

Among the 15 Spaniards prevented from leaving Iraq is Juan Jose Buitrago, until last week Spain's charge d'affaires in Kuwait.

BRASILIA (OCT. 4) EFE - More than 170 Brazilians caught in Iraq after Baghdad's August 2 invasion of Kuwait arrived home Thursday on an Iraqi Airways jet.

The 174 Brazilians, many of whom were waving national flags and cheering, were greeted at the airport by Foreign Minister Francisco Rezek.

Their release had been secured by Brazilian Ambassador to London and former deputy foreign minister Paulo Tarso Flecha de Lima, who remains in Baghdad.

Another 82 Brazilians, who worked for the Mendes Junior construction company, are still caught in Iraq.

Of the 174 who arrived Thursday, 120 worked for Mendes Junior, 18 for the Volkswagen car company and 14 for the Maxion agricultural machinery firm.

The remaining 22 were ballistic experts who were working on military projects for the Baghdad government.

Doctors were standing by at the airport to attend one of the passengers on the flight who was in a late stage of pregnancy.

A Brazilian press report has claimed that the Iraqi airways jet will return to Baghdad carrying food supplies.

Iraqi officials in Baghdad have denied the report, while the Brazilian government has refused to confirm or deny it.

The report claimed that the food supplies would be used to secure the release of the Brazilians remaining in Iraq.

TOKYO (OCT. 4) KYODO - TEIJIN LTD., A MAJOR SYNTHETIC FIBER MAKER, HAS STARTED POLYESTER FIBER PRICE BOOST TALKS WITH KNITWEAR MAKERS AND OTHER USERS COMPANY OFFICIALS SAID THURSDAY.

POLYESTER FIBER PRICES RANGE FROM SEVERAL HUNDRED YEN TO MORE THAN 1,000 YEN PER KILOGRAM.

THE OFFICIALS SAID THE PRICE RISE WOULD BE 10 TO 20 YEN PER KILOGRAM FOR SUPPLIES IN THE OCTOBER-DECEMBER PERIOD. THEY SAID THEY WOULD LIKE A SIMILAR PRICE INCREASE FOR SUPPLIES IN THE JANUARY-MARCH PERIOD OF 1991. THE PRICE RISE HAS BEEN NECESSITATED BY HIGHER RAW MATERIAL AND FUEL COSTS.

MITSUBISHI RAYON CO. SAID NEGOTIATIONS HAVE JUST GOT UNDER WAY WITH CLIENTS FOR A RISE IN THE PRICES OF ACRYLIC FILAMENT AND SOME OTHER PRODUCTS.

TORAY INDUSTRIES INC. IS ALSO EXPECTED SHORTLY TO START POLYESTER FIBER PRICE BOOST TALKS WITH CLIENTS, INCLUDING KNITWEAR MAKERS.

THE PRICE RISE WILL NOT AFFECT THE RETAIL PRICES OF 1990 FALL AND WINTER GARMENTS BUT IT MAY RAISE THE PRICES OF CLOTHING FOR SALE IN L99L AND BEYOND, TEIJIN SAID.

SYNTHETIC FIBER MAKERS SAID THE PRICE OF NAPHTHA WILL RISE BY AN AVERAGE 10,000 YEN TO 32,500 YEN PER KILOLITER FROM OCTOBER, AND THAT BECAUSE OF HIGHER NAPHTHA PRICES, ETHYLENE MAKERS HAVE DECIDED ON A PRICE INCREASE OF 25 YEN PER KILOGRAM.

THIS WILL PUSH THE PRICES OF ETHYLENE GLYCOL AND XYLENE HIGHER. THESE ARE BOTH RAW MATERIALS FOR MAN-MADE FIBERS.

THE JAPAN CHEMICAL FIBERS ASSOCIATION ESTIMATED THAT THE INDUSTRY'S COSTS WOULD INCREASE BY 47 BILLION YEN IN A YEAR IF THE PRICES OF CRUDE OIL AND NAPHTHA RISE BY 10,000 PER KILOLITER.

FALLS CHURCH, VA (OCT 4) MCS -- A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

World stocks are lower with the Nikkei off 571 points and the FTSE down 16 points at midday in London. ... Bonds are unchanged with the long yield at 8.85%. ... The dollar is mixed. ... North Sea crude is down 25 cents to $36.10. ... Factory orders rose 1.8% in August largely reflecting higher prices for petroleum products. September. ... Stock mutual funds posted an average 15.52% negative return for the third quarter, their worst since 1987. ... McCAW CELLULAR gives a $250 million equipment order to ERICSSON GE at the expense of dominant cellular manufacturers MOTOROLA and AT&T. ... FEDERATED DEPARTMENT STORES and ALLIED STORES have unveiled a business plan that projects operating earnings to more than double over the next six years.

WHAT'S AHEAD:

SEN. JOHN CHAFEE (REP. - R.I.) is scheduled to speak at 12:30 EDT. on tax policy and American competitiveness at a conference on U.S. Foreign Tax Policy. ... House- Senate Farm Bill conferees meet this afternoon. ... NYNEX may be forced by regulators to divest itself of New York Telephone after an investigation revealed overcharges and other purported abuses. ... CESSNA has announced plans for a new model, called the CITATION X, that will fly at Mach 0.9, meaning it could travel between New York and L.A. in about four hours. It will also carry a hefty $11.85 million price tag.

FROM THE BULLS:

"There is a significant amount of resistance .. at around the 2550 area [but] I am reasonably comfortable with the idea that that level will be taken out on further upside probes and that, to me, would indicate a follow through up to the 2650 to 2680 area," says WALTER MURPHY of MERRILL LYNCH. "At that point it gets a little bit more difficult. I have my doubts that it will meaningfully break that level." Moreover, he sees the predicted rally as being short-lived." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 10/3)

"The markets are still focused on the Middle East rather than Washington," says BRIAN FABBRI of MIDLAND MONTAGU. He says once Congress passes the budget agreement, and assuming the employment numbers "are not total disasters, which I don't think they will be," the Fed will ease interest rates, boosting the stock market. (FNN "Marketwrap", 10/3)

FROM THE BEARS:

"I expect this rally to end with a steep drop that will trap a lot of bulls," says BERT DOHMEN of WELLINGTON MANAGEMENT. Dohmen says, "there just isn't enough money to go around," explaining that even if the Fed eases the expected 0.25%, "that's like throwing a bucket of water on a burning warehouse." ("Investor's Daily", 10/4)

"It's a bear market in a deteriorating economy," says MORRIS SMITH, head of the FIDELITY MAGELLAN fund. "It's happened many times in past cycles and will happen in the future. On the other hand, I'm very concerned about the credit crisis. Banks worldwide have stopped lending and there's a lot of debt out there that will need to be extended." ("USA Today", 10/4)

"I'm finding more bargain stocks, but only on days when the stock market is weak," says MICHAEL PRICE, manager of MUTUAL SHARES. "The stock market could easily go down 10% -- or possibly 20%." ("USA Today", 10/4)

"We're still thinking we haven't yet seen the bottom of the equity averages," says the very bearish STANLEY SALVIGSEN, chief executive of COMSTOCK PARTNERS which manages the $679 million DREYFUS CAPITAL VALUE FUND. Mr. Salvigsen finds it "pretty scary" that "the market is down 400 or 500 points, and there's nothing out there that's a grabber." He adds, "I've been pretty negative on the U.S. stock market, so we are net short in that account." (WSJ and NYT, 10/4)

There's a lack of liquidity to the market, says STAN WEINSTEIN of the "Professional Tape Reader," who considers that a very bearish signal. It's no time to be a hero, says Weinstein: "This global bear market should still be respected and treated with caution." (CNBC "World Business", 10/4)

Stocks are likely to stage a rally which will convince the majority that the market has seen the worst, says ROBERT PRECHTER of the "Elliott Wave Theorist." This could set stocks up for a crash, he warns. Prechter says the market has not reached a major bottom because there is "monstrous complacency among market participants." (CNBC "World Business", 10/4)

STOCK MARKET:

"A lot of people are very worried," says JOSEPH McALINDEN, director of research at DILLON READ, as stock prices caved into pressures of rising oil prices yesterday afternoon frustrating investors who had hoped for a rally. He believes that stock prices are likely to churn in a broad range for a few weeks until the budget is ratified by Congress, but then they will break out on the upside. (WSJ, 10/4)

"The market will begin to do better, if not this week, then next week," predicts SHEARSON's NEWTON ZINDER. Zinder believes any up move will be a bear market rally: "But I think the rally, while it may be sporadic, may surprise people by how long it lasts and perhaps how far it goes." Zinder says the rally will convince people to turn bullish again. "Then we'll have another sinking spell, either late this year or early next year." (FNN "World Business Update", 10/4)

"Everybody's sort of sitting on the fence," says EARL HADADY of "The Bullish Consensus." He says his bullish/bearish numbers are only showing "people are indecisive." (FNN "Marketwrap", 10/3)

"I feel there could be more to go with this rally," says PETER RAIMONDI of the COLONY GROUP. He says we may move up another 50 to 100 point, "but that would be the maximum barring any change in the Middle East." Longer- term, he foresees a decline to 2250. "From a broad market prospective, I don't think it will be easy to make money." ("Investor's Daily", 10/4)

"It's still a jittery market," says NELSON GOLD, senior vice president for OTC trading at INTERSTATE-JOHNSON LANE. Citing the tenuous federal budget agreement, possible disappointing third quarter earnings and the Middle East tensions, Gold says, "You can make a good case why nobody wants to go in the middle of the street and play in traffic." (WSJ, 10/4)

"At this point I think a lot of people are prepared to wait and see what happens to the budget package," says JIM IRWIN at YAMAICHI INTERNATIONAL. "But there's no question that this week the big money managers have been in control of the market, more so than at any time in recent weeks." ("The Washington Post" 10/4)

"The market came out of a good rally; now you're back to the same condition [as] before the rally," says KENNETH DUCEY, senior vice president in the trading department at S.G. WARBURG & COMPANY. "It looks like the buying power's dried up." (NYT, 10/4)

RICHARD EAKLE, president of EAKLE ASSOCIATES, says that volume on down days in the stock market has been lighter than the volume on the up days. That, he says, could mean the worst of the market losses are behind it for now. "I think it's indicative of a bottoming process that's under way here." (WSJ, 10/4)

"I guess we're just having a correction," says ROBERT ANTOLINI of DONALDSON, LUFKIN & JENRETTE. "At the moment, our stocks seem to be for sale." DAVID READERMAN of LEHMAN BROS. agreed, calling his computer screen of stock quotes "ugly." Wednesday's selling meant, "someone is hitting these stocks real hard " according to Readerman. ("Investor's Daily", 10/4)

"It's clear the market didn't deserve to be at 3000 [on the Dow] in mid-July," says PETER LYNCH, former head of the FIDELITY MAGELLAN FUND. "But is rose on the theory that the soft landing for the economy was going to happen. After oil jumped from $18 to $40 a barrel, it clearly became a new ball game." What to do? "In the last 70 years, if you were willing to buy into declines, you were always rewarded. I always bought into declines even though my fund always fell during those declines." ("USA Today", 10/4)

"The market started out with a little rally phase this morning, but then things faded," says RICHARD McCABE of MERRILL LYNCH. A rise in oil prices hurt both bonds and equities, according to McCabe. (CNN "Moneyline", 10/3)

"There was a lot of weakness among retail stocks and that caused further concern about what's happening to the economy," says PETER VANDENBERG of SHEARSON LEHMAN BROTHERS. ("USA Today", 10/4)

#90277p1294 10/04/1990 ~PR Newswire

NEW YORK (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The Fiat Group, Italy's largest private-sector automotive and industrial concern (NYSE: FIA) and CGE, one of the largest French manufacturing groups in the private sector, announced today a strategic alliance on the international level.

This agreement will involve exchanges of shareholder participations, rationalization of manufacturing activities through a series of mergers and creation of a jointly-held European holding company to develop programs for action in sectors of mutual interest.

As part of this plan, Fiat will acquire a stake of approximately 6 percent of the current capital stock of CGE, corresponding to 6.4 million shares. The transaction will be accomplished by means of already existing shares held by CGE and convertible debentures. Fiat will become one of the leading stockholders in CGE.

For its part, CGE will receive about 3 percent of the Fiat ordinary stock, corresponding to 45 million shares, for about 450 billion lire (U.S. $370 million). This transfer will be implemented by means of already existing shares held by Fiat and the subscription of an issue of bonds convertible into already existing shares held by Fiat. As a result, CGE will become one of the leading stockholders in Fiat.

Representatives of both groups will sit on the boards of directors of the two corporations. In addition, a strategic committee will be formed to enhance cooperation over the long term.

In the telecommunications sector, it has been decided to merge the respective activities of Alcatel Face and Telettra, 90 percent of which is held by the Fiat Group. As a result of the merger, Fiat will hold 25 percent of the new group, in addition to the six percent of CGE mentioned earlier.

Telettra has been valued overall at approximately 2,500 billion lire (over U.S. $2 billion). This transaction will give Alcatel, already a European leader in the development and the production of telecommunications systems, the top position worldwide in both cable and radio-relay transmissions. Telettra, in turn, will play a special role within the Alcatel Group, due to its resources in transmissions research and development.

In the automotive components manufacturing sector, CGE will transfer to Fiat 50.1 percent of the capital of CEAc Group. "CEAc" stands for Compagnie Europeene d'Accumulateurs, which includes the Chloride Motive Power and ATSA-Tudor companies. Its main products are generators and lead batteries, used chiefly in motor vehicles.

Fiat, which is already represented in this field through Magneti Marelli, will acquire a leading position among European producers. CGE will retain 48 percent of the capital of CEAc.

Negotiations are also underway for the transfer of 50.1 percent of Fiat Ferroviaria to the GEC-Alsthom joint venture (a world leading company in railroad manufacturing, 50 percent of which is held by CGE). Fiat will retain 49.9 percent of Fiat Ferroviaria, which will thus become part of a top-level international axis.

Another important aspect of the deal between Fiat and CGE is the creation of a jointly owned European holding company, which will develop interests and initiatives in high-tech sectors common to the two groups.

In particular, the new composite materials, artificial intelligence and telecommunications services applied to transport systems have been designated as priority areas.

The result of all these initiatives between Fiat and CGE will be a complex of activities on the international level designed to integrate and rationalize their common sectors, increasing their technological capabilities in order to reinforce the competitiveness of European industry in world markets.

By the end of the year, these transactions will be embodied in a series of agreements, ready for submission to the appropriate authorities.

HARTFORD, CT (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Society for Savings Bancorp, Inc., ("Bancorp") (NASDAQ: SOCS) today announced that it will report a loss for its third quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990. Preliminary estimates place the loss at approximately $3.6 million or 30 cents per share, resulting in estimated year-to-date net income of approximately $2.4 million (20 cents per share).

Comparable third quarter 1989 results were earnings of $9.1 million (76 cents per share) for the three months and $40.7 million ($3.42 per share) for the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1989. The 1989 nine-month results included two non-recurring transactions that had increased earnings by $14.5 million.

Bancorp attributed the third quarter loss primarily to an estimated $16.7 million addition to its loan loss reserve during the third quarter. The loan loss provision is in response to an approximate 12 percent growth in Bancorp's non-performing assets during the period, from $147 million at June 30, 1990 to an estimated $164.8 million at September 30. The growth in non-performing assets, along with loan write-downs, occurred principally in Bancorp's commercial real estate loan portfolio. At the third quarter's end, Bancorp estimated that its allowance for loan losses will stand at approximately $49.5 million.

(NYSE: BRO) today announced that two of its subsidiaries, SunAmerica Asset Management Corp. and SunAmerica Capital Services Inc. plan to purchase from Equitec Financial Group Inc. (NYSE: EFG) contracts to manage and distribute the Equitec Siebel mutual fund groups. Pursuant to an approved bid accepted by the United States Bankruptcy Court, Northern District of California, the purchase price will be $17.8 million, subject to adjustment.

Comparison with the prior year first quarter is not meaningful due to material changes in the financial structure of Hillhaven following its recent spin-off.

Revenues increased $7,600,000, or approximately 12 percent annualized from the recent fourth quarter ending May 31, in part attributable to customary annual Medicaid rate increases effective July 1990. HOUSTON (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - In a significant real estate closing, San Jacinto Savings Association has modified $350 million in loans to real estate limited partnerships, returning them to performing status, according to Lawrence Connell, San Jacinto's president and chief executive officer.

The innovative transaction, believed to be a "first" in the savings and loan field, reduces the principal amount of each loan to a debt service level reflective of the cash flow produced by the collateral property, without requiring any debt forgiveness by San Jacinto. By this strategy, ownership interests will be preserved for approximately 17,000 participants in limited partnerships sponsored by Southmark Corporation of Dallas.

The loans were originated as part of tax sheltered real estate limited partnership investments which were originally sponsored and marketed to individual investors by Southmark, San Jacinto's corporate parent, through an operating subsidiary, Southmark/Envicon Capital Corporation.

As part of its now-completed bankruptcy settlement, Southmark agreed to reduce its interest in the real estate loans, enabling San Jacinto to reduce the loan principal amount and interest rates.

Prior to tax reform, many individuals invested in real estate partnerships, taking large tax write-offs based on depreciation and interest expense. Since the tax benefits figured heavily into the investment rationale, tax reform had a dramatic negative impact.

The loan modification package allows the individual investors to avoid the adverse tax consequences that would arise from a foreclosure, and converts non-performing assets with unrealistically high loan amounts into performing assets for San Jacinto.

Southmark-controlled partnerships, Southmark Partners One, Ltd. and Equity Associates, Ltd., are general partners for 68 limited partnerships involved in the transaction. LPIMC, Inc., the other party to the loan modification, is general partner for 33 Southmark- sponsored limited partnerships, 22 of which were included in the closing. LPIMC was organized by former Southmark/Envicon executives.

The closing, an integral aspect of Southmark's reorganization under Federal bankruptcy procedures, involved the virtually simultaneous signing of more than 100 sets of loan documents.

San Jacinto is a Houston savings and loan with offices in Houston and the Dallas/Fort Worth Metroplex.

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, NC (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association (PMA) today honored three of the nation's leading scientists, two from Burroughs Wellcome Co., for their innovative contributions to medical research.

At a ceremony held in Washington, D.C., PMA Chairman Richard J. Kogan presented the PMA's 1990 Discoverers Awards to Burroughs Wellcome Co. Scientists Drs. Gertrude B. Elion and Howard J. Schaeffer. Dr. David W. Cushman, principal scientist at the Bristol-Myers Squibb Institute for Medical Research, also received the award.

The PMA Discovers Award, given annually since 1987, has become a major event for the research-based pharmaceutical industry. The award is given to scientists who discover medicines that prove to be important therapeutic breakthroughs that have greatly benefited mankind. Recipients of the honor are chosen by pharmaceutical industry scientists through the PMA's Research and Development Section.

Drs. Elion and Schaeffer were recognized for their discovery and development of Zovirax(R), A drug used to combat a broad spectrum of herpes virus infections, including genital herpes, herpes zoster (shingles) and herpes encephalitis.

Schaeffer, of Cary, retired as Vice President of Research, Development and Medical Affairs in 1989. His work at Burroughs Wellcome Co. produced a series of compounds with antiviral activitiy that ultimately led to the discovery of Zovirax. The therapeutic value of the drug, however, was not fully realized until Dr. Elion's work on antiviral mechanisms was applied to Dr. Schaeffer's discovery.

Elion, of Chapel Hill, is Scientist Emeritus at Burroughs Wellcome. Her work led to the identification of enzymes that would activate and modify Zovirax to a form that is mistaken by a virus as a compound that it needed to reproduce. Thus, the reproductive cycle of the virus can be stopped and the course of viral infection altered.

In 1988, Dr. Elion shared the Nobel Prize in Medicine with Dr. George Hitchings, another Burroughs Wellcome Co. Scientist who received a Discovers Award in 1988.

Burroughs Wellcome Co., a research-based pharmaceutical company based in Research Triangle Park, N.C., is a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Wellcome Foundation Ltd., headquartered in London, England.

NEW YORK (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Woolworth Corporation's (NYSE: Z) total sales for the eight-week period ended Sept. 29, 1990, were up 15 percent from the comparable year-earlier period, Harold E. Sells, chairman and chief executive officer, reported today. The large New York-based multinational retailer had previously reported a 13.2 percent increase in total sales for the four weeks ended Sept. 1 over the comparable prior-year period.

Speaking before a retail industry conference sponsored by Salomon Brothers, a New York investment bank, Sells said Woolworth's September sales were "well ahead of the August pace" largely because of the "continued sharp sales gains in Germany." Woolworth has had a major store presence in Germany since the 1920s, and today operates some 426 stores in that country, including 292 general merchandise stores and 134 specialty stores.

Sells pointed out that the sales results for the eight-week period ended Sept. 29 -- the first eight weeks of the second half of the company's financial year -- compared favorably to the 10 percent year-to-year total sales gain registered in the first half of the company's financial year.

"Today, as the North American economy appears to be temporarily slowing, we see Germany picking up the pace enough to offset possible 'shortfalls' elsewhere," Sells stated, noting, "Our geographic diversity," including Canada Europe and Australia as well as the United States, "reduces the potential impact of unfavorable political or economic developments in any single market."

Under the retail industry's widely followed schedule for reporting monthly sales, Woolworth, along with most other major retailers, will issue its next formal sales release on Thursday, Oct. 11. That report will cover the five-week period ending Oct. 6, 1990.

As previously reported, Woolworth Corporation earlier this year augmented its European operations with the acquisition of the 14-store "Profoot" athletic footwear chain in the Netherlands and Belgium. Since then, the company has been in the process of converting these stores to its highly successful Foot Locker format and has opened two additional Foot Locker units in the Netherlands. These 16 stores join the company's 11 Foot Locker units in Germany. The company plans to continue to expand the Foot Locker chain throughout western Europe, particularly following the scheduled 1992 removal of the trade barriers among the countries making up the European Economic Community (EEC).

NEW ORLEANS (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Technology management will be a top priority for oil companies in the decade ahead, Lawrence G. Rawl, chairman of the Exxon Corporation (NYSE: XON), told petroleum analysts today speaking to the annual meeting of the National Association of Petroleum Investment Analysts and Petroleum Investor Relations Association.

The Exxon chief executive stated, "When you evaluate companies' prospects for future success, look carefully at which companies are managing technology well."

Rawl commented: "Companies need to invest in high-quality R&D programs that are capable of producing important proprietary technology. These companies can expect to reap the full rewards from technological advances. On the other hand, companies that rely mainly on "me, too" technology will lack a key competitive tool and risk missing out on important opportunities."

As an example, Rawl pointed out that Exxon was spending more than $100 million to develop a process to convert natural gas to more easily used liquids. The process employs advances in both catalysis and reactor technology. It converts natural gas to a mixture of carbon monoxide and hydrogen and then combines these two chemical building blocks to make liquid feed stocks. He noted that a demonstration plant in Baton Rouge was already partly operational and will be fully operational later this year.

The Exxon executive cautioned that as much as technology has helped us, "it hasn't been a panacea, and we'd be foolish to expect it to become one. We'll continue to need a balanced energy policy that makes use of all safe energy forms."

Rawl told the analysts that recent events in the Persian Gulf have not changed Exxon's basic strategy. "This strategy is to apply constancy of purpose to all our activities. By that, I mean concentrating on fundamental goals -- such as finding new reserves, keeping costs down, and providing stockholder value -- that are essentially unchanging.

He concluded by saying that "technology, properly managed, can be a strategic tool of enormous value. Because of technology, the petroleum industry has a bright future ahead of it in the 1990s and beyond." Rawl added, "Because of technology we can look forward to a cleaner, safer environment -- a more stable and affordable energy supply -- and all the rich rewards of economic growth."

TULSA, OK (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Williams Natural Gas Company has reached a settlement with all plaintiffs in a consolidated antitrust lawsuit in Kansas City federal court.

The settlement also covers all claims in a related Federal Energy Regulatory Commission proceeding.

The lawsuit concerned prices set in natural gas contracts entered into prior to November 1983, when the pipeline system was acquired by The Williams Companies, Inc. (NYSE: WMB). Two other major defendants, gas producers Amoco Production Company and Oxy USA, earlier reached a separate settlement.

Williams' settlement is for an aggregate $36.5 million to be paid over the next three years. This will result in a charge to net income of some $18 million, or 44 cents per share, net of accruals. The charge will be recorded in the third quarter.

Joseph H. Williams, chairman and chief executive officer, said, "Irrespective of one's feelings regarding the merit of our position, you reach a point where it makes more sense to put the issue behind you and turn your attention to the business at hand. This is such a time.

"It is essential that the management of this pipeline system begin concentrating its efforts on restoring the earnings capacity of this important asset, which has been battered by the regulatory changes of recent years," he said.

The Williams Companies is a $3.8 billion corporation that operates a nationwide digital telecommunications network and more than 25,000 miles of pipelines, which transport natural gas and petroleum products.

MINNEAPOLIS (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Citing higher than expected expenses in executing a new distribution strategy for its Lawn-Boy Inc. subsidiary, softness in the irrigation market and anticipated lower snowthrower sales, The Toro Co. (NYSE: TTC) today said it expects a loss per share in the first quarter of fiscal 1991 ending Oct. 26, 1990, in the range of 40 cents to 50 cents, compared to net income per share of 24 cents in the first quarter of fiscal 1990 ended Nov. 3, 1989. The company announced earlier that it expected a small loss for the quarter.

"Despite this adverse news, we expect net income to exceed $2.00 per share in fiscal 1991, up from $1.55 per share in fiscal 1990," said Toro Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Kendrick B. Melrose. "This goal has been established expecting a slowdown in consumer spending, caused in part by economic uncertainties. The improvement from last year will reflect the benefit of investments Toro has made to increase profitability through better manufacturing, distribution and marketing."

Toro is in the midst of restructuring the Lawn-Boy distributor network to emphasize direct-to-dealer marketing that includes sales to Sears and Montgomery Ward, Melrose said, and costs have exceeded initial expectations. The company has taken back some inventory from discontinued distributors that had been expected to go to remaining distributors, Melrose said, adding that the overall Lawn-Boy inventory situation has improved significantly since the purchase of the company by Toro in November 1989.

Irrigation products continue to be affected by economic conditions throughout the United States, Melrose said. Industrywide sales to homeowners have dropped because of the depressed real estate markets, and Toro has reduced shipments more than expected to correct field inventories held by contractors and distributors, Melrose said. Rainy weather on the East Coast and in the Midwest during the prime selling season led to excess inventories, he added.

Toro expects sales of snowthrower to decline about 50 percent from last year, one of the poorest years for snowthrower sales. The company attributes this to dealers' reluctance to carry inventory and consumers postponing purchase decisions because of the worsening economy.

The Toro Co. is the nation's largest independent manufacturer and marketer of outdoor maintenance and irrigation equipment.

DALLAS, (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Oryx Energy Company (NYSE: ORX) today announced the completion of 18 successful horizontal wells, including three exploration discoveries, in the Pearsall Field during the quarter ending Sept. 30. The wells tested at a combined rate of 13,100 barrels of oil per day (BOPD) and 7 million cubic feet of gas per day (MMcf/D).

During 1990, Oryx Energy has increased its Pearsall Field average gross daily production by 230 percent -- from 6,600 BOPD in January to the current level of 22,000 BOPD. Associated gross natural gas production increased by about 450 percent over the same period, from 2 MMcf/D to 11 MMcf/D. The company's average income interest in its horizontal wells is 80 percent.

Through September, Oryx Energy has completed 55 gross horizontal wells, including 12 discovery wells, and expects to complete 75 gross wells in the Pearsall Field by year's end.

Based in part on data provided by Oryx Energy, the Texas Railroad Commission (TRC) has made permanent the temporary special rules regulating horizontal drilling in the Pearsall Field.

The TRC rules provide for higher allowables and acreage assignments for horizontal wells. The TRC hearing examiner said it is clear that the field is continuing to be developed with horizontal drainhole wells at a remarkable rate and that the temporary field rules appear to be appropriate in the effective and efficient depletion of the reservoir. The temporary rules were adopted in August 1989, in response to an Oryx Energy petition.

Dallas-based Oryx Energy Company is the largest independent oil and gas producer in the world, with assets in excess of $5 billion and proved reserves of more than 1 billion equivalent barrels. Oryx Energy conducts its domestic operations through Sun Energy Partners, L.P., of which it is managing general partner and 98-percent owner. RICHMOND, VA. (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Reynolds Metals Company (NYSE: RLM) has agreed to acquire a 75 percent interest in an aluminum wheel plant in Collingwood, Ontario, in partnership with Lemmerz Canada, Inc., a subsidiary of Lemmerz-Werke KGaA of Konigswinter, Germany. A purchase price for the facility was not disclosed.

Lemmerz, a leading steel and aluminum wheel producer in Europe, will retain a 25 percent interest in the 1 million wheel capacity plant and will continue to participate in the affairs of the Collingwood facility. The plant, commissioned in 1988, is a modern plant with excellent environmental equipment and employs more than 300 people.

"This acquisition will provide Reynolds with a global triangle of wheel manufacturing and marketing capability in North America, South America, and Europe," Randolph N. Reynolds, president and chief executive officer, Reynolds International, Inc., stated.

We plan to draw upon our technology and expertise combined with that of Lemmerz in Collingwood to better supply customers in North America. Reynolds and Lemmerz have been rated by customers as top aluminum wheel suppliers in terms of quality, design and delivery."

Reynolds operates wheel plants in Bologna, Italy, and Valencia, Venezuela. Lemmerz has operations in Germany, Belgium, Spain, and Brazil, in addition to the Collingwood plant in Canada.

"As managing partner, Reynolds will work with Lemmerz to bring Collingwood to its full operating capacity," the president and chief executive of the company's international subsidiary said. "Our goal is to more than double worldwide wheel capacity to 3.0 million units by 1993 by increasing Collingwood capacity up to 1.5 million units. This will require additional investment and perhaps some restructuring at the Collingwood plant."

The company previously had announced it would build a new aluminum wheel plant in Louiseville, Quebec, which was contingent upon obtaining anticipated orders from the automotive industry. Orders, however, were not forthcoming to support construction of the new plant. Reynolds, therefore, decided to acquire majority interest in the modern Collingwood plant to capitalize on an immediate opportunity to obtain new wheel business which would not await construction of a "greenfield" plant.

TROY, MI (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Kelly Temporary Services, the nation's largest temporary help company, today introduced new Kelly Service Descriptions and Kelly Skills Review, the only job descriptions and testing system developed exclusively for temporary help jobs in today's multifaceted workplace.

"This system revolutionizes the way we evaluate and classify temporary employees' skills and experience," said Kelly President and Chief Executive Officer Terence E. Adderley. "Our research confirmed that duties, skills and expectations for temporary help jobs are different than those of permanent jobs. As a result, we took a totally different approach, and developed the only system in the temporary help industry that recognizes the fundamental differences between temporary jobs and permanent jobs."

Kelly Service Descriptions identify the skills, experience levels and equipment requirements for each temporary assignment. Organized by job category in a matrix format, this proprietary system is people- friendly, making it easier for organizations to order the right temporary help.

Kelly Skills Review is an evaluation program that tests real workplace skills of an applicant for temporary assignments. This proprietary program accurately measures an applicant's range of abilities to support the requirements of corresponding Kelly Service Descriptions.

Over the past three years, the Kelly Service Descriptions and Kelly Skills Review system was researched, developed, tested and independently validated. During this process, Kelly worked with Personnel Decisions Research Institute (PDRI), a nationally recognized human resources research firm with substantial experience in the testing and validation field.

Kelly and PDRI conducted extensive employee and customer research to identify skills and experience needs for temporary assignments. More than 4,500 Kelly temporary employees and customers were involved in developmental research and testing which verified the fundamental differences between temporary jobs and permanent jobs.

Using the research and temporary job analysis data, the Kelly team designed and developed a new system of job descriptions and tests specifically for temporary help. The Kelly Service Descriptions and Kelly Skills Review system was extensively tested including a nine-month field test in more than 20 Kelly locations to evaluate and validate the system before its implementation nationwide. PDRI independently validated both the Kelly Service Descriptions and the Kelly Skills Review, making the two an integrated system.

Kelly Temporary Services is a division of Kelly Services (NASDAQ: KELYA,KELYB) the Troy-based international temporary help company that employs more than 580,000 temporary employees annually and operates more than 950 offices worldwide.

Kelly Temporary Services division provides temporary employees in the areas of office, marketing, light industrial and technical to 180,000 customers each year.

Earlier this year, Forbes magazine selected Kelly as the "Best Business Services and Supplies Company for the 1990s," and Business Week named Kelly one of America's top "woman-friendly" companies.

HOUSTON (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - GTE Mobile Communications today completed its purchase of Providence Journal Corp.'s cellular properties in the Southeast, with the exception of Asheville, Jacksonville and Wilmington, N.C., and Lynchburg, Va. GTE expects to close on these four properties later this year or in early 1991, after necessary approvals are received.

The acquisition, together with the pending merger with Contel, will make GTE the second-largest, mobile-cellular company in the United States, serving 51 million pops. ("pops" refers to the population of a market area multiplied by a company's percentage ownership in the cellular system serving that market.)

Examples of contiguous properties include the areas around Raleigh and Durham, N.C., Augusta, Ga., and Roanoke, Va.

"This purchase increases our total cellular-market share and supports our objectives to keep costs down while maintaining high- quality service for our customers," Johnson said.

GTE Mobile Communications Group consists of GTE Mobilnet, which provides mobile-cellular telecommunications services and products in 34 metropolitan service areas and nine rural service areas in nine states, and the National Markets organization, which provides cellular service nationwide. The group also includes GTE Airfone, which provides public telephone service on more than 1,300 commercial aircraft and major AMTRAK routes through GTE Railfone.

COSTA MESA, Calif. (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Irvine Sensors Corp. (NASDAQ: IRSN) announced today the receipt of a $730,000 contract award from the Naval Weapons Center at China Lake to demonstrate a highly miniaturized and sophisticated sensor electronics package for air-to-air missiles. The Navy contract is the 18-month, second phase of an award received by Irvine under the Small Business Innovation Research (SBIR) program.

The objective of the contracts is to incorporate all the infrared sensor electronics of munitions such as Sidewinder or an Advanced Air-to-Air Missile into a single integrated circuit. Desired functions on this circuit include amplification, bandpass filtering, analog-to-digital conversion, multiplexing and control. The inclusion of the analog-to-digital conversion and control features on the circuit plus a design that permits infrared detectors to be mounted directly on the silicon chip will allow the entire infrared detection and sensing elements to be mounted inside a very small dewar. This consolidation and miniaturization is expected to yield powerful advantages to small missile systems including a drastically reduced sensitivity to electromagnetic pulse effects and an ability to co-locate the infrared sensor with radar homing devices.

Irvine Sensors is planning to build both a 16 channel and 32 channel version of the desired integrated circuit under the Naval Weapons Center program. Each are expected to be compatible with both medium-wave length and long-wave length infrared detectors. Because of this versatility, use of the resulting circuits could extend beyond air-to-air missiles to include virtually all types of terminally guided submunitions.

Irvine Sensors, headquartered in Costa Mesa, is primarily engaged in the development of infrared devices and high density packages of computer electronics which are intended to have broad applications in military and commercial systems.

KING OF PRUSSIA, PA (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - International Mobile Machines Corp. (NASDAQ: IMMCC) announced today its new wireless telephone network product which allows telephone companies to offer digital mobile service throughout North America, utilizing spectrum efficient TDMA (Time Division Multiple Access) technology within the normal 4,400-square-mile Ultraphone(R) cell.

This product enhancement will now allow telephone companies to take advantage of the recent FCC ruling permitting mobile service on the Basic Exchange Telecommunications Radio Service (BETRS) frequencies. This will be of major significance in bringing mobile and personal communications to rural America several years ahead of schedule and even ahead of the introduction of digital cellular in the urban market.

Retired Army Lt. Gen. William J. Hilsman, chairman, president and chief executive officer of IMM and former head of the U.S. Defense Communications Agency, said, "It is clear, with the product enhancement, that digital cellular telephony now has a competitor in rural America: digital BETRS telephony."

IMM demonstrated this technology at 800 MHz with handoff and four conversations per kHz channel in 1988 as part of the process that established TDMA as the basis for the digital cellular Interim Standard 54 (IS 54) throughout the United States.

IMM also announced it has received a purchase order for the first of these pioneering systems from the Dell Telephone Cooperative which serves vast expanses of west Texas and New Mexico.

The system was installed and people-tested in a demonstration throughout the Dell City network. Dale Flach, Dell Telephone Cooperative's general manager, said, "We are very excited to be the first telephone company in the world to offer all digital, private, mobile telephone service. Our customers throughout west Texas will have the advantage of digital mobile service, with a high-quality telephony- standard radiotelephone product years ahead of when the rest of the country will see digital cellular. This is clearly the most efficient way to serve both our residential and mobile customers."

Hilsman was quick to point out that IMM is a player in both the BETRS and the cellular telephony marketplace and will remain so. However, because of the decision by the FCC to allow mobile services in the BETRS market, he said he expects telephone companies operating throughout rural America to take advantage immediately of IMM's Ultraphone equipment. Hilsman went on to say, "Market studies show that fixed, transportable and mobile voice and data Ultraphone applications have a vast potential worldwide market."

He noted that despite tremendous telecommunications advances, 65 percent of the world's population still lives in rural areas and would have been largely by-passed by the digital mobile revolution except for the introduction now of digital mobile BETRS. "The increasingly diverse Ultraphone product line," Hilsman said, "is specifically designed for the fixed, mobile and personal communications network."

"We have used our mobile and transportable Ultraphone in many areas over the past year," said Hilsman. "From park rangers communicating directly from the fire line while battling the Horsefly area fire near Morewood, Colorado; to a plane crash on Long Island; to Operation Just Cause in Panama; to restoral of base communications in the aftermath of Hurricane Hugo at Roosevelt Roads Naval Station in Puerto Rico; Ultraphone has provided reliable telephone service in all these disaster situations. As we now go further with mobile BETRS telephone services, a rancher can call his wife from the range and tell her he will be late for dinner without even getting out of the saddle."

"This product offers four simultaneous telephone conversations per radio channel which compares to the three conversations that the digital cellular standard embraces and is expected to be introduced in late 1991," said Hilsman.

"Perhaps the true importance of this event is the fact that it will take years for digital cellular to reach the rural marketplace, if at all. We are there now!"

IMM is a world leader in wireless digital access technologies.

PHILADELPHIA (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The Graduate Health System board of directors announced today that it is actively pursuing a proposed merger with Community General Hospital of Reading, Pa.

The announcement was made by Harold Cramer, chairman and chief executive officer of Graduate Health System.

"The proposed merger with Community General would be consistent with Graduate Health System's strategic plan for creating a robust regional health care system that delivers high-quality, cost-effective patient care, with an easily accessible local presence and point of system entry," said Cramer.

Since its disaffiliation from the Berkshire Health System, in compliance with the signing of a Federal Trade Commission Consent Order, Community General Hospital has pursued opportunities for a productive, strategic affiliation with another health care system or organization.

June Roedel, Community General Hospital board chairman, said that the hospital's board of trustees is acutely aware of the fact that medium-sized hospitals will need to affiliate in order to meet the demands of a rapidly changing health care environment. "The hospital's search for an appropriate affiliation has been prompted by several important health care environment factors. Hospitals are confronted daily with increased costs for technology and human resources. At the same time, revenues for services rendered are being reduced, causing a squeeze in operating margins. By joining Graduate Health System, we would be able to consolidate some of our business activities and use our available resources more effectively. Our history and our philosophy of care closely parallel that of the Graduate Health System and this is the primary reason we seek this affiliation," said Roedel.

Graduate Health System is a major provider of health care services in the Delaware Valley with more than 1,000 licensed hospital beds. Graduate Health System includes The Graduate Hospital, a tertiary care facility in Center City Philadelphia; Mt. Sinai Hospital, a specialty center for mental health and physical rehabilitation located in Philadelphia; Rancocas Hospital in Willingboro, N.J., and Zurbrugg Hospital in Riverside, N.J., both community hospitals; multiple outpatient ambulatory care facilities and a health maintenance organization, Greater Atlantic Health Service.

WOODCLIFF LAKE, NJ (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - In discussions today, Ingersoll-Rand (NYSE: IR) management stated that a sudden decline in certain businesses is such that the company expects results in September and the third quarter to be below expectations.

New orders and sales will show year-to-year gains, but pricing and inflationary pressures, product mix and longer delivery cycles on some orders, together with weakening domestic markets, are placing pressure on margins and profitability.

Corrective actions already initiated in the groups affected should minimize the impact on ongoing results, provided the overall economy remains steady.

The check in the amount of $500 is to help defray administrative costs associated with ongoing efforts to develop DuVal into an aerospace magnet school.

Dr. Blanchard, chairman of the DuVal High School Aerospace Committee, made the presentation at the inaugural Aerospace Technology Program held at DuVal High School.

ANAHEIM, CA (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Comshare Inc. (NASDAQ: CSRE) today announced the first Macintosh and OS/2 versions of its market- leading Commander Executive Information System (EIS) at the Comshare Users Conference in Anaheim. These first releases are functionally equivalent to the new DOS release, version 2.1, which was also introduced at the conference.

Commander 2.1 gives a corporation the flexibility to use any combination of Macintosh, OS/2 and DOS workstations within the same EIS. Commander makes use of the special efficiencies of each environment to increase application developers' productivity, yet presents a consistent interface to executives, regardless of the workstation hardware they use.

COMMANDER 2.1 SIMPLIFIES EIS IMPLEMENTATION THROUGHOUT THE CORPORATION One of Commander's major goals is to provide cross-platform support for all executive applications. Regardless of which platform is used to create the Commander application, it can be built once, and will run on Macintosh, OS/2 and DOS workstations. This commitment to cross-platform portability significantly reduces the development and maintenance effort required to support an environment with various workstation operating systems. The open architecture and information integration capability of Commander allow reports and data produced by other Macintosh, OS/2, DOS and host applications to be incorporated into the EIS without application conversion. Commander workstations can be connected to a host or a LAN depending on the corporate information systems needs.

Commander OS/2 is a full IBM Presentation Manager application. Its Commander Builder follows the Common User Access (CUA) guidelines for a consistent interface to all other SAA software. It includes LAN support using IBM's token Ring and OS/2 Communications Manager, allowing documents, data and models to reside on a host, LAN or workstation. OS/2 Extended Edition 1.2 and an IBM 286, 386 or equivalent computer with at least 4 MB RAM are required.

For the Macintosh user, the standard Macintosh menu bar can be displayed at the top of the screen, providing access to other Macintosh functions and applications. The Macintosh Commander Builder uses a Macintosh-style menu bar pull-down menus and selections boxes. In addition, a number of the most frequently used Builder functions are available as quick tools at the bottom of the screen, allowing the provider to quickly build and change screens. Commander Macintosh can launch and control HyperCard scripts or other Macintosh applications. Commander requires Macintosh System Software, version 6.0.5 or higher, MultiFinder and HyperCard or SuperCard. Minimum system requirements are Macintosh II with 4 MB RAM and a 40 megabyte hard disk.

PHILADELPHIA (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Raytheon Company's United Engineers & Constructors subsidiary announced today that it has won a contract to perform initial engineering for what could become the largest clean air power plant retrofit project to date in the United States.

United Engineers & Constructors (UE&C) will assist the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) with preliminary design for flue gas scrubbers on three coal-fired electrical generating units: two 1300-megawatt units in Cumberland City, Tenn., and one 1150-megawatt unit near Drakesboro, Ky.

TVA awarded this project in anticipation of the new Clean Air Act that Congress is expected to pass before the end of the year. UE&C will first provide preliminary engineering and a cost estimate and schedule. Upon TVA's authorization of project funding, UE&C would then proceed with detailed engineering, procurement and construction. Current projects of this size and character are anticipated to cost at least $700 million. At a time when the business of protecting the environment is increasing by billions of dollars each year, Raytheon subsidiaries already have provided environmental protection systems for more than 200 blue chip clients around the world. More specifically, United Engineers has implemented clean air retrofits for 10 major utilities.

Harold H. Wilson, Jr., the UE&C vice president of sales who negotiated the contract, said, "We won this contract on the basis of our extremely strong background of successful experience in this technology and our ability to proceed aggressively to meet a possible 1995 completion requirement."

Industry analysts have estimated that more than 100 exsisting U.S. power plants will have to be retrofitted to meet the emission standards contained in the clean air legislation now before Congress.

United Engineers & Constructors International provides engineering, construction and maintenance services through its subsidiaries to a wide range of industries across the U.S. and abroad. Units of the company employ about 6,000 professional and support people worldwide.

Raytheon Company (NYSE: RTN), headquartered in Lexington, Mass., is active in electronics, aviation, appliances, industry and environmental services, publishing and construction. It had 1989 sales of $8.8 billion and employs 77,000 worldwide.

MIDDLETOWN, CT (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Pratt & Whitney delivered the first production F117-PW-100 engine for the new U.S. Air Force C-17 airlifter to the Douglas Aircraft Company in ceremonies here.

Pratt & Whitney is under contract to McDonnell Douglas to provide engines for the C-17. This first engine will be shipped to C-17 subcontractor, LTV, in Fort Worth, Texas, to be fitted with a nacelle. It will then move to Long Beach, Calif., for installation on the first production C-17 transport.

The F117 is a military version of the PW2000 engine that has been selected by 12 airlines to power some 500 Boeing 757 commercial aircraft. PW2000 engines have accumulated more than 2 million flight hours since beginning commercial service in December 1984. This total will climb to more than 4 million hours by the time the first C-17 squadron achieves operational readiness in 1993.

In remarks during the ceremony, L.A. Snead, Pratt & Whitney vice president for airlift programs, said, "This delivery is a major milestone for the C-17 program and for Pratt & Whitney. We are pleased to be a member of the Air Force-McDonnell Douglas team that is producing the airlifter of the future. We are committed to delivering engines that fully meet the expectations of our customers."

The C-17 is the cornerstone of Military Airlift Command's plans for the 21st century. It will provide the capability to deliver outsized cargo over intercontinental distances to austere airfields that are too small for today's large transports.

"We expect great things from this engine and the C-17," Snead said. Pratt & Whitney's Government Engine Business, based in West Palm Beach, Fla., designs, develops and supports military jet engines. Pratt & Whitney is a unit of United Technologies Corporation (NYSE: UTX).

IRVING, TX (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - In a major expansion of its high-stakes bingo games telecast via a satellite network, Gamma International, Ltd.,

(NASDAQ: GAMM) has scheduled an additional 30 million-dollar, MegaMillion(SM) games to be played by New Years, 1992. This additional $30 million in prize money is part of Gamma's program to offer players the greatest possible rewards in prizes. Seventy percent of all bingo card sales is reserved for prizes, a higher rate of return than any state lottery. All prizes are pari-mutuel.

So far, nearly $19 million has been awarded in jackpot and daily consolation prizes since the network began broadcasting on Feb. 17, 1989, $7.8 million of it paid to the 14 winners who have won the $500,000 jackpot to date and eight $100,000 jackpot winners. On May 27, 1990, Gamma paid a $1 million prize to the winner of its MegaMillion Bingo game.

Jack Saltiel, Gamma's president, said the million dollar games will be played Oct. 7, Nov. 17 and 24, three times over the New Year weekend, the exact dates to be announced later, and an estimated 24 times next year. He said these MegaMillion games often draw record crowds to the halls and help make Gamma's bingo games the most exciting in the nation.

He noted that the addition of a non-American Indian hall run by a charitable institution in Vermont meant that Gamma had moved from a $500 million Indian bingo market to a $4.5 billion charitable game market. Saltiel added that the company hopes to add an additional 95 bingo halls in seven states, which allow high-stakes bingo games to be played in charitable halls.

Gamma currently operates its simultaneously telecast bingo games over a network of 45 halls in 14 states including Alabama, Arizona, California, Iowa, Minnesota, Montana, New Mexico, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Vermont, Washington and Wisconsin.

DRESHER, PA (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Selvac Corporation (NASDAQ: SLVC) disclosed that the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) on Oct. 3 seized approximately 50 cases of the company's Finally Free(R) Hair Remover, a product intended for home use, at its Dresher, Pa. warehouse.

The complaint for forfeiture alleges that Selvac Corporation has not complied with Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetics Act in marketing the product.

The company pointed out that the issues raised in the complaint have been the subject of an ongoing dispute with the FDA over the marketing status of this product, and that an appeal before the agency was pending at the time of the seizure.

This action by FDA creates a significant probability that Selvac Corporation will be prevented from marketing or distributing the Finally Free Hair Remover for non-professional use in the United States in the future. While it continues to attempt to negotiate a satisfactory resolution of this matter, the company said it is prepared to defend its position in a court of law.

HYANNIS, MA. (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The Cape Cod Bank and Trust Company

(NASDAQ: CCBT) reported a net loss of $809,149 or $.35 per share for the quarter ended September 30, 1990, compared to earnings in the previous year of $2,345,557 or $1.00 per share. The third quarter loss reduced earnings for the year-to-date to $1,434,462 or $.63 per share.

VAN NUYS, CA (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Electro Rent Corp. (NASDAQ: ELRC) achieved increased earnings in the first quarter of the current fiscal year, Daniel Greenberg, chairman and chief executive officer, told shareholders at the annual meeting today.

Reflecting slightly increased revenues in rental and leasing revenue, but continued lower levels of sales of used equipment, the company experienced modestly reduced revenues in the period, Greenberg said.

Revenues for the three months ended Aug. 31, 1990, amounted to $25,604,000, compared with $26,677,000 a year ago. Net income for the period was $1,864,000, equal to 44 cents per share, as against $1,703,000 or 41 cents per share, in the prior fiscal year. Average shares outstanding were 4,192,000.

Greenberg said: "We are holding our own in a very difficult market climate. Our cash flow is strong, reducing current debt 8 million dollars from a similar period last year, and thus reducing interest expenses by $400,000. Selling, general, and administrative expenses were marginally lower for the quarter, as we continued to carefully control our costs.

"In line with the more stable to positive trends in the rental and leasing portions of our business, we have increased our equipment purchases. Our purchases have emphasized the computer/workstation product lines which are moving well at this time. The equipment pool at Aug. 31, 1990, was $230 million, which represented a $6 million expansion from the May 31, 1990, level of $224 million."

Greenberg concluded: "Given the present business climate, we are continuing to build sound profitable business, while developing a posture more conducive to growth."

BALTIMORE, (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - PharmaKinetics Laboratories, Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: PKLB) today announced the signing of a letter of intent under the terms of which Applied Bioscience International Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: APBI) would acquire the assets of the North American bioequivalency testing and clinical research business of the company.

The proposed transaction, which does not include PKLB's German subsidiary, International Bio Research (IBR) or PKLB's potential licensing fee income on products now pending at the Food and Drug Administration, is subject to completion by APBI of its due diligence review and the execution by the parties of a definitive purchase agreement. The transaction would need to be approved by the boards of directors of both companies and by the shareholders of PKLB. The letter of intent envisages that APBI would make a cash payment at closing of $4.8 million, with further contingent payments of $2 million over a period of up to five years, and would assume certain specified liabilities associated with the acquired assets including equipment leases and bond debt on existing facilities. APBI is a broadly based scientific research and development company, providing services under contract to the pharmaceutical, agrochemical, general chemical and food industries.

Previously announced adverse events at the company and in the U.S. pharmaceutical industry have negatively affected the company's ability to meet the financing requirements of domestic operations as a going concern. In response to this challenge management has vigorously been pursuing various financial restructuring alternatives. The signing of this letter of intent and the concurrent commitment of its commercial lending institution to provide the company with a line of credit while the proposed transaction progresses, is believed by management to meet the company's current needs.

For PharmaKinetics' fiscal year ended June 30, 1990 it attained revenue of $27,131,007 which compares to revenue of $26,758,199 for the prior year. The company recorded a loss of $3,768,483 or 40 cents per share in the current fiscal year which compares to a profit of $2,784,626 or 30 cents per share in the prior year. Included in the loss are nonrecurring expenses of $2,854,252 relating to the restructuring of the company's operations, legal fees, and other incurred and anticipated expenses.

For the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990, the company reported revenue of $6,459,959 which represents a 5 percent decline over the fourth quarter of the prior year. A loss of $3,078,750 or 33 cents per share was incurred in the recent quarter which compares to net income of $808,707 or 9 cents per share for the comparable three months ended June 30, 1989. Nonrecurring expenses of $2,500,252 were included in this loss.

HOUSTON, (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Baroid Corporation (NYSE: BRC), announced that on Sept. 25, 1990, the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit issued its decision in Baroid's favor in connection with the appeal filed in the matter of Baroid Corporation vs. Exploration Logging, Inc.

Exlog, a subsidiary of Baker Hughes, Inc. had alleged infringement of its patent relating to various aspects of the acquisition, storage, telemetry and verification of data acquired with measurement-while- drilling technology. Four patent claim groupings were at issue. The case arose from Baroid's challenge to the validity of Exlog's claims.

The Federal District Court previously ruled in favor of Baroid on all material issues. Exlog appealed from that decision. The court of appeals held that "...all of the claims at issue are invalid for obviousness..."

The decision of the Federal Appeals Court supports the position that Baroid had consistently maintained since the lawsuit was filed. According to Pat Murray, president of Sperry-Sun Drilling Services, a subsidiary of Baroid Corporation, "The decision of the Federal Appeals Court further confirms our position as a leader in measurement-while- drilling technology."

TULSA, OK. (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Kern River Gas Transmission Company has notified shippers that it is prepared to initiate construction of its natural gas pipeline this December based upon shippers promptly confirming sufficient volumes under their firm contracts.

Nine shippers have signed firm contracts for natural gas transmission totaling the 700 million cubic feet per day (MMcfd) initial capacity of the Wyoming-to-California pipeline. Other shippers have requested an additional 155 MMcfd of capacity, should it become available.

"This is what we have been working toward for more than five years," said Vernon T. Jones, president of The Williams Companies, Inc., (NYSE: WMB) referring to the start-up of construction. Kern River is a joint venture of Williams and Tenneco Inc. (NYSE: TGT).

"This project is a very important strategic and economic investment for our companies," Jones said. "It will link key producing areas to vital markets at a time when our country's energy supply requires rapid development."

The system is designed so that it can be readily expanded to 1.2 billion cubic feet per day.

The 904-mile pipeline will transport natural gas produced in Canada and the Rocky Mountain region of the United States. Most of the gas will be used to generate steam for enhanced oil recovery in the heavy oil fields of Kern County, Calif.

If Kern County were a state, it would be the fourth-largest oil producer in the country, with an estimated 3.2 billion barrels of remaining recoverable reserves.

But, the extremely heavy crude must be heated before it can be pumped to the surface. Because no alternative fuels have been available to make the necessary steam heat, producers have had to burn one-third of all the oil they produce.

The clean-burning gas shipped on Kern River will allow all the oil produced to be refined.

"President Bush has called on his staff and the agencies to find ways to immediately help reduce our country's dependence on foreign oil while not harming the environment," Jones said. "This project perfectly fits that directive."

In September, Kern River announced it had placed orders for four 12,600-horsepower compressor units and 66 ball valves. In March, it placed orders for more than 310,000 tons of 36-inch diameter steel pipe. Deliveries of pipe should start during the first part of December.

Construction of the system will begin on its southern end near Bakersfield, Calif. It will take about a year to build the pipeline to its northernmost point at Opal, Wyo.

Besides serving the enhanced oil recovery market, gas shipped on Kern River also will be used for distribution by utilities, production of electricity, cogeneration of electricity and steam and other industrial applications.

The Williams Companies is a Tulsa-based corporation that operates a nationwide digital telecommunications network and more than 25,000 miles of pipelines, which transport natural gas and petroleum products.

Tenneco Inc. is a Houston-based, diversified company with major business interests in natural gas pipelines, farm and construction equipment, shipbuilding, automotive parts, packaging, chemicals and minerals.

MINNEAPOLIS (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Washington Scientific Industries, Inc. (NASDAQ: WSCI) said today that it expects to report a net loss of approximately 35 to 40 cents per share for its fourth quarter ended Aug. 26, 1990, compared with net earnings of 41 cents per share from continuing operations for the same period in 1989.

Final results are expected to be announced in approximately three weeks, after completion of the audit. The company previously reported net earnings of 38 cents per share for the first nine months of fiscal year 1990, resulting in approximately break-even results for fiscal 1990.

Clifford W. Dinsmore, president and CEO, said that fourth quarter performance was affected by lower than expected sales volumes and gross margins in both the company's Contract Manufacturing Division and its Advanced Custom Molders subsidiary. "We are making progress, but margin pressures are continuing," Dinsmore said. "We were particularly affected by higher than expected costs in our plastics business during the quarter. Start-up costs are beginning to decline in our computer peripherals area, but they continue to be high on our other new non- computer industry projects, which are important to the long-term success of the company."

Washington Scientific Industries is a Minnesota-based provider of high precision manufacturing services for a variety of industries. The company's Contract Manufacturing Division produces metal components and subassemblies in three plants located in Minnesota and California, and its Advanced Custom Molders subsidiary produces thermoplastic injection molded components in two Texas plants.

GREENVILLE, S.C. (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Gates/FA Distributing (NASDAQ: FACO) reported financial results for the fiscal year and fourth quarter ended June 30, 1990. For fiscal 1990, the company had revenues of $166.5 million, a 69 percent increase over the 1989 annual revenue of $98.6 million.

The company reported a pre-tax profit of $110,000 for fiscal 1990, compared to $1,000 for the year earlier period.

The operating income before interest expense for 1990 was $2.9 million, compared to $1.5 million in 1989. Without a $470,000 expense for consolidation of the facilities, and a one-time write-off of $147,000 in deferred registration costs, the operating income would have been $3.5 million and income before income taxes and extraordinary credit would have been $727,000.

After the provision and extraordinary credit for income tax, however, due in part to alternative minimum tax rules, the company showed a net loss of $62,000, or less than 1 cent per share.

Selling, general and administrative costs (SG & A) as a percentage of sales decreased to 7.5 percent for fiscal 1990, from 7.9 percent for the year earlier period, reflecting the continued ability to achieve higher sales volumes without a corresponding increase in overhead. Management expects that expenses as a percentage of sales will continue to decrease, as centralization efficiencies and cost-cutting programs continue.

The sales increase for the year is attributable to new product lines and geographical locations acquired through the merger with Gates Distributing Inc. (effective March 1, 1989), as well as to internal growth.

For the fourth quarter ended June 30, 1990, net sales were $35.4 million versus $36.4 million, for the similar quarter a year ago, reflecting a decrease of 2.8 percent. Management attributes this decrease in sales volume for the fourth quarter to the company's efforts to decrease its volume of low-margin sales, to the loss of the Toshiba line, and to the fact that through the consolidation of the sales offices, many of the salespeople were in transit to new locations.

According to Steve Owings, president and CEO of Gates/FA Distributing, "We have added some new vendor lines to replace the lost Toshiba revenues. Also, the consolidation costs are well behind us and we now look forward to reaping the benefits of increased efficiencies while we offer what we believe to be a key competitive strategy in the microcomputer distribution industry -- the ability to ship overnight to our customers nationwide."

Gates/FA Distributing is a national distributor of a select number of high-quality microcomputer product lines. Serving only the reseller, Gates/FA offers "Next Day/No Extra Cost!" delivery from its centralized-hub warehousing facility. The corporate headquarters are located in Greenville, S.C. at 803-234-0736. The national toll-free sales telephone number is 800-332-2222.

BOSTON (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The Gillette Company's (NYSE: GS) Sensor shaving system has been a remarkable success since its January market introduction, according to leading retail audits. Demand is 30 percent ahead of expectations, with 20 million razors sold in the first eight months of the year -- the original Sensor razor sales forecast for the entire year. The Sensor razor is the largest selling razor in the North Atlantic markets, and blades have already attained about an 8 percent retail dollar market share in the U.S., a level substantially higher than originally projected. This success is echoed throughout both North America and Europe, where Gillette Sensor has paced strong overall market performance by the company.

"In last fall's announcement of the launch of Sensor, we confidently projected its success would usher in a new era of shaving worldwide," said John Symons, president, Gillette North Atlantic Group. "These market data are proof that Sensor is the most successful new product launch in the history of Gillette and the most innovative shaving system on the market today."

A key part of Gillette's business strategy has been to build the higher-value shaving systems segment. This strategy is substantiated by the audit data that demonstrate growth in the systems market segment overall (+2.1 current vs. 1989) while the disposable market has shown a slight decline of 0.8.

Former users of disposables constitute 27 percent of current Sensor customers, and give Sensor performance overwhelmingly high ratings, in line with company projections. Overall preference for Sensor is significantly high (average of 88 percent) among previous disposables users of both Gillette and competitive brands.

Sensor Users of Diverse Shaving Backgrounds Agree on Pluses Joining former disposables users in their praise, Sensor customers include former users of systems, and electric shavers, as predicted in pre-launch testing results. High-ranking responses among purchasers reflected Gillette's positioning of the product -- closer, smoother, and safer. Additionally, the razor handle and pivoting action of the head were cited at significant levels.

"All of this success is even more impressive considering the 25 percent price premium of Sensor when it was introduced," said Symons. "Customers recognize Sensor's good shaving value -- at six cents a shave, that comes to less than $20 a year, and that's a price most anyone can afford."

Oce, international manufacturer of design engineering and office systems copying systems, has its home base in Venlo, the Netherlands and North American headquarters in Chicago.

Consolidated third quarter net income for the three months ended Aug. 31, 1990 declined 9.4 percent to $9.9 million, or $0.65 per share based on 15,149,405 shares outstanding, compared to $10.9 million, or $0.73 per share based on 15,031,530 shares outstanding at the fiscal 1989 year-end.

Revenues in the third quarter totaled $309.2 million, an increase of 3 percent compared to $301.6 million for the third quarter of fiscal 1989. Exchange rates had a negative impact of 4 percent on revenues expressed in Dutch guilder terms, and internal growth in office systems lagged slightly behind that of previous quarters. Revenues from design engineering were lower than in the two preceding quarters. Both developments reflect the transition to new generations of copier families. Office systems and design engineering both have strong order backlogs for the new machines.

Reflecting the changeover to the new systems and related launching costs, plus the negative effects of exchange rates, operating income declined 8.3 percent to $18.0 million from $19.7 million.

Third quarter net financial expense -- interest paid, income from financial lease contracts and other interest income -- increased to $4.3 million.

Third quarter cash flow (net income + depreciation) advanced 5.8 percent to $47.9 million.

Nine Month Figures Consolidated net income for the nine months ended Aug. 31, 1990 totaled $34.1 million, or $2.25 per share based on 15,149,405 shares outstanding, compared to $ 33.9 million, or $2.26 per share based on 15,031,530 shares outstanding at the fiscal 1989 year end.

Revenues for the nine months totaled $960.0 million, an increase of 12 percent compared to $857.7 million for the three quarters of fiscal 1989. Internal growth accounted for 6 percent of the increase, after eliminating the positive effect generated by the contribution of Oce graphics (+ 10 percent) and the negative effects of exchange rate fluctuations (- 4 percent).

Nine month operating income rose 8 percent to $62.9 million from $58.3 million. Oce Graphics made a positive contribution to this growth and exchange rates and the above mentioned start-up costs had a negative impact.

Advancing interest rates and a higher interest bearing debt position arising from the acquisitions made in the second half of fiscal 1989, led to an increase of $5.0 million to $14.4 million in net financial expense during the first nine months.

Office systems: nine month sales totaled $499 million compared to 1989's first nine months $468 million, an increase of 7 percent, 11 percent of which came from internal growth, after giving effect to the negative exchange rate developments. An increasingly important contribution to office systems' sales growth is coming from sales and rentals of the Oce 2500, introduced last year for the very high volume sector of the market. Deliveries also commenced during the third quarter of the Oce 2400 -- for customers making up to 100,000 copies per month. The Oce 2400, for which a good order book has been built up, will start to make a contribution to sales in the current quarter.

Design engineering: fiscal 1990 nine months sales advanced 18 percent to $461 million. After eliminating Oce Graphics' (+ 23 percent) and exchange rate effects (- 5 percent) this figure equals that of the corresponding period of 1989. Oce Graphics' new G9800 Raster Plotter, deliveries of which started in July, have met with an enthusiastic market response, and in the third quarter a new range of pen plotters was introduced. Deliveries of the Oce 7100, a large format plain paper copier for which a substantial order backlog exists, are beginning to build up.

Year End Expectations The third quarter income decline notwithstanding, group results for the year ending Nov. 30, 1990, should approximate those of 1989, one of the reasons being the new products' strong order book position, deliveries on which are now progressing well. This prediction is made subject to any significant change in the general political, economic and financial situation worldwide.

LAKE WORTH, Fla. (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Cenvill Development Corp. (AMEX: CVL) today reported operating results for the third quarter and nine months ended July 31, 1990.

For the third quarter of fiscal 1990, the company reported a net loss of $17,720,000 or $1.23 per share, compared with net income of $119,000 or 1 cent per share for the third quarter of fiscal 1989. The third quarter net loss resulted from the inclusion of a net realizable provision after tax of $18,798,000 or $1.31 per share, which served to reduce the aggregate carrying value of certain assets, primarily commercial real estate and other non-residential inventories. The reduction was based on the conclusion that the adjusted assets' value had been impaired due primarily to current economic conditions, including the further softening in the Florida real estate markets. The net realizable value provision was $30,500,000 pre-tax. Excluding this provision, net income would have been $1,078,000 or $.08 per share.

Revenues for the nine months ended July 31, 1990, were $90,616,000 and net loss was $13,727,000 or 95 cents per share, compared with $92,344,000 in revenues and net income of $3,085,000 or 21 cents per share in the 1989 period.

In addition to the effect of the net realizable provision referred to above, the 1990 nine-month results include net income of $2,700,000 or 19 cents per share related to the adoption of a new method of accounting for income taxes. Absent these items, net income would have amounted to $2,371,000 or 17 cents per share in the 1990 period.

Cenvill is primarily engaged in the construction and sale of residential real estate in planned communities and the development of commercial properties primarily in Southeast Florida. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, as receiver of a Florida bank, is the owner of approximately 96 percent of the outstanding shares of Cenvill. Within recent months, at the direction of the FDIC, there has been a substantial change in the composition of the company's board of directors.

Cenvill has outstanding borrowings of approximately $240 million, a significant portion of which recently have matured or are scheduled to mature shortly. The company is dependent upon the cooperation of its major lenders in order to have adequate financial resources to satisfy its current and future need for funds and to continue its business as it has been conducted in the past. The company is presently engaged in discussions with each of three major lenders concerning extensions of existing loans and a general restructuring of its indebtedness.

The company is unable to predict whether its major lenders will grant any further extensions or forebearances, whether it can successfully accomplish a restructuring of all or a portion of its existing indebtedness, or if it is unsuccessful in accomplishing any of the foregoing, the other alternatives it will pursue.

In addition to the FDIC's stock ownership, Cenvill has 640,000 shares of Class A Common Stock which trade on the American Stock Exchange. At Cenvill's request, on Sept. 19, 1990, trading of the Class A Common Stock was temporarily halted pending the filing of the company's third quarter financial statements.

Richard Siemens, president, said, "Notwithstanding the third quarter net loss, the company has a significant net worth."

MOSCOW (OCTOBER 4) TASS - THE REGISTRATION OF PERIODICALS IN THE SOVIET UNION UNDER THE LAW ON THE PRESS, IN EFFECT SINCE AUGUST 1, IS AN ATTEMPT TO PUT THINGS IN ORDER IN THE SOVIET INFORMATION INDUSTRY, ALEXANDER GORKOVLYUK, DEPUTY CHAIRMAN OF THE STATE COMMITTEE FOR THE PRESS, TOLD REPORTERS HERE ON WEDNESDAY.

HE SAID THAT MORE THAN 700 PERIODICALS, INCLUDING THE PUBLICATIONS OF 13 PARTIES, HAVE ALREADY BEEN REGISTERED.

THE REGISTRATION OFTEN PROVOKES CONFLICTS BETWEEN THE EXISTING FOUNDERS OF A PERIODICAL AND CONTENDERS FOR THIS STATUS, GORKOVLYUK SAID. MANY OF THE CONFLICTS INVOLVE THE DIVISION OF PROPERTY.

MANY PUBLICATIONS SEEK TO GET RID OF THEIR FOUNDERS. ONE OF THESE IS THE POPULAR WEEKLY ARGUMENTS AND FACTS, WITH A CIRCULATION OF OVER 30 MILLION COPIES. THE OFFICIAL SAID THAT THE WEEKLY WOULD MOST LIKELY DETACH ITSELF FROM ITS FOUNDER -- THE ZNANIYE (KNOWLEDGE) SOCIETY.

EACH SEVENTH REGISTERED PUBLICATION IS PRIVATE, GORKOVLYUK SAID. HOWEVER, THE SHORTAGES OF PAPER AND PRINTING EQUIPMENT IN THE COUNTRY COMPLICATE PRIVATE PUBLISHING.

THE OFFICIAL CALLED FOR A STATE PROGRAM TO MODERNISE THE PRINTING INDUSTRY TO MAKE THE LAW ON THE PRESS MORE EFFICIENT.

HE SAID THE REGISTRATION OF PUBLICATIONS IS TO BE COMPLETED BY THE END OF THE YEAR.

NEW YORK (OCTOBER 4) TASS - FOLLOWS THE FULL TEXT OF A JOINT SOVIET-AMERICAN STATEMENT ADOPTED HERE ON WEDNESDAY:

THE 45TH SESSION OF THE UNITED NATIONS GENERAL ASSEMBLY IS TAKING PLACE AMIDST THE MOST PROFOUND CHANGES IN INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS THAT HAVE OCCURRED SINCE THE SECOND WORLD WAR. THE CONFRONTATIONAL NATURE OF RELATIONS BETWEEN EAST AND WEST IS GIVING WAY TO A COOPERATIVE RELATIONSHIP AND PARTNERSHIP. THE UNITED NATIONS IS BECOMING A GENUINE CENTRE FOR COORDINATED JOINT ACTIONS, AND THE SECURITY COUNCIL IS RESTORING ITS DECISIVE ROLE IN EFFORTS TO PROMOTE INTERNATIONAL SECURITY, PEACEFULLY SETTLE DISPUTES AND AVERT CONFLICTS. YET THERE REMAIN MANY CHALLENGES TO MEET AND PROBLEMS TO SOLVE ON THE WAY TO A PEACEFUL AND PROSPEROUS FUTURE.

REAFFIRMING THE RESOLUTION PRESENTED LAST YEAR BY THE UNITED STATES AND SOVIET UNION AND UNANIMOUSLY ADOPTED BY THE U.N. GENERAL ASSEMBLY, OUR TWO COUNTRIES WILL ATTACH SPECIAL IMPORTANCE TO PROMOTING PRACTICAL, MULTIFACETED SOLUTIONS TO THE ISSUES OF INTERNATIONAL PEACE AND SECURITY, POLITICAL, ECONOMIC, SOCIAL CULTURAL AND HUMANITARIAN PROBLEMS.

TO ACCOMPLISH THIS WE WILL PURSUE COOPERATION WITH ALL MEMBER-STATES IN ATTAINMENT OF THE FOLLOWING:

-STRENGTHEN THE U.N.'S EFFORTS TO PROMOTE INTERNATIONAL PEACE AND SECURITY IN ALL ITS ASPECTS BY WORKING TO IMPROVE U.N. PEACE-KEEPING, PEACE-MAKING AND CRISIS PREVENTION FUNCTIONS AND BY ENCOURAGING MORE ACTIVE USE OF THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S GOOD OFFICES, HELP INDIVIDUAL COUNTRIES HOLD ELECTIONS AT THEIR REQUEST;

-ESTABLISH A NEW SENSE OF RESPONSIBILITY AT THE U.N. BY ENCOURAGING THE TREND AWAY FROM THEORETICAL EXCESS TOWARD EFFORTS TO DEAL PRAGMATICALLY WITH THE MAJOR ISSUES OF THE 1990S, INCLUDING TRANSNATIONAL ISSUES LIKE NARCOTICS, THE ENVIRONMENT, DEVELOPMENT, TERRORISM, AND HUMAN RIGHTS;

-PROMOTE A NEW WAY OF CONDUCTING DIPLOMATIC EFFORTS WITHIN THE U.N. SYSTEM TO ELIMINATE DUPLICATIVE PROGRAMS AND ACTIVITIES AND ENSURE THAT THE U.N. SYSTEM IS UTILIZED IN THE MOST EFFICIENT MANNER POSSIBLE -- WE CALL THIS A "UNITARY U.N.";

-ENSURE THE AVAILABILITY OF SUFFICIENT RESOURCES TO THE U.N. FOR IT TO FUNCTION EFFECTIVELY AND EFFICIENTLY BY TIMELY PAYMENT OF FINANCIAL OBLIGATIONS TO THE U.N.;

-PROMOTING PEACE AND SECURITY IN ALL ITS ASPECTS

JOINT EFFORTS HAVE CONTRIBUTED SIGNIFICANTLY TO THE EASING OF TENSIONS IN SOUTHERN AFRICA AND CENTRAL AMERICA, AND ARE PART OF EFFORTS TO PREPARE A PEACEFUL SETTLEMENT IN CAMBODIA. BUT SERIOUS PROBLEMS STILL REMAIN. OUR SEARCH CONTINUES FOR WORKABLE SOLUTIONS TO CONFLICT AND INSTABILITY IN THE PERSIAN GULF, THE MIDDLE EAST, AFGHANISTAN, AND EL SALVADOR.

IN THE PERSIAN GULF, WE FACE A MOST SERIOUS THREAT TO THE INTEGRITY OF THE EMERGING INTERNATIONAL SYSTEM. THE UNITED STATES AND THE SOVIET UNION ARE WORKING TOGETHER WITH OTHER MEMBERS OF THE SECURITY COUNCIL TO FASHION A CONCERTED RESPONSE, UNPRECEDENTED IN U.N. HISTORY, TO THIS CRISIS. THE SWIFT

REACTION OF THE INTERNATIONAL COMMUNITY TO IRAQ'S DANGEROUS AND UNWARRANTED AGGRESSION SERVES AS A SOBERING REMINDER TO ANY FUTURE AGGRESSOR; THE INTERNATIONAL COMMUNITY WILL NOT TOLERATE THE KIND OF WANTON AGGRESSION WHICH IRAQ HAS COMMITTED. WE CALL UPON ALL UNITED NATIONS MEMBERS TO CONTINUE TO SUPPORT THE SANCTIONS INVOKED BY SECURITY COUNCIL RESOLUTION 661 AND 670 UNTIL IRAQ ABIDES BY THE CALL OF THE SECURITY COUNCIL TO WITHDRAW ITS FORCES FROM KUWAIT IMMEDIATELY, TOTALLY AND UNCONDITIONALLY. WE CALL ALSO FOR THE RESTORATION OF THE LEGITIMATE GOVERNMENT OF KUWAIT.

THE RAPIDLY CHANGING STRUCTURE OF INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS REQUIRES A UNITED NATIONS THAT, WHILE REMAINING FAITHFUL TO ITS ORIGINAL PURPOSES, CAN ALSO RESPOND FLEXIBLY AND EFFECTIVELY TO NEW CHALLENGES AS THEY OCCUR, LIKE DRUGS, THE ENVIRONMENT, AND THE NEED TO ENSURE THE PROTECTION OF HUMAN RIGHTS.

TANGIBLE EXAMPLES OF THE U.N. MOVEMENT AWAY FROM DIVISIVE RHETORIC AND POLITICAL EXCESS WERE LAST DECEMBER'S SPECIAL SESSION OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY ON APARTHEID AND THE RESUMED SESSION THIS MONTH, WHERE THE WORLD COMMUNITY UNDERSCORED ITS RESOLUTE OPPOSITION TO APARTHEID WHILE AGREEING, BY CONSENSUS, ON A POSITIVE APPROACH BASED ON DIALOGUE AMONG ALL SOUTH AFRICAN PARTIES. WE WILL WORK FOR EQUALLY POSITIVE RESULTS AT THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY THIS YEAR.

THE U.N. SPECIAL SESSION ON INTERNATIONAL ECONOMIC COOPERATION IN APRIL 1990 ALSO REFLECTED THE GROWING CONVERGENCE OF VIEWS WORLDWIDE ON THE NEED FOR MORE EFFECTIVE APPROACHES TO NATIONAL ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT, IN THE CONTEXT OF A SUPPORTIVE INTERNATIONAL ECONOMIC ENVIRONMENT. OUR TWO COUNTRIES WILL CONTINUE WORKING TOGETHER TO PROMOTE FURTHER CONVEYANCE IN THIS DIRECTION. WE WILL ALSO SUPPORT EFFORTS TO ENSURE CAREFUL AND PRAGMATIC PREPARATION FOR THE 1992 CONFERENCE ON ENVIRONMENT AND DEVELOPMENT. WE WANT TO SEE THE CONFERENCE FASHION A REALISTIC ACTION PLAN TO SET THE U.N.'S COURSE IN THE COMING DECADES.

THE UNITED NATIONS CAN PLAY A LEADING ROLE ON ISSUES OF GLOBAL CONCERN. WE WILL ACTIVELY SUPPORT EFFORTS, THROUGHOUT THE U.N. SYSTEM, TO IMPLEMENT AND STRENGTHEN THE PRINCIPLES AND THE SYSTEM OF INTERNATIONAL PEACE, SECURITY AND INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION LAID DOWN IN THE CHARTER.

MOSCOW (OCTOBER 4) TASS - THE TENSE SITUATION ON THE CONSUMER MARKET AND GROWING SHORTAGE OF CONSUMER GOODS ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR MOST ECONOMIC CRIMES, DEPUTY HEAD OF THE SOVIET INTERIOR MINISTRY'S MAIN DEPARTMENT TO COMBAT THEFT OF SOCIALIST PROPERTY AND PROFITEERING VIKTOR ABROSIMOV TOLD TASS.

COMPARED TO SEPTEMBER 1, 1989, LARGE SCALE THEFT HAS GROWN BY 25 PER CENT AND BRIBERY AND PROFITEERING BY 16 PER CENT. SHORTAGES OF GOODS HELP INFLATE PRICES IN THE SHADOW ECONOMY. PROFITEERS ARE SELLING GOODS IN SHORT SUPPLY AT PRICES EXCEEDING RETAIL PRICES BY 100-400 PER CENT AND EVEN MORE.

ACCORDING TO THE DEPARTMENT, THE IMBALANCE BETWEEN SUPPLY AND DEMAND ON THE CONSUMER MARKET STIMULATES VARIOUS FORMS OF ILLEGAL TRADE UNDERTAKINGS.

ACCORDING TO OFFICIAL DATA FROM THE SOVIET INTERIOR MINISTRY, OVER 185,000 PEOPLE HAVE TAKEN PART IN SUCH UNDERTAKINGS BY SEPTEMBER 1, 1990.

SPEAKING ABOUT SUPPLIES OF FOOD AND INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTS, ABROSIMOV SAID THE SITUATION HAS NOT CHANGED FOR THE BETTER IN THE RUSSIAN FEDERATION, KAZAKHSTAN MOLDAVIA, TAJIKISTAN OR TURKMENIA AND IT IS GETTING EVEN WORSE IN SOME REGIONS OF THE UKRAINE, BYELORUSSIA AND AZERBAIJAN.

INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTION IN THE SOVIET AGRO-INDUSTRIAL COMPLEX DROPPED BY 613 MILLION ROUBLES DURING THE FIRST EIGHT MONTHS OF 1990. THE GROSS OUTPUT OF AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS DROPPED BY 1.4 PER CENT BETWEEN JANUARY-AUGUST OF 1990. DURING THE SAME PERIOD, THE COUNTRY RECEIVED 12 BILLION ROUBLES WORTH OF FOOD PRODUCTS LESS, THAN SPECIFIED IN THE PLAN.

IN ADDITION, THE LIGHT INDUSTRY HAS ALMOST BEGUN TO DISINTEGRATE, BECAUSE THE PLAN FOR CONSUMER PRODUCTS WAS NOT SUPPLIED WITH MATERIAL AND TECHNICAL RESOURCES, ABROSIMOV SAID.

LENINGRAD (OCTOBER 4) TASS - ARCHITECT YAKOV CHERNIKHOV (1889-1951) WENT DOWN IN THE HISTORY OF SOVIET ARCHITECTURE AS AN ARTIST WHO WAS AHEAD OF HIS TIME. AN EXHIBITION OF HIS WORKS "ARCHITECTURAL FANTASIES" HAS OPENED AT THE STATE RUSSIAN MUSEUM IN LENINGRAD. IN NOVEMBER-DECEMBER, THE ARCHITECT'S WORKS WILL GO ON EXHIBITION AT COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY IN THE UNITED STATES.

CHERNIKHOV, WHO STUDIED AT PETERSBURG'S ART ACADEMY AND WAS AN APPRENTICE AT LEONTY BENOIS' SHOP, UNCANNILY ANTICIPATED THE CITY PLANNING IDEAS OF THE FUTURE. THE BOLDNESS OF HIS THOUGHT CAN BE JUDGED BY THE CYCLES "THE DESIGN OF ARCHITECTURAL AND MACHINE FORMS", "PALACES OF COMMUNISM" AND THE "PANTHEON OF THE SECOND WORLD WAR" ON DISPLAY AT THE EXHIBITION.

THE ARCHITECT'S CREATIVITY CAME UNDER STRIDENT CRITICISM IN HIS HOMELAND FOR A LONG TIME, BECAUSE MANY OF HIS CONCEPTS DID NOT ACCORD WITH OFFICIAL IDEOLOGICAL DIRECTIVES. AN IMPARTIAL ASSESSMENT OF HIS HERITAGE HAS BEEN GIVEN ONLY RECENTLY, IN HALF A CENTURY.

AN INTERNATIONAL FOUNDATION NAMED AFTER CHERNIKHOV HAS ALREADY BEEN CREATED ABROAD. PREPARATIONS ARE UNDER WAY TO OPEN IT IN THE USSR. THERE ARE PLANS TO REVIVE CHERNIKHOV'S EXPERIMENTAL STUDIO IN LENINGRAD BY INSTITUTING ON ITS BASIS AN INTERNATIONAL CENTRE OF CONCEPTUAL ARCHITECTURE.

MOSCOW (OCTOBER 4) TASS - THE PRINCIPAL AIM OF YEVGENY PRIMAKOV'S MISSION TO THE MIDDLE EAST IS "TO LOOK FOR A POSSIBLE, PEACEFUL SOLUTION TO THE ACUTE INTERNATIONAL CRISIS IN THE PERSIAN GULF", SOVIET FOREIGN MINISTRY SPOKESMAN YURI GREMITSKIKH SAID TODAY AS HE BRIEFED REPORTERS ON THE PRESIDENTIAL COUNCIL MEMBER'S TRIP TO JORDAN AND IRAQ.

PRIMAKOV WENT THERE ON WEDNESDAY AS A PERSONAL ENVOY FROM MIKHAIL GORBACHEV AND WITH POWERS "TO SPEAK ON BEHALF" OF THE PRESIDENT, GREMITSKIKH SAID.

HE ADDED THAT ALSO ON WEDNESDAY, PRIMAKOV MET KING HUSSEIN OF JORDAN AND HANDED HIM A PERSONAL LETTER FROM GORBACHEV AND LATER CONFERRED WITH PALESTINE LIBERATION ORGANISATION LEADER YASSER ARAFAT.

"THE SOVIET PRESIDENT'S PERSONAL ENVOY IS IN BAGHDAD TODAY," GREMITSKIKH SAID. "HIS TALKS WITH THE IRAQI LEADERSHIP ARE FOCUSING ON A WHOLE GAMUT OF PROBLEMS ASSOCIATED WITH RISING TENSION IN THE GULF AS A RESULT OF IRAQI AGGRESSION AGAINST KUWAIT."

"ONE CAN ASSUME THAT THE SOVIET SIDE WILL CLEARLY SET OUT ITS PRINCIPLED ATTITUDE TO ALL THESE ISSUES ALONG WITH EVERYTHING THAT FOLLOWS FROM THE UNITED NATIONS SECURITY COUNCIL RESOLUTION AND OTHER INTERNATIONAL DOCUMENTS ON THE CRISIS," THE SPOKESMAN ADDED.

HE SAID THAT PRIMAKOV IS BEING ACCOMPANIED BY DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER IGOR BELOUSOV, LEADER OF THE TASK FORCE SET UP ON PRESIDENTIAL INSTRUCTIONS TO RESOLVE ALL ISSUES INVOLVED IN THE EVACUATION OF SOVIET NATIONALS FROM IRAQ.

"IT IS NATURAL TO ASSUME THAT PRIMAKOV AND BELOUSOV WILL DISCUSS WITH THE IRAQI LEADERSHIP ADEQUATELY ENSURING THE SAFETY OF SOVIET NATIONALS IN IRAQ, AS WELL AS THEIR FREE EXIT FROM THAT COUNTRY.

PRAGUE (OCTOBER 4) TASS - CARS QUEUED UP FOR KILOMETERS AT FILLING STATIONS IN CZECHOSLOVAKIA. ONLY RECENTLY, IT TOOK CZECHOSLOVAK DRIVERS ONLY FIVE TO TEN MINUTES TO FILL THEIR CARS.

THE PANIC STARTEED IN SLOVAKIA, WHERE THE SITUATION BEGAN TO GO OUT OF CONTROL AFTER THE SLOVAK PRIME MINISTER STATED THAT PETROL RESERVES WOULD ONLY SUFFICE FOR TWO DAYS OF OPERATIONS AT THE SLOVNAFT INTEGRATED WORKS, THE LARGEST SUPPLIER OF PETROL TO CZECHOSLOVAKIA. A DECISION WAS MADE IN SLOVAKIA TO PROHIBIT FILLING ADDITIONAL TANKS WITH FUEL. BY WEDNESDAY EVENING, THE PETROL PANIC HAD REACHED PRAGUE.

TOP CZECHOSLOVAK LEADERS MET TO DISCUSS THE CRISIS. THEY DECIDED TO ASK THE SOVIET UNION WITH THE REQUEST TO CONDUCT TALKS SHORTLY TO SETTLE SHORTFALLS IN SOVIET PETROL SUPPLIES. SPEAKERS AT THE MEETING STATED THAT A FURTHER DROP IN OIL SUPPLIES WOULD SERIOUSLY COMPLICATE THE SITUATION IN THE COUNTRY.

THE SITUATION IN CZECHOSLOVAKIA WAS ALREADY TENSE. A BILL ON SMALL PRIVITISATION WAS NEGATIVELY RECEIVED BY TRADE, PUBLIC CATERING AND SERVICE SECTOR WORKERS. DEMONSTRATIONS ARE BEING HELD THROUGHOUT CZECHOSLOVAKIA, PROTESTING AGAINST THE IMPENDING UNEMPLOYMENT. WORKERS AT AGRICULTURAL COOPERATIVES OPPOSE FORCED PRIVATISATION OF THEIR FARMS.

AS FOR PETROL, THE SLOVAK GOVERNMENT PROPOSED SELLING 30 LITRES OF PETROL A MONTH AT THE CURRENT PRICE. DRIVERS WOULD PAY AT COMMERCIAL PRICES FOR ANYTHING THAT EXCEEDS 30 LITRES. IT REMAINS UNCLEAR WHETHER OR NOT THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT WILL AGREE TO THIS RISE IN THE PETROL PRICE, THE SECOND THIS YEAR. THE PRICE HIKE WILL HIT THE CZECHOSLOVAK PEOPLE HARD AS VIRTUALLY EVERY FAMILY HAS A CAR.

MOSCOW (OCTOBER 4) TASS - RETIRED SOVIET COMMUNIST PARTY POLITBURO MEMBER YEGOR LIGACHEV, NOW WORKING ON HIS MEMOIRS, HAS DENIED NEWS REPORTS THAT THEY WILL BE SERIALISED IN A SIBERIAN JOURNAL.

SPEAKING IN A TASS INTERVIEW, HE SAID THE REPORTS ABOUT HIS ALLEGED DEAL WITH THE NOVOSIBIRSK-BASED SIBIRSKIYE OGNI (SIBERIAN LIGHTS) MONTHLY WERE NOT TRUE.

"IT WAS FROM THE PRESS THAT I LEARNT MYSELF WHAT AND WHERE I SHOULD PUBLISH," SAID LIGACHEV.

"THERE IS, WITHOUT EXAGGERATION, NO SHORTAGE OF WILLING PUBLISHERS. FRANKLY, I HAVE ALREADY RECEIVED ABOUT A DOZEN OFFERS FROM BOTH DOMESTIC AND FOREIGN PUBLISHING HOUSES. BUT I HAVEN'T GIVEN ANY OF THEM SERIOUS CONSIDERATION YET," HE EXPLAINED.

ASKED ABOUT HIS WORK ON THE BOOK, LIGACHEV ANSWERED IN SO MANY WORDS: "EVERYTHING ASSOCIATED WITH IT IS, AS YET, A SECRET. I THINK I SHOULD COMPLETE THE MEMOIRS AS SOON AS POSSIBLE. THE WORK IS ON, AND GETTING AHEAD FAST, ALTHOUGH SOMETIMES PAINFULLY AS YOU PONDER EVERYTHING ANEW, RAKE UP THE PAST AND THINK IT OVER AGAIN."

HE DISCLOSED, HOWEVER, THAT THE BOOK FOCUSES "PRIMARILY ON THE PAST FIVE TO SEVEN YEARS".

"SOMETHING APPEARS TO BE COMING OUT WELL AND SOMETHING NOT SO WELL," LIGACHEV SAID. "I AM WRITING IT MYSELF, TYPING IT MYSELF AND KEEPING IT TO MYSELF."

VIENNA (OCTOBER 4) TASS - A REGULAR PLENARY SESSION WAS HELD TODAY AT THE VIENNA TALKS ON CONVENTIONAL ARMED FORCES IN EUROPE, WHICH TURNED FROM A FORUM OF 23 COUNTRIES INTO A FORUM OF 22 AFTER THE REUNIFICATION OF GERMANY.

IT WAS "GERMANY'S DAY", AND HEAD OF THE GERMAN DELEGATION AMBASSADOR RUEDIGER HARTMANN, WHO WAS RECEIVING CONGRATULATIONS ON GERMAN REUNIFICATION, BECAME ITS HERO. HE MADE A STATEMENT, STRESSING THAT HIS COUNTRY'S FOREIGN POLICY WOULD BE ORIENTATED TOWARDS PARTNERSHIP AND CLOSE INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION AND THAT NOTHING BUT PEACE WOULD COME FROM GERMANY.

HARTMANN POINTED OUT THAT THE NEW YORK MEETING OF FOREIGN MINISTERS HAD MADE "DECISIVE PROGRESS ON THE PROBLEMS REMAINING OPEN", WHICH ARE BEING DISCUSSED AT THE VIENNA TALKS. THIS REFERS, IN THE FIRST PLACE, TO THE QUOTAS AND THE SETTING OF UPPER LIMITS FOR TANKS, ARTILLERY, HELICOPTERS AND ARMOURED VEHICLES, AS WELL AS THE AIR FORCE PROBLEM.

SPEAKING AT A PRESS CONFERENCE HERE, HARTMANN SAID THAT MORE THAN 50 PERCENT OF THE TEXT OF THE FUTURE TREATY ON CONVENTIONAL ARMED FORCES HAD ALREADY BEEN COORDINATED. HE EXPRESSED CONFIDENCE THAT THE DOCUMENT WOULD BE READY BY THE BEGINNING OF THE ALL-EUROPEAN SUMMIT IN PARIS IN NOVEMBER.

REPRESENTATIVES OF HUNGARY AND BELGIUM TOLD THE PLENARY SESSION ABOUT THE HOLDING OF RECIPROCAL INSPECTIONS OF MILITARY FACILITIES ON TERRITORIES OF THE TWO COUNTRIES.

MOSCOW (OCTOBER 4) TASS - SOVIET DEFENSE INDUSTRIES WILL ALMOST DOUBLE THEIR CIVILIAN PRODUCTION BETWEEN 1991 AND 1995 IF A NATIONAL CONVERSION PROGRAM IS ADOPTED, SOVIET COMMUNIST PARTY CENTRAL COMMITTEE SECRETARY OLEG BAKLANOV HAS TOLD THE GLASNOST WEEKLY.

CIVILIAN PRODUCTION AT DEFENSE-RELATED PLANTS IN THE FIVE YEARS MAY BE WORTH OVER 270 BILLION ROUBLES, HE SAID.

THE PROGRAM, WHICH WAS DISCUSSED BY THE PRESIDENTIAL COUNCIL RECENTLY, "IS OPEN TO INNOVATIVE IDEAS" AND "SHOULD FIT IN WITH MARKET ECONOMY PLANS", BAKLANOV SAID.

HE SAID IN THE INTERVIEW, PUBLISHED TODAY, THAT ALREADY, HALF OF THE SOVIET DEFENSE INDUSTRY'S OUTPUT IS CIVILIAN PRODUCTS INTENDED FOR GENERAL INDUSTRIAL OR CONSUMER USE.

HE ADDED, HOWEVER, THAT IT WOULD BE A "HARMFUL ILLUSION" TO EXPECT THE DEFENSE SECTOR TO QUICKLY MEET CONSUMER DEMAND FOR REFRIGERATORS, ELECTRONIC APPLIANCES AND OTHER HOUSEHOLD EQUIPMENT.

DEFENSE INDUSTRIES ONLY ACCOUNTED FOR 6.4 PERCENT OF THE COUNTRY'S BASIC PRODUCTION ASSETS, BAKLANOV EXPLAINED.

HE WARNED THAT CONVERSION, ALTHOUGH DESIRABLE, SHOULD NOT DISRUPT EXISTING STRATEGIC PARITY. GUIDED BY REASONABLE DEFENSE SUFFICIENCY THEORY, THE SOVIET UNION, HE SAID, HAD CUT DEFENSE SPENDING TO 70 BILLION ROUBLES THIS YEAR FROM 76 BILLION IN 1989, WHEREAS THE U.S. INCREASED ITS DEFENSE APPROPRIATIONS TO 306 BILLION DOLLARS FROM 300 BILLION LAST YEAR.

MOSCOW (OCTOBER 4) TASS - YET ANOTHER PROGRAM OF TRANSITION TO A MARKET-BASED ECONOMY HAS EMERGED IN THE SOVIET UNION. MEMBERS OF THE "UNITY - FOR LENINISM AND COMMUNIST IDEALS" SOCIETY HAVE PROPOSED WAYS TO PULL SOVIET SOCIETY OUT OF THE CRISIS CAUSED, THEY BELIEVE, BY NUMEROUS ATTEMPTS AT RESTRUCTURING.

THE NEW SOCIETY, ORGANISED OVER A YEAR AGO, IS HEADED BY NINA ANDREYEVA, A CHEMISTRY TEACHER FROM LENINGRAD, INFAMOUS FOR HER CONSERVATIVE VIEWS.

MEMBERS OF THE SOCIETY BELIEVE THAT SOCIALISM STILL HAS A LOT OF POTENTIAL. "THE SUGGESTED WAYS OF SOLVING ECONOMIC PROBLEMS ARE BASED ON THE RECOGNITION OF THE PROGRESSING SOCIALISATION OF THE ECONOMY AS THE DOMINANT ECONOMIC TENDENCY," TATIYANA KHABAROVA, THE HEAD OF THE SOCIETY'S MOSCOW BRANCH, TOLD TASS.

ACCORDING TO KHABAROVA, THE PROGRAM'S MAIN IDEA LIES IN THE "REBIRTH OF THE POLICY OF CUTTING RETAIL PRICES," THAT WAS PURSUED IN THE SOVIET UNION IN 1947-1954. IT WAS THE TIME WHEN THE STALIN COMMAND AND ADMINISTRATIVE ECONOMIC MODEL FLOURISHED IN THE COUNTRY.

VILNIUS (OCTOBER 4) TASS - LITHUANIAN PRESIDENT VYTAUTAS LANDSBERGIS TOLD THE REPUBLICAN PARLIAMENT HERE TODAY THAT THE MEETING WITH THE SOVIET DELEGATION IN MOSCOW ON TUESDAY WAS A MAJOR EVENT BY ANY COUNTS.

LANDSBERGIS DESCRIBED THE DEVELOPMENT OF RELATIONS BETWEEN THE SOVIET UNION AND LITHUANIA AFTER THE REPUBLICAN PARLIAMENT PROCLAIMED INDEPENDENCE ON MARCH 11, 1990. HE NOTED THAT "A WAY TO TALKS ABOUT TALKS WAS OPENED BY LITHUANIA'S ANNOUNCEMENT OF A MORATORIUM ON THIS DECLARATION TO LAST 100 DAYS AFTER THE BEGINNING OF TALKS WITH MOSCOW".

ACCORDING TO LANDSBERGIS, PARTICIPANTS IN THE CONSULTATIONS IN THE KREMLIN DISPLAYED WILLINGNESS TO BEGIN TALKS. HOWEVER, HE SAID, "WE WANT TO IDENTIFY THE STATUS OF THE PARTICIPANTS IN THE FUTURE NEGOTIATIONS BEFORE THEY BEGIN".

SPEAKING ABOUT THE COMMUNIQUE SIGNED DURING THE MEETING, LANDSBERGIS DESCRIBED IT AS "A MAJOR POLITICAL AND LEGAL DOCUMENT".

ACCORDING TO LANDSBERGIS, THE ATMOSPHERE OF THE DEBATES WAS NOT HEAVY, DESPITE THEIR COMPLEXITY. HE EXPRESSED HOPE THAT THE FIRST MEETING WOULD BE FOLLOWED BY PRODUCTIVE AND FRUITFUL WORK OF EXPERT AND SPECIALIST GROUPS. THIS WILL ENABLE THEM TO DRAW UP DOCUMENTS LAYING THE FOUNDATION FOR FURTHER WORK AIMED AT NORMALISING RELATIONS BETWEEN LITHUANIA AND THE SOVIET UNION.

TALLINN (OCTOBER 4) TASS - A STRIKE IN ESTONIA'S CORRECTIONAL LABOUR I NSTITUTIONS IS IN ITS THIRD DAY. PRISONERS ARE REFUSING TO EAT AND TO WORK. WOMEN AND CHILDREN, WHO ARE KEPT SEPARATELY, ARE NOT TAKING PART IN THE STRIKE.

A LETTER SENT BY THEM TO THE REPUBLICAN GOVERNMENT SAYS THAT THE ACTION IS A CONTINUATION OF THE JULY HUNGER STRIKE, BECAUSE NONE OF THE DEMANDS PUT FORWARD BY PRISONERS AT THAT TIME HAD BEEN SATISFIED. THE ABSENCE OF BASIC CONVENIENCES IS ONE OF THE REASONS FOR THE UNREST. SOME 2,500 PEOPLE ARE KEPT IN THE VAZALEMMA ZONE, WHILE, ACCORDING TO NORMS, THEIR NUMBER SHOULD NOT EXCEED 600.

ACCORDING TO SPECIALISTS, THE CREATION OF NORMAL LIVING CONDITIONS THROUGH BUILDING NEW BARRACKS WITH SINGLE CELLS WILL COST 70 TO 80 MILLION ROUBLES. AT PRESENT THIS SUM CANNOT BE ALLOCATED FROM THE STATE BUDGET.

THE PROBLEM OF PRISONERS' EMPLOYMENT AND WAGES HAS BEEN ACUTE IN CORRECTIONAL LABOUR INSTITUTIONS DURING THE PAST SEVERAL YEARS. HALF OF THEIR WAGES GOES TO THE STATE. MANY PRISONERS SPEND THE REST OF THE MONEY ON PAYING ALIMONY AND COMPENSATING FOR THE DAMAGE INFLICTED BY THEM.

THE CREATION OF A GOVERNMENT COMMISSION FOR EXAMINING PRISONERS' CLAIMS AND COMPLAINTS WAS ANNOUNCED ON WEDNESDAY. THE COMMISSION WILL ALSO ASSESS THE PROPOSAL TO DECLARE AN AMNESTY, BECAUSE MANY OF THE PRISONERS WERE CONVICTED DURING THE STAGNATION PERIOD ON THE BASIS OF THE LAWS WHICH, THEY BELIEVE, ARE OBSOLETE.

(OCT. 4) UPI - Rebel soldiers in the Philippines mounted a rebellion in two southern cities Thursday... declaring the island of Mindanao an independent state. The rebels are led by President Aquino's former deputy security chief. In a radio interview, renegade Colonel Alexander Noble promised ''there will be NO bloodshed.'' But witnesses say loyalist troops stationed on the island are preparing to battle Noble's forces. .

Aquino held an emergency meeting with her Cabinet and leaders of Congress and the Senate. Afterwards, she issued a statement... saying she would crush the uprising ''in due time.''

The United States and Soviet Union agreed in principle Wednesday on a treaty that would drastically cut the number of troops, aircraft, artillery and armored vehicles in Europe. The final agreement was announced by Secretary of State Baker and his Soviet counterpart following private talks at the United Nations.

(OCT. 4) UPI - Workers labored in freezing weather and howling winds Wednesday to recover the bodies of three plane crash victims from a steep gully atop New Hampshire's Mount Washington. The single-engine Cessna... which was enroute from Syracuse, New York, to Bangor, Maine... crashed early Tuesday.

Police in Union Gap, Washington, have few leads on two robbers who used a chainsaw to cut off the hand of a 20-year-old man to steal his expensive watch and two rings. The victim remains hospitalized after Friday's attack. The police chief says the robbers apparently chopped off the hand- in his words- ''for the sheer joy of doing it.''

Irish researchers say left-handedness may start in the womb. Scientists at Queen's University of Belfast studied thumb sucking among fetusus and found about five-and-one-half percent of the babies favored their left thumb. SAN FRANCISCO (OCT. 4) UPI - Unmarried middle-aged men and women face twice the risk of dying within 10 years as those still living with their spouses, a study showed Thursday.

The study of 7,651 people nationwide came to no conclusion about why unmarried people in the group died at the higher rate, but suggested divorce was a key factor in putting people at risk.

Researchers at the University of California at San Francisco found 23 percent of the men between 45 and 54 who lived alone or with someone other than a spouse died within a decade. Only 11 percent of married men studied died during that period.

Of the unmarried women in the same age group, 7.7 percent died. Only 4 percent of married women died. The higher death rate seemed connected to low income, with poorer women at greater risk.

The gap between the married and unmarried groups slightly narrowed as the individuals grew older, the study said.

Men who had been previously married were at the most risk, researchers said.

''Of particular interest is that both men who live alone and those who live with someone other than a spouse are equally disadvantaged for survival,'' said Maradee Davis, an associate professor of epidimeology and biostatistics who led the study. ''The critical factor seems to be the presence of a spouse.''

Because of the high divorce rate in the United States and the trend for older adults to live alone if widowed, there should be ''general concern about the social isolation, health and well-being of older adults living alone,'' she said.

The study, which is consistent with previous research, also found the percentage of people living without spouses increased with age and was higher for women than men in all the age groups. Slighty more than half of the women ages 65 to 74 in the study were living alone or with someone other than a spouse compared to 19 percent of the men.

Also in that age group more people lived alone than in any other. For instance 32 percent of the women studied lived alone. ''This is the group for which there is general concern,'' Davis said.

An earlier study by Davis' group indicated living alone or without a spouse was associated with poor diets. An upcoming study will look at the relationship of diet and living arrangements.

Davis was to present the study to an American Public Health Association meeting in New York.

BOSTON (OCT. 4) UPI - In findings that should help settle the debate over cholesterol, researchers reported that people who underwent cholesterol-lowering surgery developed much less heart disease.

''I would call this a landmark study,'' said Dr. Antonio Gotto of Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, past president of the American Heart Association. ''For skeptics looking for a smoking gun in the debate over the benefits of lowering cholesterol, this is it.''

While extensive research has indicated high blood cholesterol levels hike the risk for heart disease - the nation's No. 1 killer - the link has come under question recently by some who point to a lack of conclusive evidence.

The new study, published Wednesday in The New England Journal of Medicine, is considered unusually strong because the patients took the drastic step of undergoing surgery to reduce their cholesterol, and had a marked reduction in their heart disease rates.

''This trial should put the controversy surrounding the benefits of lowering cholesterol to rest,'' said study leader Dr. Henry Buchwald of the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis.

But Dr. Randolph Reinhold of New England Medical Center in Boston sounded a note of caution, noting that the work involved a rare procedure and showed no significant decrease in chances of dying from heart disease.

The study involved 838 people with high blood cholesterol who had survived a heart attack and for whom, in most cases, drugs failed to reduce their blood cholesterol levels.

About half the patients underwent surgery in which the upper two- thirds of the small intestine was connected to the large intestine - bypassing the lower part of the small intestine - and lowering cholesterol by reducing the amount of cholesterol-carrying bile acid the small intestine could absorb.

For the patients who had surgery, the combined rate of fatal and non- fatal heart attacks in the following 10 years was 35 percent lower on average than those who did not, the reseachers said.

After five years, the surgery group had cholesterol levels an average of 23 percent lower than the comparison group. That included a 38 percent lower level of low-density lipoprotein, or LDL, the so-called ''bad cholesterol'' because it carries most of the cholesterol in the blood, and 4 percent higher levels of high-density lipoprotein, or HDL, the ''good cholesterol'' that helps rid the body of the artery-clogging substance.

In addition, people who underwent surgery had 62 percent fewer heart- bypass operations and 55 percent fewer so-called balloon angioplasty procedures to clear clogged arteries. X-rays of arteries ''consistently showed less heart disease progression in the surgery group.''

''This is the definitive trial,'' Buchwald said. ''With this study, we can clearly demonstrate the benefits of lowering cholesterol'' on coronary artery disease and heart disease.

Buchwald stressed that surgery should be considered only a last resort in lowering cholesterol if diet modifications and drugs are ineffective. ''Should everyone have this procedure? Certainly not,'' he said.

Side effects from surgery included diarrhea, kidney stones and gallstones. Two people in the study died from surgery-related complications.

Cholesterol plays a role in heart disease by accumulating in deposits that can gradually ''harden'' arteries, making it more difficult for blood to pass through and forcing the heart to work harder. When blood supply to part of the heart is cut off, a heart attack occurs.

More than 1.5 million Americans suffer heart attacks annually and more than 500,000 die from them.

Altogether, 32 people in the surgery group died from heart disease and 17 others from various causes. In the comparison group, 44 died from heart disease and 18 from other causes.

Death rates were not significantly different. But among those whose hearts were functioning normally despite their heart attacks, he said the difference in the death rate was 36 percent - 39 patients in the control group vs. 24 patients in the surgery group.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 4) UPI - President Bush has drawn what he calls a ''line in the sand'' in his showdown with Iraq's Saddam Hussein but church leaders and religious opinion makers want the United States to be more flexible.

While generally supporting Bush's first reaction to the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait by Iraq, church leaders now are expressing alarm at talk of the ''inevitability'' of war in the region.

''We are alarmed by the apparent increasing acceptance of the inevitability of war in the Middle East and by the lack of more active U.S. diplomatic efforts to achieve a negotiated settlement of the gulf crisis,'' the U.S. Interreligious Committee for Peace in the Middle East said in a letter to Bush Secretary of State James Baker and leaders of Congress.

''We believe negotiated settlement of the current crisis, which realistically will require compromise by both sides, is morally imperative and still possible, in part because everyone recognizes the consequences of war in the Middle East could be catastrophic for people in the region, for U.S. interests and for the whole world,'' said the letter signed by executive director Ron Young.

In another criticism of the Bush policy, Dale Bishop, the National Council of Churches' chief Middle East issues official, said U.S. policy in the region has for too long ''centered on rulers and oil - not people and principles - and that has been its fatal flaw.''

Bishop, writing in the journal Christianity and Crisis, said, ''U.S. Middle East diplomacy has been constructed on shifting sands: the personal fortunes of monarachs and dictators.''

''Inconsistency (if not cynical hypocrisy), of course, has been built into U.S. diplomacy in the Middle East since the end of World War II,'' Bishop said.

''The three pillars of U.S. policy during most of that period have been the support of Israel (for both moral and strategic reasons), cultivation of 'friendly' or 'moderate' Arab states (i.e., compliant Arab rulers who would appease our anti-Soviet fixations) and assured U.S. access to the region's oil reserves, perferably at an affordable cost.''

In contrast to Bush's argument that the world is behind the U.S. stand - notably through the series of United Nations resolutions condemning Iraq - Bishop notes that the Palestine Liberation Organization argues the United States ''supports only those resolutions that fit its design for the region.'' Bishop said the United States also has done little to enforce U.N. resolutions aimed at ending the Israeli presence in the occupied territories of the West Bank and Gaza.

Bishop said the United States, if it is not to engender decades of ''popular revulsion'' in the Arab world, must ''adopt a principled stand'' toward the Israeli occupation.

James Wall, editor of ''The Christian Century,'' made a similar point, noting that while Hussein's invasion of Kuwait was ''a monumental error in judgment'' it was ''an error the U.S. encouraged him to make.''

Wall noted that Hussein's use of chemical warfare against Iran and the Kurdish minority in Iraq ''went unchallenged'' by the United States and that just weeks before the invasion, ''the U.S. government was arranging the transfer of agricultural equipment that Hussein needed.''

''By eliminating Saddam Hussein's capacity to wage war in the Persian Gulf,'' Wall said, ''the U.S. will gain a short-term advantage, but the long-term damage to our capacity to wage peace will be enormous.''

Arguing that ''this is no time to correct mistakes by amassing new body counts '' Wall said the United States ''must help Hussein withdraw from his dangerous miscalculation without creating a deadly mess no wants to clean up.''

WASHINGTON (OCT. 4) UPI - A study of thumb sucking among fetuses shows the tendency to be left-handed may start in the womb, researchers reported.

About 10 percent of the adult population is left-handed, and scientists have long debated whether that preference stems from genetic factors or is caused by some kind of injury, perhaps occurring during birth. Now, Irish researchers said Wednesday they have found evidence some fetuses display a preference for sucking their left thumbs as early as 15 weeks after conception.

Using ultrasound to examine the fetuses of 224 women who had normal pregnancies, the researchers found 12 of the 224 fetuses - or about 5.4 percent - favored their left thumb. The positions of the fetus in the womb had no effect on thumb preference.

Follow-up observations of 17 fetuses indicated ''preference for a particular thumb is maintained during pregnancy,'' the researchers said.

In a letter published in the British journal Nature, Peter Hepper and his colleagues from Queen's University of Belfast said their study ''demonstrates for the first time the existence of behavioral asymmetries before birth.''

Furthermore, the work raises questions about theories that left- handedness is a result of injury and ''supports genetic explanations of handedness,'' the researchers said.

Dr. Stanley Coren, a University of British Columbia psychologist who has studied left-handedness for 20 years, called the findings ''a cute, little study'' that provides the first direct observations hinting that handedness may exist prior to birth. However, he said he thinks the conclusions drawn by Hepper's team are too broad.

''My major concerns are whether thumb-sucking really grows into handedness and the fact they have so few left-handers,'' said Coren, noting that he smokes his pipe with his left hand even though he is right-handed.

The Canadian researcher said about 15 percent of young children are left-handed, compared to the 5 percent of fetuses that sucked their left thumb. Stresses during pregnancy or difficult deliveries may account for that difference, he added.

In their letter, the Irish researchers speculated that while hand preference may initially arise from genetically determined variations in neuromuscular development, fetal thumb-sucking may reinforce those differences.

CINCINNATI (OCT. 4) UPI - The controversial photographs by Robert Mapplethorpe could be viewed different ways by different people, an art critic said, while the curator of the gallery where they were shown called the images beautiful.

The defense rested Wednesday in the obscenity trial of the Cincinnati Center for Contemporary Arts and its director, Dennis Barrie, and the prosecution was scheduled to call a rebuttal witness Thursday before closing arguments were presented.

Owen Findsen, an art critic for The Cincinnati Enquirer and lifelong area resident, testified for the defense that the controversy over the photographs was ''a perfect illustration of the phrase, 'evil is in the eye of the beholder.'''

Findsen cited a recent conversation he had with a woman gardener in explaining why he couldn't tell people what to think. The woman, Findsen said, told him she found the Mapplethorpe photographs of flowers ugly, but did not find the pictures showing homosexual acts offensive.

''I just can't tell people what to think,'' he testified.

Barrie and the gallery are being tried on state charges of pandering obscenity and using a minor in nudity-oriented material for displaying the exhibit ''Robert Mapplethorpe: The Perfect Moment.''

The 175-picture show includes five photographs depicting sadomasochistic homosexual acts and two of children with their genitals exposed. These seven pictures are the crux of the charges against Barrie and his museum.

''Even though some people may think photo display is disgusting, it's still beautifully constructed,'' Dennis Barrie told a Hamilton County Municipal Court jury.

Also testifying was Stuart Schloss, a member of the board of directors of the Center for Contemporary Arts, who said the museum received some complaints before the exhibit opened because the photographs in question were being separated from the others.

He said after the exhibit closed, there were some complaints by people under 18 who were not allowed to see the photographs in question.

Some 8,100 people saw the exhibit, Schloss testified.

BERLIN (OCT. 4) UPI - Police used water cannons and tear gas against leftist and anarchist youths who went on a rampage after demonstrating against German unification as the rest of the nation celebrated the Day of Unity.

More than 50 people were arrested in the ruckus Wednesday, but there were no immediate reports of casualties in what police described as the worst outbreak of violence since a riot in October last year preceding the fall of the Berlin Wall.

The protest march by an estimated 20,000 demonstrators, which was authorized by police, took place with only minor incidents in the afternoon. But tensions ran high and violence erupted around the vast Alexanderplatz Square when the march and a concluding rally ended at dusk and most of the protesters had left.

Chanting ''shut your mouth, Germany'' and ''never again,'' the youths threw gasoline bombs at riot police, overturned sausage and refreshment stands set up for unity celebrations, and smashed store windows.

Police moved in with water cannons and tear gas, but violence went on into the night.

Around 1,000 youths, mostly anarchists and leftists but also including members of the Turkish immigrant community in Kreuzberg, were involved in the violence police said.

The mobs used automobile jacks and metal chains to smash the windows of the Hotel Stadt Berlin. They climbed on top of cars and kicked in the windows. Other demonstrators stood on the sidelines screaming ''fascist murderers'' at riot police.

A few of the youths wore masks, hoods and scarves to cover their faces, and ignored loudspeaker appeals by both march organizers to leave peacefully.

At midnight Tuesday, East Germany became absorbed into West Germany to become Europe's most populous nation with 78.4 million people.

UNITED NATIONS (OCT. 4) UPI - The United States and the Soviet Union announced Wednesday that they had reached agreement in principle on a treaty that would drastically cut the number of troops, aircraft, artillery and armored vehicles in Europe.

The final agreement was announced jointly by Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and U.S. Secretary of State James Baker after more than five hours of private talks in the Soviet mission to the United Nations.

If the agreement had not been reached this week, U.S. officials said it would have been impossible to hold a 35-nation summit in Paris scheduled in mid-November. The United States had made such a conventional forces arms control treaty - known as CFE - a prerequisite for attending the Paris meeting.

Baker said it was an agreement in principle. ''We have agreed on all major issues,'' he said.

''A few peripheral issues remain to be settled. (But) we have reached agreement on the reduction and destruction of a significant amount of weapons '' the secretary said.

Shevardnadze, standing at Baker's side, said one relatively minor matter - counting rules for helicopters - remained unsettled but could be dealt with by technical experts.

The United States will take the framework of the agreement to the NATO countries for their assent, which is expected, since they were consulted at every stage of the long proceedings.

No numbers were given at the announcement of the agreement. The two sides wanted to consult with their allies, with the United States checking with NATO and the Soviet Union consulting with what is left of the Warsaw Pact alliance.

But officials had said previously that the number of troops had been set for 195,000 for both sides in central Europe, with the United States being permitted 30,000 more troops to be based in Britain and Italy, outside of the European Central Zone.

Officials have said that both sides will be limited to about 6,700 aircraft.

In one of the issues settled Wednesday, it was agreed land-based naval aircraft will be handled in a side letter, and that maritime patrol aircraft will not be included in the treaty at all.

Baker and Shevardnadze spent almost all of their 5 1/2 hours Wednesday on the conventional forces agreement, and barely touched on the treaty reducing strategic nuclear arms. Both men said they will probably get together on Friday to try to settle the remaining issues in the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks, reducing offensive nuclear missiles by up to 50 percent.

Both the United States and the Soviet Union have expressed the hope that they can have a START treaty ready for signing at a U.S.-Soviet summit before the end of this year.

The conventional forces negotiations have been going on, in various forms, since 1975. But the bargaining got serious in January 1989, with the coming to office of the Bush administration and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's program of political and military reforms beginning to gain momentum.

About one year ago, U.S. negotiators noticed a slowdown in the talks, a pause they ascribed to Soviet military officials objecting to the deep cuts in troops at a time when those soldiers and their weapons might be needed to quell nationalist violence inside the Soviet Union.

In the past two months, U.S. negotiators detected a new willingness by the Soviets to bargain seriously, something that was seen as a sign that Gorbachev and Shevardnadze and their allies in the Kremlin had asserted their authority over the Soviet general staff.

(OCT. 4) UPI - Philippines President Aquino... the survivor of six coup attempts... says the rebel soldiers who launched a mutiny Thursday in the southern island of Mindanao are trying to ''escalate'' the rebellion to Manila. In a statement, Aquino said she would crush the uprising ''in due time'' and appealed for help in rallying the people ''against these troublemakers.''

Nine French hostages released earlier by Iraq arrived Wednesday in Amman, Jordan... amid a flurry of diplomatic activity in the Persian Gulf region. French President Mitterrand arrived in the area to inspect French troops. And a top aide to Soviet President Gorbachev met in Amman with King Hussein. Iraq reportedly offered to release all French hostages... apparently in response to Mitterrand's offer last week to act as a mediator in the Persian Gulf crisis.

The House is set to vote Thursday on the deficit-cutting budget agreement reached Sunday by White House and congressional negotiators. Head counters on both sides say the outcome is still in doubt, but one key Democratic congressman says chances are ''better than 50-50'' the measure will pass. .

President Bush canceled a New England political swing Wednesday to continue meeting with and telephoning UNdecided or wavering House Republicans. However, the White House says Bush was pleased to hear that two former G-O-P presidents Ronald Reagan and Gerald Ford, support the budget plan.

(OCT. 4) UPI - Congressional investigators say last year's five-day U-S ban on the import of Chilean fruit was justified. Imports were suspended March 13th, 1989, after cyanide was found in two grapes in Philadelphia. The discovery followed two telephone calls to the U-S Embassy in Santiago, Chile, alleging that food shipments had been poisoned. The review by the congressional General Accounting Office is contained in a report, obtained by U-P-I, to be released Friday.

In Chicago, more apparent food poisoning victims sought medical treatment Wednesday... bringing to more than 400 the number of hardware conventioneers complaining of sickness in the past three days. Health officials say tests indicate that salmonella may have been responsible for the illnesses that have caused 110 people to be hospitalized.

A convicted child molester who once entertained kids as ''Sparky the Clown'' says he fooled a national expert into believing that his claims of a multiple personality in an UNsuccessful bid to beat the charges. Richard Sparks recently made the admission, three years after being convicted and sentenced to 10 years in prison. The expert- Kentucky psychiatrist Cornelia Wilbur- is best known for her treatment of the woman featured in the book and movie ''Sybil.''

#90277u0265 10/04/1990 ~United Press International
(OCT. 4) UPI - Playoff time allows managers to re-live the optimism of spring training, no matter what the facts.

In this year's National League matchup, for example, one team expects success because it's hitting well, and the other because it's not.

''I'm really pleased with the last two days' performance,'' Pittsburgh Manager Jim Leyland said on the eve of Game 1. ''The guys are on the ball pretty good. I think they have a good feeling going in. They're ready.''

''We're ready to go,'' Reds Manager Lou Piniella said. ''This is a new season and I feel good about the series. We haven't been hitting too well lately, so we must be saving the hits for the playoffs.''

Pittsburgh and Cincinnati meet in Riverfront Stadium Thursday night, with the Pirates' Bob Walk opposing the Reds' Jose Rijo. Both clubs ended the regular season with a loss.

In Pittsburgh, Frank Viola became a 20-game winner for the second time in his career, giving the New York Mets a 6-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Wednesday.

And in Cincinnati, Ken Caminiti's ninth-inning triple scored pinch runner

Gerald Young from first to give the Houston Astros a 3-2 victory over the playoff-bound Reds.

Viola, who won 24 games in 1988, raised his record to 20-12. He had lost three straight in his quest for his 20th victory. He pitched seven innings, allowing seven hits. He walked two and struck out five. Alejandro Pena pitched the ninth for his fifth save. Mike York, 1-1, took the loss.

The game drew 27,641, giving the Pirates a home attendance of 2,049, 908, extending the club record.

Completing their 25-man roster for the playoffs, the Reds Wednesday added infielder Billy Bates and pitcher Jack Armstrong, but did not include pitcher Tim Layana, who appeared in 55 games with a 5-3 record and two saves.

Houston's Glenn Davis led off the ninth with a walk of loser Tim Birtsas, 1-3, and Youngran for Davis. Caminiti tripled to deep center to score Young. Dave Smith, 6-6, hurled the final 1 1-3 innings for the victory.

The Astros took a 2-0 lead in the third. Eric Yelding singled and took third on Casey Candaele's single. Craig Biggio singled, scoring Yelding, with Candaele stopping at second. Davis walked, loading the bases. Caminiti singled scoring Candaele, but Biggio was out at the plate, Paul O'Neill to Joe Oliver.

In other games, San Francisco downed Atlanta 6-3, Montreal clubbed St. Louis 9-2, Chicago nipped Philadelphia 4-3 and San Diego defeated Los Angeles 7-3.

In the American League, it was: Cleveland 5, Kansas City 2; Minnesota 7, Seattle 4; California 11, Oakland 6; Detroit 10, New York 3; Boston 3, Chicago 1; Baltimore 3, Toronto 2; Milwaukee 6, Texas 3.

-- AROUND THE NL --

Giants 6, Braves 3

At San Francisco, Greg Litton went 3-for-4 with a pair of RBI, lifting the Giants. Steve Bedrosian, 9-9, relieved starter Kelly Downs in seventh and pitched one inning. Francisco Oliveras entered in the eighth and picked up his second save. Steve Avery, 3-11, took the loss.

Expos 9, Cardinals 2

At Montreal, Spike Owen and Nelson Santovenia hit consecutive triples in a seven-run seventh, helping the Expos give manager Buck Rodgers his team-record 500th victory. St. Louis, managed by shortstop Ozzie Smith for the day, ended its season with a seven-game slide.

Cubs 4, Phillies 3

At Philadelphia, Joe Girardi doubled in one run and Mark Grace walked with the bases loaded to force in another, leading Chicago. Greg Maddux, 15-15, broke a two-game losing streak. Paul Assenmacher pitched the ninth for his 10th save. Reliever Chuck McElroy, 0-1, took the loss.

Padres 7, Dodgers 3

At Los Angeles, Mark Parent hit San Diego's fourth home run of the game to snap a 3-3 tie in the sixth. The Padres added three more runs in the sixth after Parent led off with his third home run to give Eric Show, 6-8, his 100th career victory. Rich Rodriquez pitched four innings for his first major-league save. San Diego collected all four solo blasts off loser Dennis Cook, 9-4.

#90277u0289 10/04/1990 ~United Press International

Tom Brunansky's sliding catch of Ozzie Guillen's liner down the right-field line with two on and two out in the top of the ninth inning Wednesday night clinched the Boston Red Sox third division title in the last five seasons with a 3-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Red Sox fans in Fenway Park surely had visions of disasters past - Bucky Dent's game-winning homer and Bill Buckner's game-losing grounder - when Guillen ripped a pitch from Jeff Reardon that had double written all over it.

Brunansky, charging toward the line, made a sliding grab on the warning track out of view of television cameras, preserving the lead and sending the Red Sox into the American League Championship Series against the Oakland Athletics.

''As an outfielder you're taught to think certain things,'' said Brunansky, ''it was just instinctive. If I had to go back or if he hit it down the line, I was going to dive for it - take a chance.

As Brunansky scrambled to get to his feet, and with Red Sox fans pouring onto the field, there was still a moment of uncertainty as to whether Brunansky had made the catch.

''Yeah, I hung onto it,'' he said. ''I just wanted to get my hat. I said to him (first-base umpire Tim McClleland), take the ball. It's in my glove.''

Boston was paced by the strong seven-inning performance by veteran Mike Boddicker, 17-8, and a three-run offensive burst in the second inning.

The playoffs, a rematch of the 1988 series in which the A's swept the Red Sox, are scheduled to begin Saturday at Fenway Park.

Boston's victory came even as second-place Toronto was fighting to prolong the race in Baltimore. The Blue Jays were taking the field for the bottom of the ninth inning when the scoreboard in Memorial Stadium replayed Brunansky's effort.

Moments later, Mickey Tettleton blasted a leadoff homer to lift the Orioles to a 3-2 victory.

''This team battled all year,'' Toronto Manager Cito Gaston said. ''They were 6 1-2 (games) back (in early September), and they came back. I'm proud of them.''

Tettleton's season-ending blast, his 15th home run of the season, tagged Tom Henke with his fourth loss against two wins.

The Red Sox dramatic clinching wasn't the only major story in the American League Wednesday.

At New York, Detroit's Cecil Fielder became the 11th player in major league history to hit 50 homers in a season by belting his 50th and 51st in the Tigers' 10-3 victory over the Yankees.

He became the first major-leaguer to hit 50 homers in a season since George Foster hit 52 in 1977. He also became the first American Leaguer since Yankee teammates Roger Maris and Mickey Mantle hit 61 and 54 respectively in 1961.

In addition, Fielder became the first Detroit player to hit 50 homers in over 50 years. Hank Greenberg belted 58 in 1938.

''I have a feeling of relief,'' said Fielder. ''There is a lot of pressure off me. My wife (Stacey Granger) told me 'If you do it, you do it, if not, you have had a great season.''

In Cleveland, George Brett singled in his only official at-bat and became the first player in history to win a batting title in three different decades.

Brett, a .200 hitter on May 7, won the AL batting crown with a .329 average and also became the third-oldest man to do so.

Only Ted Williams and Honus Wagner won titles at an older age than Brett, 37. Brett won batting titles in 1976 with a .333 average and in 1980 with a .390 mark.

Brett's single forced Oakland's Rickey Henderson to go 3-for-3, which he did not do. Henderson removed himself after going 1-for-3 and wound up at .325.

''I'm just glad I don't have to wait through this any more,'' Brett said after ending his season but before Henderson finished. ''It was stressful. Physically, I felt fine. Mentally, I was stressed out. I think the days off helped.''

At Oakland, Calif., Henderson fell short of overtaking Brett and the A's closed their regular season with an 11-6 loss to the California Angels.

Henderson struck out and singled in his first two at-bats then bounced into a fielder's choice in the fourth inning before leaving the game.

However, the Athletics did have one batting champion on the club as Willie McGee, acquired from the St. Louis Cardinals on Aug. 29, finished the season at .335 to capture the National League's title. Los Angeles' Eddie Murray finished second with a .330 average.

Henderson also failed to steal a base, leaving him at 65 for the year and keeping him two short of Lou Brock's major-league record of 938.

Elsewhere in the American League, Minnesota downed Seattle 7-4 and Milwaukee topped Texas 6-3.

In the NL, it was: New York 6, Pittsburgh 3; Montreal 9, St. Louis 2; San Francisco 6, Atlanta 3; Houston 3, Cincinnati 2; Chicago 4, Philadelphia 3 and San Diego 7, Los Angeles 3.

-- AROUND THE AL --

Twins 7, Mariners 4

At Minneapolis, Shane Mack had three hits, including a game-tying RBI double, to lead the Twins.

Brewers 6, Rangers 3

At Milwaukee, Robin Yount drove in two runs and Teddy Higuera allowed three runs over seven innings for Milwaukee.

(OCT. 4) UPI - Cecil Fielder made history by hitting two home runs on the last day of the regular baseball season Wednesday, and Willie McGee did it without even appearing in a game.

Fielder, the Detroit Tigers' first baseman, hit his 50th and 51st homers of the season, becoming the first major-leaguer since George Foster to reach 50 in one year. Fielder also captured the AL RBI title with 132 RBI. San Francisco's Matt Williams won the NL RBI honor with 122 RBI.

McGee, now playing in the American League, wrapped up the National League batting title with a .335 average. He did not play in Oakland's season-ending, 11-6 loss to California.

Kansas City's George Brett, jockeying to become the first major- leaguer to take a batting title in three decades, succeeded with a .329 average. He went 1-for-1 to raise his record to .329, then left for a pinch-hitter.

Oakland's Rickey Henderson failed in pursuit, going 1-for-3, then also leaving the game. Henderson also failed in his attempt to break Lou Brock's all-time major league stolen bases record. He ended the season with 65, for a career total of 936. However, Henderson led the league with 119 runs scored.

In the National League, Vince Coleman of the St. Louis Cardinals stole 77 bases to capture the honors.

Ryne Sandberg of the Chicago Cubs led the NL for most home runs, 40, and 116 runs scored.

Boston's Jody Reed and Brett tied for most doubles in the AL with 45 apiece. Gregg Jefferies of the New York Mets wrapped up the season with 40 two-baggers.

Tony Fernandez of Toronto tripled 17 times to lead the American League while Mariano Duncan of Cincinnati Reds totalled 11.

The Texas Rangers' Rafael Palmeiro led the AL in hits with 191. Philadelphia's Len Dykstra and San Francisco's Brett Butler tied for the NL lead with 192.

Bob Welch of the AL West Champion Oakland Athletics finished with 27 victories and Doug Drabek led the NL with 22 wins as a member of the Eastern Division champion Pittsburgh Pirtaes.

Despite being sidelined with shoulder in early September, Boston's Roger Clemens 1.93 ERA was the best in the American League. Danny Darwin of the Houston Astros compiled an NL-low ERA of 2.21.

Nolan Ryan of the Texas Rangers struck out 232 batters to lead the American League and David Cone notched 233 strikeouts to lead the NL

Bobby Thigpen of the Chicago White Sox saved 57 games while the New York Mets' John Franco saved 33.

(OCT. 4) UPI - A powerful line of storms pounded the Midwest Thursday, carrying lightning and winds that gusted to 35 mph while heavy rains soaked the Gulf coast states and more violent weather struck the Rocky Mountains.

Tropical Storm Klaus stalled about 100 miles southeast of Antigua but was expected to resume its northwest drift later in the day with winds near 60 mph and tropical storm warnings were issued for islands in the northeast Caribbean.

A strong line of storms with winds topping 50 mph that knocked down trees and power lines in Illinois on Wednesday continued its eastward march Thursday, soaking Ohio and Indiana and moving into Kentucky and West Virginia.

Power was restored early Thursday to nearly all of the 15,000 customers in Chicago and its suburbs who were left in the dark by the storm.

To the south, showers and thunderstorms doused northeast Texas, southwest Arkansas and northwest Louisiana with up to 2 inches of rain an hour. The runoff from the storms caused ponding on local roads and prompted a flash flood watch for parts of northeast Texas.

Strong gusty winds blew in the foothills of the Rocky Moutains west of Denver, Colo., with the strongest blast hitting 87 mph in the town of Rollinsville, just east of the Continental Divide.

The winds eased at lower elevations and as sunrise approached.

Partly cloudy skies covered much of the Northeast as low temperatures dropped into the 50s.

Most of the South was warm and dry with temperates still topping 90 degrees in several cities.

MASSY, France (OCT. 4) UPI - An explosion ripped through an apartment building on the outskirts of Paris at dawn Thursday, collapsing the top three floors, burying at least 40 people under the rubble and killing at least two, firefighters said.

Firemen who raced to the scene pulled one dead person and six injured, three of them in serious condition, from the building at Massy- Palaiseau in the department of Essonne southwest of the capital and some 3 miles from Orly Airport, fire officers said.

Earlier police reports put the toll at two dead but the firefighters said there was only one confirmed fatality.

Ambulance teams set up a field hospital in an inflatable marquee at the foot of the building and some 100 firemen sifted through the rubble in search of between 40 and 50 people believed to be living there.

There was no immediate indication of the cause of the accident in the five story building but firefighters said it could have been a gas explosion.

TOKYO (OCT. 4) UPI - Riots triggered by allegations of police corruption continued unabated Thursday in Osaka.

Day laborers in Osaka, Japan's second-largest city, 250 miles southwest of Tokyo, clashed with police, hurled stones and burned vehicles. Ten people were injured and dozens arrested, local media reports said.

The workers were angered by the arrest Wednesday night of a police officer on charges of accepting bribes from gangsters, the reports said.

Much of the day-contracted labor is in fields such as construction that are said to be dominated by the underworld. The workers were apparently angered that the police who were supposed to protect them from exploitation were subject to corruption.

Some 1,500 riot police fought with rioters Wednesday night and Thursday, but failed to prevent the disturbances from reigniting periodically.

AMMAN, Jordan (OCT. 4) UPI - Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu, whose country is dependent on Middle East oil, met Thursday morning with an Iraqi deputy prime minister and called on Baghdad to withdraw from Kuwait.

In the first high-level meeting between the two countries since Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2, Kaifu's official spokesman, Shigeo Takenaka, said Kaifu and Taha Yassin Ramadan exchanged views and decided to continue the dialogue later in seeking a peaceful solution to the crisis.

Kaifu arrived in Amman from Cairo Tuesday as part of a Middle East tour to discuss the crisis with the leaders of Egypt, Jordan, Saudi Arabia, Turkey and Oman, and to announce emergency aid for the three ''front-line states'' considered the most financially-hit by the crisis - Egypt, Jordan and Turkey.

The Japanese spokesman told reporters here that Kaifu made Japan's position on the Persian Gulf affair clear to Ramadan, and in return, the Iraqi official explained the reasons that led to the invasion of Kuwait.

Takenaka said during the 1 1/2-hour-long meeting, the prime minister called on Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait, allow restoration of the legitimate Kuwaiti government and ensure the freedom of all foreigners detained in Kuwait and Iraq. He did not say whether the legitimate government meant the emir of Kuwait, Sheikh Jaber Ahmad al Sabah.

He added Kaifu made it clear to Ramadan that only when these conditions were met, could ''fruitful negotiations for peace follow.''

Takenaka said the Iraqi official gave a lengthy statement explaining Iraq's position and acknowledged the differences between the two positions, ''but expressed appreciation to continue the dialogue with Japan.''

The spokesman added Ramadan touched upon a French proposal for a solution to the crisis delivered by French President Francois Mitterand at the United Nations. The proposal included Iraq promising to withdraw from Kuwait, the restoration of an elected Kuwaiti government and an international peace conference to solve all Middle East conflicts, including the Israeli-Arab conflict.

''Ramadan said that Iraq could appreciate the French proposal as a first step to peace and can be followed up,'' Takenaka said.

The spokesman said Japan has not yet taken an official position on the French proposal, but placed the resolving of the crisis as a priority before other Middle East problems.

He said Japan hoped to solve the crisis through political and peaceful means and stressed the importance of implementing U.N. sanctions against Iraq.

Japan agreed to comply with a U.N. embargo against Iraq and Iraqi- occupied Kuwait, even though that has meant curtailing vital oil shipments from those former suppliers.

JAKARTA, INDONESIA (OCT. 4) UPI - Government health officials alarmed by a growing number of smokers in Indonesia, particularly among youth, said Thursday warning labels will be required on domestic cigarette packages starting next April.

The new regulations also will require cigarettes packages to state their product's tar and nicotine content, Health Minister Adhyatma said.

The warning label to be required beginning April 1991 will state that ''Smoking is hazardous to health,'' Adhyatma said.

The government statement did not specifically indicate whether the new regulations would apply to cigarettes produced outside the country, although virtually all cigarettes sold in Indonesia are made domestically.

Foreign-owned cigarette companies in Indonesia, producing such U.S. brand names as Salem, Marlboro and Kent, are believed to account for about 40 percent of the domestic cigarette market.

Adhyatma said the government's action follows studies showing cigarettes made in Indonesia are more hazardous than those produced in foreign countries, and that the number of smokers in Indonesia has been increasing steadily.

Indonesia is believed to be the world's largest consumer of ''kreteks,'' which are cigarettes containing a mixture of tobacco and clove. Kreteks have tar and nicotine levels two to three times greater than typical tobacco cigarettes.

Warning labels are placed on kreteks exported to the United States.

Half of Indonesia's population of 185 million is younger than 25. Health officials said they estimate 53 percent of those between 15 and 19 smoke, many of them heavily.

A recent study of child vendors on Jakarta's streets showed they began smoking well before age 15, frequently as young as 9.

Earlier this year, Indonesian Education Minister Fuad Hassan banned teachers from smoking in schools and on school premises. The ban followed reports smoking was increasing among junior and senior high school students, especially in larger cities.

The government also plans to begin studies to further examine the tar and nicotine content of cigarettes sold in the country, Adhyatma said.

TYRE, Lebanon (OCT. 4) UPI - Rival Palestinian factions clashed Thursday in a refugee camp in southern Lebanon, wounding three gunmen, security sources said.

Guerrillas of the mainstream Al Fatah movement headed by PLO chief Yasser Arafat and gunmen of the the Palestinian Communist Party exchanged machine-gun fire and rocket grenades in the Rashidiyeh camp on the outskirts of the port city of Tyre, 46 miles south of Beirut, the sources said.

The fighting broke out when Arafat's followers attacked a PCP position in an attempt to erase the party's military presence in the camp, the sources said.

They said three gunmen were wounded, including a Fatah field commander in the camp named Jamal Katou.

Tension prevailed after a squad from the Palestine Liberation Organization's ''Armed Struggle'' that maintains security in the camp cordoned off the scene of the fighting and disarmed the rival gunmen, the sources said.

Observers said the clashes were part of Arafat's effort to tighten control over the Palestinian refugee camps in southern Lebanon.

Last June, Arafat's loyalists defeated the Fatah Revolutionary Council of Abu Nidal in Rashidiyeh, the second largest Palestinian base in southern Lebanon.

Three months later, they crushed Abu Nidal's group in the refugee camp of Ein El Helweh, at the outskirts of the port city of Sidon, 24 miles south of Beirut, after fighting that killed 68 people and wounded 220 others.

Abu Nidal, whose real name is Sabry Al Banna, maintains bases in Syrian-policed west Beirut, eastern and northern Lebanon. He tops the west's most wanted list for extremist operations spanning a decade and a half.

In Sidon, Arafat's group released 13 out of 30 FRC members who were taken prisoner following last month's fighting.

Palestinian security sources revealed that Iraq was exerting efforts to reconcile the warring factions.

(OCT. 4) UPI - Stock prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange fell sharply in thin trading Thursday as a bout of profit taking drove the market's leading indicator down 2.5 percent.

The Nikkei Average of 225 selected issues, which eased 49.02 points Wednesday, plummeted 571.20 points - or 2.5 percent - to 22,278.19.

The broader-based Tokyo Stock Exchange Price Index, which measures the value of all listed shares, fell 20.53 points to 1,649.52. TOPIX had inched up 1.22 points Wednesday.

Volume was light as an estimated 320 million shares changed hands, compared with 582 million shares Wednesday. Declines led advances by nearly a 2-to-1 margin.

Analysts said prices fell on profit taking in the wake of Tuesday's spectacular rally, in which the Nikkei gained a record 13.2 percent.

''The rise was so sharp, there's going to be some profit taking afterwards,'' said analyst Christopher Schreiber of New Japan Securities Co.

''But people still feel we've hit a second bottom,'' he said, referring to the low of 20,221.86 set by the market on Monday, following a bottom established in the first crash April 2.

Thursday's trading patterns showed that investors were pausing to decide which stocks to keep, analysts said.

Market watchers noted growing diversification within sectors such as blue-chip electronics.

Other investors appeared to be seeking a safe haven in pharmaceutical issues, which led all others in gains Thursday. Brokers attributed the popularity to the notion the sector is recession-proof in a rapidly aging society like Japan.

Elsewhere in Asia, stock prices tumbled nearly 6 percent on the Thailand Stock Exchange, reacting to the fall on other world markets and uncertainty in the Middle East.

The Stock Exchange of Thailand Index, which gained 9.34 points Wednesday, fell 41.86 points - or 5.9 percent - to 671.86.

Volume remained brisk but slipped from Wednesday's pace as an estimated 2.3 billion shares changed hands, compared with 3.2 billion shares on Wednesday.

Stocks fell from the opening bell, analysts said, adding investors are afraid there will be a reshuffle in the Thai government.

Thai newspapers reported sharp dissension in the six-party coalition government and some speculated the government would soon fall.

Prime Minister Chatichai Choonhavan told reporters he had no intention of calling an election, but his comments came too late to affect the day's trading.

In Singapore, stocks closed lower in light trading on the Singapore Stock Exchange in line with drops on other global markets.

The Straits Times Industrial Index, which fell 17.94 points Wednesday, dipped 2.67 points to 1,117.60. The broader-based All Singapore Index eased 1.11 points to 312.72.

Volume eased to only 16.9 million shares, compared with 32.5 million shares changing hands Wednesday.

Some profit taking was reported, following gains earlier in the week. Brokers said a technical correction from the sharp rise on Monday was expected.

On the trading floor, Singapore Airlines foreign shares paced the declining issues followed by Keppel Corp. and ASEAN Fund U.S.

Great Eastern Life led the advancing issues followed by Jurong Engineering and Malayan Banking.

Elsewhere around the region, the Hong Kong Stock Exchange was closed for the Chinese Mid-Autumn Festival holiday. Trading will resume on Friday.

In Australia, stocks fell sharply in moderate trading on the Sydney Sharemarket.

The All Ordinaries Index, which fell 20.7 points Wednesday, lost another 16.8 points to 1,368.5. The closely watched Gold Index eased 1.0 point to 1,413.7.

Turnover amounted to 94.3 million shares, above the 61.7 million shares changing hands Wednesday.

Analysts noted the loss confirmed local investors have resumed bearish tendencies. Losses were equal in all sectors.

News Corp., which announced plans to merge its top selling Daily Mirror and Daily Telegraph into a 24-hour Sydney newspaper, and to do the same with its Sun and Herald in Melbourne, shed 22 cents to $6.70.

Elsewhere, Brambles lost 20 cents to $12.65, Coles Myer slipped 8 cents to $7.56, Fletcher Challenge eased 4 cents to $2.72, Elders IXL lost 4 cents to $1.24, Westpac Bank dropped 9 cents to $3.99 and BHP Oil fell 12 cents to $10.38.

BANGKOK (OCT. 4) UPI - Sabotage has seriously disrupted Cambodia's rail transport system, the Vietnamese-installed government admitted Thursday.

''According to a report by the Kampuchean Railway Co., during the first eight months of this year the Khmer bandits on 72 occasions sabotaged the operation of the two railways by mining and derailing trains, opening fire on and plundering passengers,'' the official SPK news agency reported.

It said 13 railway bridges were blown and five locomotives were destroyed. Saboteurs also tore up 3.5 miles of railroad track, it said.

Because of the destruction, the transport sector was able to achieve only 52 percent of the national transport plan in the first nine months of the year, the report said. The attacks on transportation routes are blamed for increasing inflation and economic problems.

The agency said the government was working hard to repair the damage. It said 10 additional railway cars have been bought from Vietnam and two locomotives will be boughyt from Czechoslovakia next year.

The report said a U.N. delegation inspected the railways in the western part of the country and promised to provide $33 million for the restoration of the rail line from Sisophon to the Thai border. That portion of the rail system has not been used since the waning days of the Indochina War in 1975.

A separate SPK report indicated that fighting eased in the country during the third week of September when only 33 guerrillas were killed and 24 taken prisoner.

The report did not give comparative figures but the number is substantially less than similar weekly reports of fighting last month.

The period coincided with talks in Bangkok meant to pave the way for a political settlement. The meeting, however, broke down and both sides predicted an increase in the fighting.

MILWAUKEE (OCT. 4) UPI - Five people including two women and three children died early Thursday in a house fire in North Milwaukee, fire officials said.

Fire Chief August Erdmann said two women were killed in the fire and three children were not breathing when they were taken to hospitals. They later were pronounced dead.

Erdmann said 24 people were in the 2 1/2-story house at 2926 N. Vine northwest of downtown Milwaukee when the fire broke out about 5 a.m., including nine people on the first floor and 15 on the second and third floors.

''The fire started in the front of the house on the first floor. The fire is under investigation and we really don't know the cause yet,'' Erdmann said.

The five victims were among those on the first floor, Erdmann said.

Barbara Garth, 36, a registered nurse at the Milwaukee County Mental Health Complex, lives next door to the house involved in the fire and had just gotten up when she heard yelling and the sound of glass breaking next door.

''I opened the door and heard the fire, and saw flames shooting out the downstairs window, a big picture window,'' she said. ''There was a lot of smoke. I dialed 911 and told them where the fire was located. My mom also dialed.''

Garth said she went next door to see what she could do to help.

''There were a couple of adults and kids were everywhere,'' she said. ''A couple people wanted to run back in, I told them 'Don't go back in.' The living room in the front on the lower level was in flames and by then flames were in the kitchen area, just about the whole house was on fire.''

NORTH OLMSTED, OH (OCT. 4) UPI - Cleveland Browns cornerback Frank Minnifield is promising to file a collusion suit against the NFL and the Browns for the handling of negotiations before he ended his holdout this week.

Minnifield and his agent, Stan White, said Wednesday there was collusion between the Browns and the Atlanta Falcons in an attempt for force Minnifield into accepting a contract offer from the Falcons so he could be traded.

White, who said he hopes the suit will lead to the Browns trading Minnifield before the Oct. 16 trading deadline, said Minnifield could have received a higher-paying contract from the Washington Redskins.

The Browns wanted to trade Minnifield to Atlanta for offensive lineman Bill Fralic.

Atlanta reportedly offered Minnifield $825,000 a year for two years, and the Browns reduced their offer to Minnifield to $660,000.

''When Frank would turn down the Falcons offer,'' White said, ''the Browns would reduce their offer to him. When he turned them down again, they withdrew the rights of Frank to negotiate with the Washington Redskins.

''It was obvious they were sharing information and trying to force Frank to accept the Atlanta deal,'' White said. ''That's why they filed a complaint with the commissioner's office about Washington, even though they had given

Washington permission to negotiate.''

White said Minnifield, who was in his fourth Pro Bowl last season, would have accepted an offer made by Washington, but Washington and Cleveland could not agree on a trade.

The National Football League Players Association already has five antitrust suits pending against the NFL.

''The NFLPA has been monitoring this case,'' White said, ''and (NFLPA general counsel) Dick Berthelsen has called it the most compelling case of antitrust violation it has seen so far in all the cases it has filed over the past two years.''

GAINESVILLE, FL (OCT. 4) UPI - One of two publicly identified suspects in the killing of five college students has been ruled out by investigators, a published report said Thursday.

Stephen Michael Bates was dropped from a list of suspects after blood and hair samples and a search of his Lakeland home failed to turn up any links to the slayings, The Tampa Tribune reported citing an unidentified law enforcement source.

Task force members probing the multiple killings declined to say whether Bates 30, was still a suspect. One official said the task force would not discuss Bates or any other suspect.

Meanwhile, a Brevard County circuit judge in Melbourne refused Wednesday to unseal a 75-page affidavit that led police to search Edward Lewis Humphrey's residences and car.

Humphrey, who will turn 19 Friday, is the only other suspect identified by authorities.

An earlier published report said laboratory tests on evidence obtained in the searches also failed to link Humphrey to the three crime scenes, but police refused comment on that report as well.

Alachua County Chief Assistant State Attorney John C. Carlin testified at the Melbourne hearing that ''60 to 70 percent of what is in the documents has not been released. The preponderance of information is still confidential and must remain so.

''One of the principal suspects, obviously, is Humphrey,'' he said. ''The sealed information is critical to the investigation. There is crime-scene data that only could be known by the true culprit.''

Humphrey is being held on $1 million bail at Brevard County jail in Sharpes on an unrelated charge of beating his grandmother, Elna Hlavaty, 79. He is scheduled for trial Monday on that charge.

Bates was named as a suspect by a task force spokesman, but Polk Sheriff Lawrence W. Crow Jr. said Bates was ''not a real strong suspect.''

The cook turned himself in to Polk County authorities Aug. 29 on charges that he broke into a neighbor's home and threatened a women with a knife.

According to reports, investigators turned up books on Satanism and Jack the Ripper, knives, pornography and women's panties at Bates' home, but found no connection to the student killings.

Bates, who is being held in lieu of $100,500 bail at the Polk County Jail, tried unsuccessfully last week to bar the media from information concerning his case.

The bodies of the five victims, all college students who lived within 2 miles of each other and within 2 miles of the University of Florida campus, were discovered within a 48-hour period in August.

The victims were Christina Powell, 17, of Jacksonville; Sonya Larson, 18, of Deerfield Beach; Christina Hoyt, 18, of Gainesville; Tracey Paules, 23, of Palm Springs North; and Manuel Taboada, 23, of Carol City.

All were stabbed to death and all but Hoyt attended UF. The student at Santa Fe Community College died of multiple stab wounds and her body was mutilated, along with Powell's and Larson's, authorities said.

According to published reports, Hoyt was beheaded and her body was sliced open from the pelvis to the brestbone.

NEW YORK (OCT. 4) UPI - An 1845 newspaper article indicates that baseball was being played in the New York area a year earlier than was previously thought and the game may have originated in New York City, The New York Times reported Thursday.

The story from the New York Morning News refers to ''the time-honored game of Base,'' indicating the game already was popular and mentioning other teams.

The newspaper story, which was found at the New York Historical Society by Harvard graduate student Edward Widmer, is believed to be the earliest sample of a box score of a baseball game played in 1845, the report said.

It also suggests that the game was probably formed by a group of city players in the mid-1840s rather than by one man.

The story in the New York Morning News describes a game on Oct. 21, 1845, between the New York Ball Club and a team from Brooklyn played at Elysian Fields in nearby Hoboken, N.J.

''A friendly match of the time-honored game of Base was played yesterday at the Elysian Fields, Hoboken,'' the article said.

New York won, 14-4, aided by a grand slam, or in the jargon of the day, ''four aces'' off a single hit.

''The good feeling and hilarity that prevailed showed that the Brooklyn players, though defeated, were not disheartened,'' the story said.

Popular myth holds that baseball was invented in Cooperstown by Abner Doubleday.

Historians have instead credited Alexander Cartwright, a New York bank clerk, who is said to have drawn up the rules and organized the first game in 1846 for the Knickerbocker Base Ball Club at the Elysian Fields, a favorite recreational spot for young sports of the era.

TAIPEI, Taiwan (OCT. 4) UPI - Taiwan Thursday said China was slow in relaying information about Taiwanese victims of a crash involving three planes at Canton Airport that killed 127 people and condemned compensation payments as too low.

Taiwan's Tourism Bureau complained about China's slow release of information regarding the fates of people aboard the airliners, which included 42 Taiwan residents. At least 30 of those killed were from Taiwan.

While Taiwan families clamored for information Monday, the Civil Aviation Administration of China withheld information for more than 24 hours, Taiwanese officials said.

Authorities in southern Canton, also known as Guangzhou, have said 127 people died in the fiery crash of a hijacked jetliner at the city airport Tuesday.

A Chinese Boeing 737 was commandeered on a domestic flight over south China by two hijackers reportedly demanding to fly to Hong Kong. It came down at Canton's Bai Yun airport but slammed into an empty plane and another loaded with passengers in a fireball.

There was still no confirmation of airport reports the hijackers panicked when they realized they were landing in China and set off an explosion before the crash, or of a survivor's account that they struggled with the cockpit crew prior to impact.

Officials in Taiwan also complained after leaning families of Taiwanese victims would receive less compensation than families of foreigners.

Yuan Mu, China's State Council spokesman told reporters Wednesday in Beijing that, ''We will never treat Taiwan compatriots as foreigners.''

But Taiwan's chief spokesman Shaw Yu Ming, said, ''Our people are certainly not citizens of the People's Republic of China.'' He said the money Chinese officials planned to pay their citizens as ''too low by any society's standards,'' but the amount to be paid Taiwanese was not immediately available.

Shaw's reference to China's official name was extremely unusual for a Taiwan official, as use of the name has been seen as de-facto recognition of a regime which the Taipei government maintains has no legitimacy.

Though there is currently no official contact between the two governments claiming to represent China, Shaw called for intermediary agencies on both sides to resolve various problems.

BOSTON (OCT. 4) UPI - Gov. Michael S. Dukakis urged Congress to reject the deficit reduction package agreed upon by President Bush and Democratic congressional leaders, saying it imposed an unacceptable burden on the elderly and average taxpayers.

The proposal ironed out during the weekend would shave $500 billion from the federal deficit during the next five years by raising a variety of consumption taxes and Social Security taxes and by cutting defense and social service programs, including Medicare.

''The package which has been agreed upon ... fundamentally continues the policies of the past 10 years. They continue to excuse the rich in this country from paying their fair share, outrageously,'' Dukakis said Wednesday.

''And this agreement does virtually nothing that recognizes the Cold War is over. It continues to expend $50 billion in defense of western Europe when nobody can tell us who the enemy is,'' he said.

A Dukakis administration analysis said the package would cost state government $77.5 million and local government $100 million, while increasing the tax burden on those earning between $20,000 and $50,000 a year by about 3 percent.

At the same time, the analysis said, the tax burden on those earning $100,000 a year would rise by about 1.5 percent and the burden on those earning more than $200,000 would increase three-tenths of 1 percent.

''Make no mistake about it, this is a tax increase on the elderly and the middle class,'' said Dukakis. ''How can you possibly justify this kind of a plan?''

Medicare premiums for the elderly would rise from the present $28.80 to $54.30 in 1995, with the state Medicaid program legally required to pick up the cost, said the report. At the same time, deductibles would rise from $75 to $150.

''They add millions and millions of dollars to the burdens of state and local governments who've been asked over the past 10 years to absorb billions and billions in federal cuts,'' said Dukakis.

Dukakis said the plan would cost the state $6.5 million in Medicaid cuts, $50 million in extension of Medicare and Social Security taxes to state government and $21 million in extension of the taxes in parttime and temporary workers.

The extension of Social Security taxes to local governments will cost $100 million, he said.

DURBAN, South Africa (OCT. 4) UPI - President Frederik de Klerk said Thursday he was disappointed black leaders Nelson Mandela and Mangosuthu Buthelezi would not meet to discuss factional violence which has killed as many as 800 of their followers.

During a day-trip to strife-torn Natal province, cradle of the conflict between Mandela's multi-tribal African National Congress and Buthelezi's exclusively Zulu Inkatha movement, de Klerk said he believed the two leaders should hold direct talks.

Speaking in the town of Imbali amid one of the hardest-hit areas in the Indian Ocean province, de Klerk said, ''I am disappointed. I also think it is necessary that the two leaders, as political leaders, should meet.''

The president said the violence was preventing economic growth in the region.

''There is a tremendous responsibility on all leaders and on the youth of South Africa... to bring an end to the violence and conflict which has undermined the stability and opportunities of all South Africans,'' he said.

Mandela had invited Buthelezi to attend an ANC-hosted meeting of leaders of South Africa's six nominally self-governing tribal territories Friday to discuss the apartheid-created areas' future in a non-racial South Africa.

But the Zulu chief, who heads the Natal-based KwaZulu territory, rejected the invitation on the grounds he had not been invited only in his role as KwaZulu leader and not head of the national Inkatha movement. Buthelezi said this would preclude meaningful talks on the violence.

Buthelezi had called repeatedly for a meeting on the violence, but said Thursday after returning from a trip abroad that talks between himself and Mandela were ''clearly not going to happen soon.''

The ANC has blamed Inkatha for fomenting the strife which racked the townships around Johannesburg for more than six weeks until being quelled in mid-September by tough, military-style measures.

ANC officials charged that Buthelezi was exporting the conflict to the Transvaal from Natal, where it has killed as many as 4,000 people since 1987, to undercut the more popular ANC ahead of formal power- sharing talks with the government. Buthelezi denied the allegation.

A state of emergency in the province, nearly into its 53rd month, has largely failed to quash the internecine battles.

But de Klerk did praise a community which has organized its own peace.

Before stopping at Imbali, he visited the town of Shongweni, northwest of Durban, and lauded the 55,000-strong community for abiding by a police-brokered peace pact between Inkatha and ANC supporters in force since last year.

''You are an example to the rest of Natal, to the rest of the country, that local leaders can find a way to make peace,'' he told community representatives.

De Klerk began his Natal trip by visiting Durban and the city's main hospital, the King Edward VIII, which has borne the brunt of the conflict's casualties and witnessed severe overcrowding in the wards.

Accompanied by his wife, Marike, Health Minister Rina Venter and officials, de Klerk saw a ward in which 33 of the 103 patients were lying on the floor for lack of beds.

De Klerk and Venter last month visited the nation's largest black township of Soweto, south of Johannesburg, and said he also wanted to see personally the situation in Natal.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 4) UPI - Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., reportedly is prepared to promote an airline passenger fee to help fund a third major airport in the Chicago area, a published report said Thursday.

The Chicago congressman, who chairs the powerful House Ways and Means Committee, has told his staff to develop a plan to route the fee through his tax-writing panel if Sen. Wendell H. Ford, D-Ky., fails to get the measure through the Senate, the Chicago Sun-Times reported.

The newspaper quoted sources as saying the airline passenger fee proposal is to be attached to budget legislation needed to avert massive government layoffs and widespread program cuts.

Chicago Mayor Richard M. Daley has been lobbying heavily for the fee, which could be applied to passengers at O'Hare International and Midway airports, as a means of funding his proposed Lake Calumet airport, one of five sites under consideration by a joint Illinois-Indiana committee.

The proposed fee also is backed by U.S. Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner; Daley's brother, William, who has been named to the bi- state commission evaluating airport sites, and Rep. William O. Lipinski, D-Ill., a Daley ally who steered the fee successfully through the House during the summer.

WEST PALM BEACH, FL (OCT. 4) UPI - Thirteen people were injured, two seriously, when an Eastern Airlines jet hit violent turbulence on a flight from Washington to West Palm Beach, airline officials said Thursday.

Flight 791 was at 31,000 feet when the DC-9 ran into turbulence about 130 miles north of West Palm Beach Wednesday night, Eastern spokeswoman Karen Ceremsak said.

Passenger Betty Miller of Miramar, Fla., said, ''It was like a whiplash on the end of something. It felt like we bought the farm.''

Another passenger, Alison Levins, 33, of Boston, said the turbulence lasted about 30 seconds.

''There was a boom and a big bang and a little smoke. The heat started coming on. The lights went out. The engine banged and the engine stopped turning. We dropped hundreds of feet,'' she said.

Ceremsak could not confirm the drop in altitude.

The plane, which carried 91 passengers and a crew of six, landed safely at the West Palm Beach airport at 8:33 p.m. EDT and the injured passengers were taken to hospitals.

Initial reports said six passengers were injured, but the total actually was 13, Ceremsak said.

''There were 13 who requested assistance. Eleven were taken to hospitals. Some of the injuries were minor - cuts, bruises, scrapes. Of the two more serious, one was a hip injury and the other was related to a heart condition and pacemaker,'' Ceremsak said.

Three passengers remained hospitalized Thursday. None of their injuries were considered life-threatening.

The ''fasten seatbelts'' sign was on when the plane hit the turbulence and had been on for most of the flight, Ceremsak said. However, several passengers were standing in the aisle at the rear of the plane waiting to use a restroom and they accounted for most of the injured.

''There were a few people who were seated who sustained minor injuries,'' but it was unclear whether their seatbelts were fastened, Ceremsak said.

''Our flight attendant crews who were standing at the time were not injured,'' she said. ''The captain described it as moderate turbulence, with two quick bumps. It appeared to be a case of clear-air turbulence. There was no bad weather in the area and no reports of problems from other planes.''

CAIRO, Egypt (OCT. 4) UPI - Egypt reduced the price of its crude oil by $4 to $35 a barrel effective Thursday to match current developments on the world oil market.

Egyptian crude had been priced at $39 a barrel, its highest level in more than ten years.

Cairo Radio said the decision was announced Wednesday by Hammad Ayoob, vice-chairman of the state-owned Egyptian Petroleum Coorporation.

''This reduction was taken after the sudden decline in the oil prices during the past two days on light of the political statements which gave the impression that the Gulf crisis can be solved peacfully,'' Ayoob was quoted as saying.

U.S. crude had fallen $5.56 a barrel - or 14.1 percent - Monday and Tuesday on the New York Mercantile Exchange, the world's largest oil- trading exchange. The price rebounded $3.37 Wednesday to $37.32 a barrel.

DETROIT (OCT. 4) UPI - Dr. Jack Kevorkian, Michigan's ''suicide doctor,'' suggested he might disobey a court order barring him from letting terminally ill patients use his suicide device.

''The law and ethics flatly don't mean a thing to me when a patient is in front of me and needs help,'' Kevorkian said Wednesday night during an appearance before the Detroit chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists.

Kevorkian gained international attention when he aided the June 4 suicide of Janet Adkins, 54, of Portland, Ore., who was suffering from Alzheimer's disease.

The Oakland County Prosecutor's office has obtained a temporary injunction against Kevorkian's use of his ''suicide machine'' after Adkins died in his van after giving herself a heart-stopping injection of drugs.

Oakland County Circuit Judge Alice Gilbert has scheduled a Dec. 4 hearing on whether Kevorkian should be barred from letting other terminally ill patients use his device.

During his appearance at the Detroit Press Club, Kevorkian defended his actions in the Adkins case as ''absolutely ethical'' and said that his subsequent legal problems were the result of ''Dark Age mentality.''

Reiterating the stance he has maintained since the Adkins suicide, Kevorkian said he was being hounded by an overzealous legal system and a hypocritical medical profession.

''The courts would love to burn me at the stake and the prosecutor is trying to light the fire,'' he said.

WINSTON-SALEM, NC (OCT. 4) UPI - A woman faces child abuse charges after her son, who suffers from cerebral palsy, was severely bitten by rats in the family's squalid home, authorities said.

Arlene Addie Tolliver, 33, a mother of seven children, is free on bond pending her Oct. 30 trial.

She is charged with misdemeanor child abuse in the case and also faces two counts of misdemeanor child neglect in incidents involving two younger children.

The boy who was attacked by rats could not run or call out for help because of his disabling illness, authorities said. The arrest warrant in the case said Tolliver allowed garbage to pile up and spoil in her home, attracting the rats that gnawed on the child, described as ''helpless to care for or defend himself.''

The warrant said Tolliver created an unsafe environment ''by permitting unsanitary conditions to exist, food to be exposed and to linger until spoiled and garbage to accumulate, which attracted rats and mice and made the dwelling a haven for rodents, which said rodents did attack and eat on'' the child.

The child abuse charges stemmed from a Sept. 1 emergency call to the home. Ambulance service workers said then they arrived at Tolliver's house they found the boy with several open wounds.

The child was treated at Baptist Hospital until Sept. 17 when he was released into the custody of the Forsyth County Social Services Department.

The other charges against Tolliver stem from allowing her children aged 4 and 2 1/2 to live under unsanitary conditions.

County Health Department records show exterminators had treated Tolliver's home three times in June, July and September for a persistent rat problem. James Bryan, a department supervisor, said workers did not treat the house in August because Tolliver failed to cooperate and clean it up.

''We told the lady she had a bad sanitation problem inside and out and we told her she needed to clean up before we went back to bait. She lived in filth for 30 more days,'' said Bryan. ''She just wouldn't cooperate with us. She rearranged some of the filth but she just wasn't a good housekeeper in my opinion.''

TOKYO (OCT. 4) UPI - If Iraq withdraws from Kuwait, or even if it is forced to leave its oil-rich neighbor, the price of oil is likely to fall back to $20 a barrel, a leading Japanese economist said Thursday.

If Iraq pulls out of Kuwait, oil prices would first plummet to below the $20 a barrel level, then bob back up to between $20 and $25 a barrel, Tsutomu Toichi chief economist at the Institute of Energy Economics, said at a news conference.

At about $25 a barrel, the price would be high enough to stimulate U.S. production but not so high as to produce a glut followed by another oil price crash such as the one that devastated the Texas economy in the late 1980s, he said.

Prior to Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait triggering the world oil crisis, crude was trading around $20 a barrel and had fallen to below $16 a barrel in late June.

''The key element is U.S. production,'' said Toichi. If war breaks out in the Gulf, oil prices will temporarily shoot past $50 a barrel but stop well short of the $100 figure that some have mentioned, he said.

Crude traded as high as $41 a barrel on world markets last week on fears that only war would settle the Gulf crisis.

Even if Iraqi President Saddam Hussein attacked oil facilities in Saudi Arabia or the Gulf emirates, Iraq's ability to seriously damage them is highly dubious, said Toichi.

Therefore, oil prices could be expected to fall rapidly once hostilities were over, he said.

Turning to the Japanese economy, Toichi said the Gulf crisis, at least up to now, has been useful in setting Japan back on a course of conservation.

Noting Japan had zealously pursued energy efficiency following the oil crises of the 1970s, the economist said that when oil turned cheap, starting in 1986, the nation relaxed its efforts.

Energy consumption began to rise at 5 percent to 6 percent a year, jeopardizing the government's long-term energy plans, he said.

''If the Gulf crisis does not worsen further, the 'Hussein effect' will be good medicine for us,'' said Toichi.

ALBANY. N.Y. (OCT. 4) UPI - The state Public Service Commission has agreed to consider forcing Nynex to divest itself of its New York Telephone subsidiary and thereby end persistent allegations of unethical business practices.

In expanding its investigation into business practices at Nynex and Nytel, the PSC will be look at more than separating the two firms, it was announced Wednesday.

A key witness in hearings that led up to the decision likened Nynex to bankrupt savings and loans.

''Basically, they're playing with other people's money,'' said Scott Rafferty, who was fired from his position as vice president of Nynex's Telco Research division in 1986.

The PSC voted to accept a staff recommendation to continue its investigation of Nynex's alleged use of its regulated Nytel subsidiary, whose profits come from ratepayers, as a conduit to enrich other non- regulated subsidiaries.

PSC chairman Peter Bradford was quick to caution that a rate freeze in effect for the last six years, as well as internal auditing controls, were designed to block the bilking of consumers.

''The essential purpose of the investigation is to see that past barriers were adequate,'' Bradford said.

The staff report also recommended looking at a range of options, including the divestiture of Nytel from Nynex, or at least, a fully separated subsidiary.

Rafferty testified extensively at PSC hearings on the so-called ''pervert conventions'' where Nynex suppliers attended days-long parties in Florida organized by a Nynex purchasing executive.

The PSC staff report said it was apparent suppliers who went to the parties got lucrative contracts.

Rafferty claims Nynex, created in 1984 when the Bell System was broken up by federal order, took advantage of the fact that one of its subsidiaries had a virtually unlimited cash resource: people paying phone bills.

Rafferty, who wrote his doctoral thesis on the AT&T break-up, does not doubt the outcome of the investigation.

''Nynex corrupted diversification. What they did was get into unprofitable things, like phone centers, then have (the phone company) pay too much for their services,'' he said.

A prime example, according to the PSC investigation, was the creation of the Material Enterprises subsidiary which effectively suspended the duties of New York Telephone's own purchasing arms, which are regulated by the PSC.

PSC General Counsel William Cowan said Nytel, and thus its ratepayers, could have been gouged for equipment that could have been purchased cheaper elsewhere.

''The manner in which this corporation has handled itself since divestiture in 1984 raises serious and troubling questions about its management agenda,'' Cowan said.

SMRZOVKA, CZECHOSLOVAKIA (OCT. 4) UPI - Germans are celebrating the rebirth of their nation this week, but in the mountains of northern Czechoslovakia the German-speaking Sudetenland - one of Hitler's first conquests - is dying.

The Sudetenland, the border country settled by German artisans in the 14th century, was home to more than 3.5 million Germans at the end of World War II.

Now, according to the 1985 census, only 62,000 people in the region claim

German identity, 52 years after British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain ceded it to Adolf Hitler in exchange for ''peace in our time.''

Only 300 Germans live in Smrzovka, a hillside village of 4,700. Before the war 11,000 people lived in the town, more than 90 percent of them German, residents say.

''We are becoming extinct,'' says 73-year-old Waltraud Pospischil. ''We used to have 56 cultural groups here, choirs and bands. The young people have no opportunities, so they leave.''

Pospischil's husband, Roman, taught German to a dwindling number of children until the mid-1970s, but now there are no children left to teach. The area's only German-speaking church draws just a score of worshipers to Sunday services.

''Most of us are over 70,'' Roman Pospischil says.

The reunification of Germany has offered little solace for the vanishing Sudeten Germans.

''We feel left out,'' says Brigitta Kratzert, leader of the ethnic German community in Jablonec, a county seat of some 87,000.

''Tuesday in his speech, West German President Richard von Weizsacker said now the nation is together again. But the truth is the nation is not together. We are not there and we are part of the nation,'' says Kratzert.

Germans came to the Sudetenland when Charles IV, King of Bohemia and holy Roman emperor, sent for German glassblowers and artisans to settle in the region's rough birchwood hills.

Czechs and Germans lived in relative harmony until the 1930s brought the birth of the Henlein movement, a local version of the Nazi Blackshirts, and then Hitler's 1938 annexation of the Sudetenland.

Jablonec was 80 percent German before the war. Now there are only 2, 700 ethnic Germans among its 87,000 people. The town's renown for making glass and jewelery earned it the nickname ''the Paris of Bohemia.''

Jablonec has traditionally been a holiday destination for East Germans, and Mayor Jaroslav Cermak hopes that with reunification, East Germans will continue to visit and begin to invest in local industries.

But so far he has had little luck expanding his contacts with the Germans. A delegation to Kaeufbeuren, a town in western Germany built by the Sudeten Germans who were expelled from Jablonec, learned that the old resentment was still alive.

''The younger generation were very nice and friendly, but my deputy also met those who were repatriated. To put it mildly, they were not very nice,'' said Cermak.

Cermak shows a visitor a postcard, sent to him from Kaeufbueren. ''Hitler will come soon,'' it says in German. ''I preferred the Czechs when they were humble ass-kissers.''

Having welcomed Hitler and his annexation, the Sudeten German community began to fall with the defeat of Hitler's armies in 1945.

After the war, the Czechs, under Soviet occupation, took revenge on the Sudeten Germans. Germans were deported to work camps in the center of the country. They were forced to wear white arm bands and were given shorter rations than Czechs.

German property was expropriated; bank accounts were seized; 3 million Sudeten Germans were expelled to Germany. In camps after the war, 13,000 Germans died.

The Communists systematically destroyed the remnants of the Sudeten German community. German schools were effectively banned, and the urbanization of western Bohemia in the late 1960s dealt the final blow to German culture.

''The villages were uprooted as everyone left for apartments with flush toilets,'' says Kratzert, ''and all the typical houses were knocked down.''

The older generation remembers the expulsion.

''To get our ration coupons, we had to go regularly to see movies of the concentration camps. We lived by the rail station and we could see everyone as they left. We never knew when it would be our turn,'' said Kratzert.

''I was in a camp in Jablonec,'' said Mrs. Pospischil. ''One day I was brought to Smrzovka under police escort, and a peasant paid the state 15,000 crowns to get me as a laborer. I was treated like a slave.''

''We lived quite literally on bread and water. Sundays we got four potatoes and a little fat, but no soup. There wasn't even milk for the babies,'' she said.

But Mrs. Pospischil says she does not feel bitter toward the Czechs. ''My grandmother was Czech and could not speak German, so I can't hate all the Czechs.''

One elderly Sudeten German woman described the degradation she suffered at the hands of the Czechs. Her family, she said, were anti- fascists, and were stripped of their property by the Nazis. Now she says she feels neither Czech nor German, but a citizen of a disappearing nation.

''You know,'' she said, without a trace of irony, ''the remaining Sudeten Germans are the Jews of Czechoslovakia.''

CHICAGO (OCT. 4) UPI - Soybeans and soybean meal were the price leaders again Thursday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Steady commission house buying in beans and meal was based on rumors the Soviet Union may have bought more meal. The Agriculture Department Wednesday announced the sale of 150,000 tons of soymeal to the Soviets.

Both corn and soybeans had underlying support from weather-related harvest delays. Widespread rain across the Midwest put a temporary halt to harvest activity, and in some areas the rain was heavy enough to keep farmers out of the field for a couple of days.

The continued weakness in soybean oil futures kept a lid on soybean prices.

Grain futures were narrowly mixed. The markets were pressured by the lack of export business, although follow-through buying kept a floor under prices.

An increase in the Canadian wheat production estimate also weighed on wheat values.

Country movement was light and basis levels were mixed.

ROME (OCT. 4) UPI - Foreign Minister Gianni De Michelis said Thursday Italy's two remaining diplomats in Kuwait will be forced to leave their embassy ''within the next few hours or days'' because they have run out of food and water and Iraqi troops have the building sealed off.

He said Ambassador Marco Colombo and First Secretary Massimo Rustico would try to move to the embassy residence, which still has food and water, and if that fails would try to find an office in another embassy of the European Community.

''But both these possibilities are improbable,'' the foreign minister said. ''In any event they will have to leave the embassy.''

De Michelis explained the situation to a meeting of the Senate's foreign affairs committee.

Italy and other Western countries have defied orders by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, issued shortly after his Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, to close their embassies.

But De Michelis said the Kuwait embassy ''is now completely surrounded by Iraqi troops.''

''It is subjected to conditions of very serious discomfort because of the shutting off of food supplies and the fact that reserves of food and water are exhausted,'' the foreign minister told the senators.

He said when the diplomats leave the embassy ''will remain open in theory,'' but Italy will rely on its embassy in Baghdad to keep contact with developments in the Iraq situation.

De Michelis said the government was following the situation of Italian hostages held in Iraq and Kuwait with ''great attention'' but there were no signs of change in the line being followed by the Iraqi authorities.

He said all the Italian civilians there were in contact with Italian diplomats but their psychological condition is ''certainly difficult.''

''Honestly, I am not in a position to indicate a way out of this problem,'' he told the committee.

De Michelis said it is necessary that Iraq not think the hostages are a decisive element of pressure.

''To the extent that it is made clear that this problem will not influence the position of the Western countries, the hostages have a chance of being released, which is not true in the opposite case,'' he said.

INDIANAPOLIS (OCT. 4) UPI - Unhappy Indianapolis Colts running back Eric Dickerson Thursday lost his appeal to NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue of a Colts order placing him on a reserve list.

The Colts on Aug. 29 placed Dickerson on the club's reserve-non- football injury list because of a hamstring problem not associated with football. Anybody placed on the list must remain there for six weeks.

Dickerson appealed and was given a hearing Sept. 17 by Tagliabue.

The commissioner, in announcing his decision, issued only a brief statement and did not go into details of his reasoning.

Colts' General Manager Jim Irsay scheduled an afternoon news conference to discuss the decision.

Team spokesman Craig Kelley said Dickerson has not contacted the team. The earliest he could return is Oct. 17.

It's estimated Dickerson is losing about $600,000 in salary because of his status.

Dickerson, hobbled much of last season with a hamstring injury, was diagnosed as having a similar injury in his other leg when he took an Aug. 6 examination.

He undertook rehabilitation on his own but subsequently refused to report for additional physical examinations. That led to a four-week suspension for conduct detrimental to the club. The suspension ran concurrently with the longer six-week injured list.

The perennial all-pro performer became discontent with the Colts during the preceding season and at one point was ordered by Coach Ron Meyer to stop criticizing other players.

During the off-season Dickerson at various times threatened to retire and asked to be traded.

A trade apparently is out of the question this season. The trading deadline is Oct. 16, one day before he could be activated and become eligible for a trade under NFL rules.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 4) UPI - A key House subcommittee chairman shelved for the remainder of the year his bill to create a 6.3-million-acre reserve of ancient forests in the Pacific Northwest.

The bill, which also contained an economic assistance package to cushion timber-related job losses in the region, has been stalled in the House Interior Committee since the subcommittee on parks and public lands approved it Sept. 13 on a vote of 18-13.

Sponsored by Rep. Bruce Vento, D-Minn., chairman of the subcommittee, it is the only one of several pieces of legislation addressing the Northwest timber crisis to have cleared any congressional panel this year.

The bill's demise Wednesday appeared to rule out action on any such bill for the remainder of the session. Most of those measures likely would require the concurrence of Vento's subcommittee to move forward.

''No bills are going anywhere this Congress. They're dead,'' said a House staff member familiar with national forest policy issues on Capitol Hill.

Vento's measure was strongly opposed by the timber industry and had drawn little support from lawmakers representing Oregon and Washington, the two states most affected.

Vento said he asked Interior Committee Chairman Morris Udall, D- Ariz., to ''postpone action on (the bill) for the rest of this Congress'' after concluding ''the spirit of compromise does not exist.''

''We've run out of time this year,'' Vento told reporters. Congress is expected to adjourn for the year on Oct. 19.

Vento has characterized his bill as a balanced, ''long-term solution'' to the conflict in the Northwest between the timber industry and environmentalists over the fate of the northern spotted owl and the ancient forests where the bird dwells.

The bill was introduced in July, less than a month after the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service declared the owl a threatened species. The agency concluded that logging of the owl's habitat, most of it in older forests managed by the federal government, was driving the bird to the brink of extinction.

At the same time, logging restrictions to protect the spotted owl are expected to cost thousands of jobs in the Northwest, creating enormous hardship for rural communities whose entire economies are tied to the forests.

Anticipating the bird's listing, Congress last year adopted a one- year compromise to protect some of bird's habitat while limiting environmental legal challenges that had blocked much of the federal timber sale program.

The compromise was aimed at giving policymakers in Washington another year to devise a more comprehensive approach to the problem, but no such strategy has materialized.

''The conservationists and the timber industry appear to be more interested in confrontation than in a resolution,'' Vento said.

He also called the administration strategy for dealing with the problem - a one-year plan outlined in an ambiguously worded three-page press release issued Oct. 21 - ''a pretty miserable failure.''

Without decisive action by either the administration or Congress, Vento said, the debate probably will return to the federal courts.

The courts have struck down as unconstitutional the restraints on judicial review adopted by Congress in its timber compromise last year, and Vento said no new limits on lawsuits are expected this year.

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., however, said he is planning a last-ditch effort to change the Endangered Species Act to accelerate the process under which logging restrictions aimed at protecting the spotted owl could be appealed.

Current law allows a special Cabinet-level committee to override the judgment of the Fish and Wildlife Service and, for economic reasons, approve timber sales that otherwise would be banned for the owl's sake.

Packwood's measure would convene the so-called God Committee immediately and broaden the scope of its review to allow the panel to weigh the government's overall forest management plan for the Northwest, rather than considering timber sales one or two at a time.

Packwood said he would seek to attach his measure to another piece of legislation that must pass the Congress before it adjourns, such as a bill to extend the government's debt limit.

However, several key members of the House and Senate said they would adamantly oppose any change to the Endangered Species Act, leaving in doubt whether Packwood's effort would ultimately prevail.

Vento's bill would have established a panel of scientists to recommend an ancient forest reserve system of 6.3 million acres of federal land that would be put off limits to logging.

This is the same amount of land that would be set aside under an owl conservation plan recommended in April by a panel of government scientists led by U.S. Forest Service biologist Jack Ward Thomas. About 2.7 million acres of the total are now available for timber harvests.

The bill also would set a minimum harvest level of 2.6 billion board feet a year for national forests in Oregon and Washington, far below the 3.85 billion-board-foot level mandated by Congress last year.

The legislation also offered a package of assistance including retraining programs, initiatives to create jobs in other industries and increases in the share of federal receipts shared with the states and counties from commercial use of public lands in the region.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 4) UPI - Among the early American victims of the Persian Gulf crisis may be city dwellers who suffer cuts in basic services because of the sharply rising cost of gasoline, the U.S. Conference of Mayors said Thursday.

A ''snapshot'' survey of 50 cities found the overall cost of fuel needed to run police cars, fire trucks, ambulances, sanitation equipment and public transportation jumped 30.6 percent during August and in some cities - Cleveland, Milwaukee, Wis., Tulsa, Okla., and Atlanta - the rise was well over 50 percent.

Cleveland, for example, reported an 81.7 percent increase in gasoline costs in August. Milwaukee reported a 62 percent rise, Tulsa had a 57 percent jump and Atlanta's was 50.7 percent.

According to the survey, all but one of the 50 cities said they experienced a ''substantial'' increase in the cost of fuels they purchased in the month of August. The only exception was Austin, Texas, where officials said they expected the increase to hit in September.

And for most, ''this added burden on local budgets will likely translate into cuts in public services in the year ahead,'' said Thomas Cochran, executive director of the conference.

The survey found three out of four mayors saying they believe the money to pay for the cost increases would come by cutting other areas of the budget. Officials from six cities said they would both cut services and increase local revenues - meaning higher taxes or fees.

In addition to the gasoline increase, cities also reported higher costs for diesel fuel and heating oil, although many cities rely on natural gas for heating public buildings.

All of the survey cities reported plans to conserve fuel in both vehicles and buidlings have been discussed or drafted and in some instances already implemented.

In Charlotte, N.C., for example, police have expanded their ''park and walk'' program to cut automobile use and have modified refueling schedules to reduce engine idling time.

Jacksonville, Fla., said it is reducing driving time and vehicle use by city employees. The same is true for Cleveland. Birmingham, Ala., reported it is keeping fuel reserves in larger volume and taking non- essential vehicles out of operation.

In addition, 21 of the survey cities - 42 percent - reported increased costs for other petroleum-based products, such as asphalt for street repairs.

Glendale, Ariz., for example said the higher costs of paving materials has reduced its preventive maintenance program and Los Angeles said it was putting off a number of street repair projects because of the higher costs.

Most of the mayors said that it was too soon to tell whether the increases in cost of gasoline was bossting use of public transportation. Just three cities - Chicago, Fort Worth, Texas, and Long Beach, Calif. - said they had noted an increase in bus and train riders.

''We know, of course, that all mayors will be grappling with the problem of higher energy costs in the wake of the current crisis,'' Cochran said, ''and that all citizens of urban America, in one way or another, will be sharing costs of Operation Desert Shield.''

MIAMI (OCT. 4) UPI - Tropical Storm Klaus strengthened as it approached the northeast Caribbean Sea Thursday, prompting flash flood warnings and mudslide alerts in the Leeward Islands.

''It's showing some signs of getting better organized. We think it could strengthen a little more and become a hurricane,'' said Richard Pasch, a forecaster at the National Hurricane Center in Miami.

In the northeast Caribbean, hurricane warnings were raised for islands from St. Martin eastward, including the British Virgin Islands, Nevis, Barbuda, Montserrat, Antigua and surrounding islands.

Tropical storm warnings were raised for Guadeloupe and the neighboring French islands.

Forecasters said the greatest danger, except to boaters, would came from flash flooding. They predicted Klaus would dump 10 to 15 inches of rain on the Leeward Islands as it skirted past.

''It would be a minimal hurricane. It's mainly a problem to the marine community, to make sure the boats are in safe harbor. But there is the problem of flash flooding. These islands are hilly, so that causes the problem with mudslides,'' Pasch said.

At noon EDT Thursday, Klaus was centered near latitude 16.6 north, longitude 60.5 west, or about 95 miles east-southeast of Antigua.

After remaining nearly stationary overnight, it was drifting toward the northwest near 2 mph and was expected to pick up forward speed by Friday.

Maximum sustained winds were near 60 mph, up from 55 mph Wednesday night, and forecasters said additional strengthening was likely during the next 24 hours. If its circulating winds reach 74 mph, it would become Hurricane Klaus.

Tropical storm-force winds extended up to 115 miles east of the center and 55 miles west of the center.

''We don't think it's going to move into the Caribbean. We have it moving northwest, probably curving maybe up north of Puerto Rico,'' Pasch said. ''The track is probably to skirt those islands and move northward within three days, but that is tentative and subject to change.''

Probability charts from the hurricane center said there was a 10 percent to 14 percent chance the storm's eye would pass within 65 miles of St. Croix and St. Thomas in the U.S. Virgin Islands and San Juan and Ponce, Puerto Rico, by 8 a.m. Sunday.

Klaus is the 11th named storm of the 1990 Atlantic-Caribbean hurricane season, which runs from June 1 to Nov. 30. It sprang from a tropical depression that rapidly strengthened Wednesday.

The 10th named storm, Tropical Storm Josephine, strengthened as it meandered through the north Atlantic toward the Azores Thursday.

Josephine formed off the African coast Sept. 16 and has waxed and waned as it followed an erratic northward course through the Atlantic. It regained its tropical storm status when it crossed the 39 mph threshold Wednesday.

At noon EDT, Josephine was centered near latitude 29.5 north, longitude 42.7 west, or about 1,100 miles southwest of Terceira in the Azores.

Josephine was moving north at near 6 mph and was expected to continue that motion for the next 24 hours. Its maximum sustained winds were near 65 mph Thursday and forecasters said additional strengthening was possible.

Josephine was considered a threat only to marine interests.

PORTLAND, OR (OCT. 4) UPI - Police vow they'll be ready for any violent confrontations between neo-Nazis and their adversaries or any attempt to disrupt next week's trial of white supremacist Tom Metzger.

Metzger, 52, and his son, John, 22, are defendants in a $10 million lawsuit filed by the Southern Poverty Law Center and the Anti-Defamation League on behalf of the family of Mulugeta Seraw, an Ethiopian national beaten to death with a baseball bat by three skinhead gang members outside his Portland apartment.

Two of the skinheads convicted of killing Seraw on Nov. 13, 1988, also are named in the wrongful death suit, which claims the Metzgers were negligent in sending agents to Portland to recruit skinhead members.

The aim of the lawsuit is to seize Metzger's Fallbrook, Calif., house and business and end his more than 15 years of youth recruiting through groups such as the Ku Klux Klan and his own White Aryan Resistance.

Police Det. David Simpson said there will be a ''very visible'' police presence around the Multnomah County Courthouse as the civil suit goes to trial before Circuit Judge Ancer Haggerty. Because of the limited spectator space, plans are in the works to televise the trial live on area cable systems he said.

Organizers of a week of activities condemning hate violence said they hope Portland instead will become a showcase of peace and harmony during the closely watched trial.

But police are especially concerned about a march through southeast Portland Sunday that passes the slaying scene and ends in the city's South Park Blocks.

It is expected to draw thousands of people, and officers said they are worried that racist skinheads who support Metzger might try to interrupt it.

''Our worst fear is that things will turn violent,'' said Capt. Wayne Inman, who will oversee police security efforts.

One problem for police is conflicting reports about the number of skinheads and their adversaries who might be coming to Portland or live in the area.

Anti-racist skinheads have told police that 200 to 300 neo-Nazi skinheads are coming for the trial that begins Monday, including a large contingent gathering in Seattle.

Inman said a letter claiming credit for a Sept. 20 bombing of the federal courthouse in San Diego from a group calling itself the Holy Church of the White Fighting Machine of the Cross ''warns all concerned to drop the lawsuit in Portland, Ore.''

Metzger apparently has given conflicting instructions to the white supremacist movement. He told The Oregonian newspaper there is ''no organized plan'' to bring supporters to Portland.

But a taped message on a telephone hotline encourages area supremacists to find lodging for other neo-Nazis, concluding with the message: ''I'll see you in Portland on the 8th. White Aryan victory!''

Portland's City Council approved a resolution Wednesday making next week ''Dignity and Diversity Week.'' The week will feature events organized by citizen groups and the Metropolitan Human Relations Commission.

''This event is going to be safe, it's going to be peaceful,'' said Scott Nakagawa of the Oct. 7th Committee, which is planning the march.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 4) UPI - The Bush administration, recently attacked for failing to ensure that enough anti-drug money reaches the street level, Thursday awarded $42 million to 95 communities to help prevent drug abuse.

Drug Policy Director William Bennett called the grants ''this administration's single most important new drug prevention initiative. Our experience indicates that nothing works as well as a community mobilized top to bottom to prevent drug abuse.''

Two weeks ago, the U.S. Conference of Mayors lashed out at the Bush administration's ''war on drugs,'' noting the nation's cities had received just 6 percent of federal funds directed at the anti-drug effort. In addition, half of the $386 million in anti-drug money to be allocated to the states and District of Columbia remained unawarded through the first three-quarters of the fiscal year, the group said.

''The local war on drugs has been waged almost entirely with local resources '' the mayor's conference said.

The new grants, which range in size from $109,000 to $980,000 for 15 months and can be renewed for up to five years, go to community coalitions in 36 states and the District of Columbia. The coalitions, which must consist of a local government agency and at least six other groups, are to use the funds to plan and implement drug and alcohol prevention programs, like those in the school or workplace.

''Let the traffickers and drug dealers take note of what we do here today. They may fear the police, but they should fear an angry and active community even more,'' Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan told a news conference to announce the grants.

J. Thomas Cochran, executive director of the U.S. Mayor's Conference, said his group was pleased with the new grants. ''There is no question they will definitely help prevent and reduce drug abuse,'' he said.

However, Cochran said his group wants a similar direct grant program to help local law enforcement agencies fight drug dealers and users.

MIAMI (OCT. 4) UPI - Twenty-eight cases of St. Louis encephalitis have been confirmed in Florida in five weeks, forcing cancellation of night football games and other activities after dark, when the mosquitoes that carry the sometimes-fatal disease are most active.

The outbreak is the largest since 1977, when 110 cases of the disease were diagnosed and eight people died, health officials said Thursday.

So far, no fatalities have been linked to this outbreak, but two people were reported comatose and 13 others hospitalized, state health officials said.

In addition to the 28 confirmed cases, at least seven probable cases were under investigation, authorities said.

''The youngest case is 14 years old and the oldest is 86,'' said Ernie Durfee, a spokesman for the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services in Tallahassee.

He said the disease poses the greatest threat to those over 55.

''This is a phenomena of nature. Every 10 to 15 years in Florida, we have these outbreaks. We knew late in the spring and in early summer that we would have many more cases,'' he said.

Florida usually records no more than three cases of St. Louis encephalitis annually.

''It has not been classified as an epidemic and it won't be until we feel preventive measures aren't working,'' Durfee said.

Outbreaks of the disease, carried by the Culex nigripalpus mosquito, usually occur when long droughts are followed by sudden wet periods, he said. Florida has been in a severe drought for two years.

There is no antibiotic for the virus, which can only be transmitted to humans by infected mosquitos. The mosquitos usually contract the disease from birds.

The virus can cause an inflammation of the membranes surrounding the spinal cord and the brain. Sympotoms include headache, fever, light sensitivity, stiffness in the neck, disorientation, tremors and weakness.

State epidemiologists advised residents, especially those in the southern two-thirds of the state, to avoid going out after dusk, to use mosquito spray and to wear long clothing, leaving little skin exposed.

The outbreak was first reported in Indian River County on the east central coast. Most of the reported cases have been in the Atlantic coastal region from Cape Canaveral south to Fort Lauderdale.

Cases have also been confirmed in the Orlando, Tampa and Ocala areas and in rural inland areas in central Florida.

Unwilling to expose fans or athletes to the threat of the disease, many of the state's 420 high school football teams have been forced to reschedule night games to the afternoon.

''It's one of those things where it's foolish not to make some changes,'' said Charles Smith, director of field services for the Florida High School Activities Association in Gainesville.

''Where some of these stadiums are located, the mosquitos can just pick you up and carry you off, no ifs, ands, or buts about it.''

Games have been scheduled for Thursday and Friday afternoons and Saturday mornings. All outside school activities have been discouraged after 5:45 p.m. and some counties have closed their parks at dusk.

Health officials also have advised residents and visitors not to camp outside overnight.

Individual counties have stepped up spraying of insecticides to kill the mosquitos near schools and bodies of standing water where they breed.

NEW YORK (OCT. 4) UPI - Teenagers around the country say abortion is murder but should remain legal to keep it safe, researchers reported Thursday.

Teenagers tended to use ''pro-life'' vocabularies but took ''pro- choice'' positions, said the researchers in describing a series of 11 teen discussion groups held recently in seven cities.

When asked, ''What comes into your head when you hear the word abortion?'' nearly all the groups mentioned, ''murder,'' ''killing a baby,'' and ''death '' said the researchers, who said the groups each consisted of about four boys and four girls.

In one typical comment, a girl in a Milwaukee discussion group also said, ''People are going to do what they want to do,'' adding, ''Let them leave it legal. I'm totally against it but let them leave it legal for the simple fact that it would be done in a proper way.''

In Jackson, Miss., another girl said, ''I'm just trying to say that you shouldn't take away anyone's rights even though abortion is not right.''

The discussions were an attempt to gain a better understanding of adolescent attitudes about abortion, said health policy consultant Rebecca Stone, one of two researchers on the study.

Co-researcher Cynthia Waszak noted that 80 percent of teenage pregnancies in this country are unwanted and 40 percent of them end in abortion.

The study was sponsored by the Population Council in Washington, D.C. and presented in preliminary form at the American Public Health Association's annual conference.

''They didn't identify abortion rights with feminism or female equality,'' Stone said of the 88 teenagers involved.

She said only one of them knew Roe v. Wade was the historic Supreme Court decision that legalized abortion nationwide, and many were not sure abortion was legal throughout the country.

Knife imagery was also common in the discussions, and many teens voiced unfounded fears that cutting in abortion procedures often results in loss of life or fertility, Stone said.

Overwhelmingly, the youths opposed parental involvement in abortion decisions and feared ''troubling a difficult relationship,'' she said.

''I know people who didn't tell their parents they were pregnant because then their parents would know they were having sex,'' said a girl in Boston.

A boy in Portland, Ore., said requiring parental permission could be dangerous saying, ''If parents don't want to sign, that's why a girl might do it with a coat hanger.''

In Albuquerque, N.M., one boy described parents as simply hostile to most youthful activities: ''They're against our having sex; going out. They're against everything we do.''

The discussion groups, which were only partially mixed racially and ethnically also took place in Waynesville, N.C., and Kankakee, Ill.

BERLIN (OCT. 4) UPI - An enlarged German Parliament and the rest of the country went to work as a single nation Thursday after historic unification festivities ending 45 years of division.

The Parliamentary session in Berlin's restored Reichstag was the first of a free all-German legislature since Hitler banned all but his National Socialist party in 1933.

Recalling the Holocaust and other horrors of that Nazi past, Chancellor Helmut Kohl said Germany today is ''irrevocably'' linked to the western democracies and ''especially'' the United States.

Kohl assured the 663 deputies - 144 from what was East Germany - that Germans can overcome the enormous economic and social gulf between the two parts of their country.

As he spoke, several hundred schoolchildren and students from what until the Oct. 3 Day of Unity was East Germany formed a chain around the Reichstag, holding banners demanding urgent spending on new schools and university grants.

''Sofort mehr kohlen'' (More Coal Immediately) one banner said in a play on words - ''kohl'' being slang for money as well as the name of the chancellor.

The demonstration was peaceful in contrast to the violence Wednesday night when leftist and anarchist anti-unification demonstrators battled with police.

Alexanderplatz in central Berlin resembled a battlefield Thursday with burned-out cars and smashed store and hotel windows. Police said 302 people were arrested and 50 later charged with causing bodily injury and endangering public safety.

Parliament's first session began with the swearing in of five former East German political leaders as cabinet ministers without portfoilio, including ex-premier Lothar de MAiziere, followed by a day of predictable speeches centered on the challenges facing the new Germany.

Gregor Gysi, leader of the former East German communists now called the Party of Democratic Socialism, called for ''dignity, culture and tolerance'' in the new Parliament.

''Everything must be avoided that would further undermine the self- confidence of former East German citizens,'' Gysi said, citing as an example the ''naming of five ministers but with nothing to do.''

Kohl called in his opening government statement for an Atlantic Declaration to formalize ties between Germany and Europe on one side and the United States and Canada on the other.

The European Security Conference summit in Paris in November, he said, should also formally renounce the use of force.

Kohl praised Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev - who visits next month to sign a friendship and cooperation treaty - for making such speedy German unity possible.

At the same time, Kohl underlined Germanys commitment to freedom and democracy.

''United Germany stands irrevocably behind the western alliance, behind solidarity and for the common values of the free western democracies, especially the United States,'' Kohl said.

The Reichstag was gutted Feb. 27, 1933, by a fire Hitler blamed on the communists but that many historians believe was set by the Nazis to discredit others. Hitler promptly banned all other parties.

Kohl told the lawmakers Germany ''must never forget, suppress or play down the crimes committed in this century by Germans.''

''Above all, we owe this to the victims of the Holocaust, the unparalleled genocide of European Jews,'' he said.

Kohl and his Christian Democratic Union, together with the similarly conservative but small Free Democratic Party, enjoy a solid majority of 354 of the 663 seats in Parliament.

Polls also suggest Kohl will walk away with victory in the first all- German elections Dec. 2.

(OCT. 4) UPI - Here is a roundup of the latest major events in the Persian Gulf crisis stemming from the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of the oil-rich emirate of Kuwait:

Japanese Premier Toshiki Kaifu met in Jordan Thursday with Iraqi Deputy Premier Taha Yassin Ramadan, and renewed the United Nations' demand that Iraq withdraw from Kuwait. In other developments, French President Francois Mitterrand arrived in the Saudi Red Sea port of Jeddah to meet with King Fahd as part of his gulf tour. Also, Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's envoy, Yevgeny Primakov, arrived in Baghdad from Amman after talks with King Hussein and Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat.

PARIS - Nine French hostages arrived have home from Iraq Thursday as President Francois Mitterrand met with Saudi King Fahd. The French Foreign Ministry meanwhile confirmed reports that two other French hostages being held on a barge in northern Kuwait had managed to flee to Saudi Arabia with three British hostages, dodging Iraqi naval patrols aboard a Zodiac inflatable dinghy.

ROME - Foreign Minister Gianni De Michelis said Thursday Italy's two remaining diplomats in Kuwait will be forced to leave their embassy ''within the next few hours or days'' because they have run out of food and water. He also said the embassy is surrounded by Iraqi troops. Italy and other Western countries have defied orders by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, issued shortly after his Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, to close their embassies.

WASHINGTON - American city dwellers are suffering cuts in basic services because of the sharply rising cost of gasoline, the U.S. Conference of Mayors said Thursday. A survey of 50 cities found the overall cost of fuel needed to run police cars, fire trucks, ambulances, sanitation equipment and public transportation jumped 30.6 percent during August, and in some cities the rise was well over 50 percent.

WASHINGTON - President Bush has drawn what he calls a ''line in the sand'' in his showdown with Iraq's Saddam Hussein but church leaders and religious opinion makers want the United States to be more flexible. While generally supporting Bush's first reaction to the invasion of Kuwait by Iraq, church leaders now are expressing alarm at talk of the ''inevitability'' of war in the region.

CLEVELAND, GA (OCT. 4) UPI - Babyland General Hospital, where ''Mother Cabbage'' gives birth to some of America's most popular dolls, may be moving unless townspeople succeed in a campaign to keep their No. 1 tourist attraction.

Officials with Original Appalachian Artworks, parent company of the hospital built to showcase Cabbage Patch Kids, may want to move from White County to a neigboring county to find space to expand, said Mari Forquer, director of corporate communications for the company.

The possible move made Carolyn Cady, a 53-year-old grandmother of three, upset enough to write a letter to the local weekly paper, The Telegraph. Since then, at least 500 residents of the town have signed a petition started by the newspaper editor asking Babyland General to stay in Cleveland.

''It started out just as a short letter. Mine just happened to reach the hearts of the people,'' Cady said Thursday.

Babyland General is a collection of displays featuring the Cabbage Patch Kids. Exhibits show the dolls at school, in the nursery or at play.

During one special exhibit, Mother Cabbage goes into labor, eventually parting her cabbage leaves to give birth to a newborn Cabbage Patch Kid.

Cabbage Patch Kids also are for sale at Babyland General, although company officials prefer to say the dolls are adopted.

''It's such a magical place ... I go three or four times a year just to sit back and watch the people,'' Cady said.

Forquer said the company has made no definite plans to move. Company officials have talked with government leaders in White County, where Cleveland is located, and have also met with Hall County officials. The company also is considering moving to Habersham or Lumpkin counties.

With about 1 million visitors a year, Babyland General simply needs to be bigger, Forquer said. It currently is on leased property that offers little hope for expansion.

''I can't bear the thought of seeing them leave Cleveland,'' Cady said. ''My feeling is if we lose this, we're going to lose so much for our children.''

Many of the petition signers have been children, who also have sent drawings of hearts with ''I Love You'' written on them to Xavier Roberts, a White County native who created the dolls, said Steve Whitmire, editor and publisher of The Telegraph.

Whitmire has printed the petition signatures in his paper and admits he's behind the effort to keep the tourist attraction in town.

''After about two weeks, we said we can't just sit around and be objective here,'' the editor said. ''It's one of the state's top 10 tourist attractions. They draw strictly all-American, wholesome clientele, and I'd hate to see them go.''

BERLIN (OCT. 4) UPI - Everything seemed back to normal in Berlin Thursday - even the weather.

After two bright and sunny days of Wednesday's celebrating unification, Berliners returned to work under grey skies and Parliament held the first all-German session in the original Reichstag building.

Few visible things had changed since unification, including the police who wore the same western uniforms in what used to be East and West Berlin.

Inside the Reichstag, 663 deputies - 519 from former West and 144 from East Germany - gathered in the recently redesigned assembly hall for their first session.

A Bonn deputy asked a guard where his seat was. The guard advised him to sit ''just like in the Bundestag,'' the Bonn parliament.

Once the members had found their seats, parliamentary speaker Rita Suessmuth greeted them with a simple ''Guten Morgen.''

The deputies will return to Bonn to meet for another session Friday. Although Berlin is now officially the capital of Germany, Bonn will remain the seat of government.

Outside, 300 teenagers from former East Germany formed a human chain around the building, calling for more funding for vocational training and university scholarships.

One 14-year-old boy held aloft a German flag bearing the words ''swords into ploughshares.''

At the nearby Brandenburg gate, several tourists stood in the drizzle to buy T-shirts saying ''Oct. 3 unification, I was there.''

Elsewhere in Berlin, life had largely returned to normal after almost two days of ceremonies, celebrations and demonstrations.

Before dawn, squads of cleaners washed away sausage leftovers, empty beer cans and champagne bottles along the famed ''Unter den Linden'' boulevard, where the last revelers drank until early morning.

At the Alexanderplatz near the boulevard, dozens of workers were busy replacing windows smashed in riots that marred the celebrations Wednesday night.

Throughout the city, German flags fluttered on masts and apartment building balconies.

''Good morning, Germany,'' proclaimed thousands of banners.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (OCT. 4) UPI - The government decided Thursday to send troops to Rwanda, its former territory, to protect 1,600 Belgians from a rebel attack in the east central African country.

''The government has decided, in concert with the Rwandan government, to send without delay troops and military equipment to Rwanda in the framework of a humanitarian action aiming to protect the Belgian residents and allow, if necessary, their evacuation,'' Prime Minister Wilfried Martens said.

Rwandan President Juvenal Habyarimana asked for the military help Wednesday during a visit to Brussels.

Officials declined to say how many Belgian troops were being dispatched. Paratroopers were seen embarking Thursday afternoon from a military airport near Brussels.

France announced Thursday that it too is sending 150 soldiers to Rwanda in response to a Rwandan request for help. France wants to ensure the safety of French citizens and the French Embassy in Rwanda.

Hundreds of Rwandan peasants were fleeing to their capital city in an attempt to escape tribal fighting in the northern part of the country, a western diplomat said Thursday.

The diplomat, based in the Rwandan capital of Kigali, also said there had been many civilian and military casualties in the conflict, but declined to speculate how many. The fighting broke out Sunday when an estimated 1,500 armed, mainly Tutsti, Rwandan exiles invaded Rwanda from Uganda.

''Yesterday and the day before, several hundred peasant families arrived (in Kigali). Certainly there have been military casualties, and we must think there are civilians who have been caught in the cross- fire,'' said the diplomat.

''This is essentially a tribal and ethnic war,'' said the diplomat, asking not to be identified.

In Washington, the State Department advised U.S. citizens to defer travel to Rwanda until further notice. The travel advisory also addressed Americans already inside the country: ''The U.S. Embassy in Kigali has recommended that Americans in the northern prefectures of Ruhengeri, Gisenyi and Byumba return to Kigali, where the situation is more secure.''

Led by Maj. Gen. Fred Rwigyema, a former top commander of the Ugandan National Resistance Army, the rebel exiles want to topple the mainly Hutu tribe government of Rwandan President Juvenal Habyarimana. Rwigyema is of Rwandan extraction.

Although the fighting had come within 40 miles of Kigali, and people in the capital are nervous, daily business was going on as usual, the diplomat said.

Habyarimana, in New York attending the United Nations' world summit on children when the fighting broke out, returned to Rwanda Wednesday night after stopping off in Belgium.

Ugandan President Yoweri Museveni has condemned the attack and closed all border points and roads along the Ugandan-Rwandan frontier, cutting off any possible rebel retreat.

Reports reaching Nairobi from the Ugandan border town of Mbarara said there were a large number of Ugandan troops patrolling the area. Military sources in Mabara said the rebels had captured a small airfield inside Rwanda.

One Rwandan exile, identifying himself only as a member of the rebel Rwandan Patriotic Front, confirmed that the rebels were seeking to overthrow the Rwandan government.

''We are fighting the (Rwandan) government because it is corrupt, cliquish and regionalist. It will be a protracted war, while we mobilize the people for the revolution,'' he said.

Rwigyema, the son of Rwandan refugees who fled to Uganda in the 1960s to escape tribal wars and food shortages, joined Museveni's fledgling guerrilla army in 1976 and received special guerrilla warfare training in Tanzania and Mozambique.

When Museveni took power in 1986, he appointed Rwigyema as his deputy army commander, and later made him deputy minister of state for defense. In a military reshuffle last year, Rwigyema was posted abroad for further training.

An estimated 80,000 Rwandan exiles have been living in Uganda.

Rwanda is a mountainous country about the size of Belgium. It is the most densely populated nation in Africa. A German protectorate from 1899 to 1916, Rwanda became part of the Belgian mandate of Rwanda-Urundi after World War I and later was part of a Belgian-administered trust territory. It won independence in 1962.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 4) UPI - Federal prosecutors said Thursday they have demanded documents and written explanations from the oil industry as part of a widening Justice Department investigation into recent gasoline price increases.

The department's Antitrust Division launched the inquiry Aug. 6 to determine if price-fixing or other antitrust violations played a part in sharp price increases at the gas pump following Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of oil-rich Kuwait.

Justice Department investigators already have questioned several top executives from oil companies, officials said, adding the oil industry has cooperated in the probe so far.

''That phase of the investigation developed substantial information about the nature of crude oil and gasoline markets and how they behaved in the wake of the Aug. 2 invasion,'' said Assistant Attorney General James Rill, head of the Antitrust Division. ''It also provided us with an opportunity to have the parties explain the factors that caused them to raise gasoline prices.''

The department declined to name the companies or detail the nature of the information requested. But Rill said the subpoenas were issued to ''major oil companies and independent refiners and marketers of gasoline.''

The subpoenas should enable investigators to scrutinize oil industry explanations of the price hikes and to address some unanswered questions, Rill said.

Although the loss of oil production from Iraq and Kuwait largely has been offset by other producers, speculation has driven the price of oil up on world markets. However, that higher-priced oil was not used to make the gasoline Americans were paying more for last month.

The American Automobile Association said Tuesday the average price of gasoline is now 27.1 cents a gallon higher than Aug. 1, the day before Iraq invaded Kuwait. AAA said the average price of a gallon of regular gasoline - $1.346 a gallon - is at its highest level since Thanksgiving 1981.

''We aggressively will pursue this investigation until we determine whether or not violations of antitrust law contributed to the rise in gasoline prices,'' Rill said.

Antitrust investigators will continue to interview industry officials and collect information on oil prices and supplies, Rill said. The Federal Trade Commission, the Department of Energy and state prosecutors are assisting in the investigation.

The high profile inquiry is in contrast to usual Justice Department policy not to comment on pending investigations and comes in the wake of appeals to the oil industry by President Bush to refrain from taking advantage of the Persian Gulf crisis through speculation or price gouging.

In an effort to calm oil markets, Bush last week authorized a test witdrawal from the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, the nation's 590 million-barrel crude oil nest egg created following the oil shortages of the 1970s.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (OCT. 4) UPI - The European Community Executive Commission Thursday adopted a $45.5 million program to help cut energy use by 12 percent over the next five years.

''Efficient use of energy has deteriorated following the two energy crises of the 1970s,'' said Antonio Cardoso e Cunha, the 12-nation European Community's energy commissioner.

Falling oil prices in the 1980s encouraged consumers to resume their wasteful ways, he said, and the sharp increase in oil prices following Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait shows the need for renewed conservation.

Program SAVE, as the new EC plan is known, calls for several steps to encourage more efficient energy use, including regulatory measures and financial support of conservation techniques.

One step suggested by Cardoso is the employment of trained energy monitors at large manufacturing plants.

Mandatory automobile speed limits were not considered by the Commission in adopting the program, because officials said such a measure would be better suited to emergency legislation in the event of an acute oil shortage.

''The public might feel such a step was panic-mongering,'' Cardoso said, and it could upset an already ''erratic'' energy market.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (OCT. 4) UPI - Mutinous soldiers seized two southern cities Thursday without firing a shot and proclaimed an independent federal state in Mindanao, the first stage of a seventh attempt to overthrow President Corazon Aquino.

Led by renegade army Col. Alexander Noble, Aquino's former deputy chief of presidential guards, the rebels took the logging town of Butuan before dawn, marched triumphantly on to nearby Cagayan de Oro city to the cheers of thousands of residents and occupied the Armed Forces' 4th Division headquarters.

''This is a victory for a free Mindanao,'' a visibly tired Noble told reporters in the evening at Camp Edilberto Evangelista. He said the camp commander, Brig. Gen. Miguel Sol, and his men fled without resisting.

A rebel statement issued in Manila said Noble and his men ''liberated'' Mindanao, a mineral- and timber-rich region 500 miles south of Manila, and established the Federal Republic of Mindanao in the former U.S. colony.

''This is the first concrete step of a great historical process toward realizing a federal-parliamentary form of governance for the entire Philippine archipelago,'' the statement said.

It said the rebels acted to ''free themselves from the vicious cycles of poverty, corruption, ignorance, apathy, anarchy and injustice.''

Defense Secretary Fidel Ramos, who cut short a holiday in Hong Kong, told reporters he ordered rebellion charges filed against Noble and his associates. He said Noble sent letters to diplomatic missions in Manila asking for recognition of the breakaway state, a violation of the constitution.

Aquino, 57, who has survived six coup attempts since taking power in a civilian-backed military revolt in 1986, said in a statement she would crush the rebels ''in due time'' and appealed to Filipinos for support in fighting ''trouble makers.''

''We cannot allow our democracy to die,'' she said.

U.S. Ambassador Nicholas Platt issued a statement expressing ''unequivocal support'' for Aquino. ''We strongly condemn any effort to destabilize the elected Philippine government in any part of the republic,'' he said.

An official in Manila who did not wish to be named was concerned that there was no resistance to Noble. ''What is scary is not a single shot was fired.''

In the capital, marine troops from nearby Bulacan province augmented security forces Thursday evening. The only incident reported was a bomb blast that damaged the water pumping station at the Fort Bonifacio. There were no casualties.

It was the 40th bombing in metropolitan Manila in two months, all blamed on rebel soldiers.

The military also announced the arrest of a rebel soldier, Capt. Diosdado Valeroso, in suburban Quezon City Thursday afternoon.

The Armed Forces chief, Gen. Renato de Villa, placed the 159,000- member armed forces under red alert - the maximum state of preparedness - and ordered loyalist troops to retake Butuan and Cagayan de Oro.

He said except for the small group of mutineers who joined Noble the armed forces was ''intact'' and soldiers were respecting the ''chain of command.''

But at nightfall, there was no indication de Villa's order was being carried out in Cagayan de Oro. Noble said 90 percent of the forces there had vowed to support him and were taking a ''wait-and-see attitude.''

The only reported encounter was the blasting by air force T-28 planes of a rebel helicopter at a camp in nearby Iligan city. A T-28 on a reconnaisance mission crashed in the central island of Cebu on return to base, killing its pilot.

Rebel soldiers have said their next attempt to oust Aquino would be bloodless because it would entail only a withdrawal of support for Aquino. The plan under operation ''August moon'' called for the takeover of key cities in Mindanao to trigger a coup attempt in Manila. Under the Chinese calendar the plan was to take effect Wednesday.

Noble and his men seized the army brigade headquarters in Butuan at midnight Wednesday, shut down two radio stations and allowed two others sympathetic to their cause to operate.

The 800 rebels, including 500 militiamen, moved in a convoy of three V-150 armored vehicles and a dozen trucks, some of them towing 105 mm howitzers, to Cagayan de Oro, 150 miles west of Butuan.

Local opposition leaders, led by former Mayor Reuben Canoy and 12,000 followers, welcomed Noble, the subject of a massive manhunt in the Butuan area for two months.

Chanting ''independence, independence,'' the crowd paraded behind Noble's convoy, distributing leaflets announcing the formation of the Mindanao state in a region wracked for two decades by insurgencies waged by communist guerrillas and Moslem separatists.

Reacting to the uprising, the composite price index fell by 34.27 percent to 515.39 Thursday on the Manila stock exchange. The index slightly recovered Wednesday, but fell again to its lowest level in 3 1/2 years.

DETROIT (OCT. 4) UPI - Ford Motor Co. was expected Thursday to make a proposal to the United Auto Workers in efforts to tailor the union's pact reached last month with General Motors Corp. to fit its specific needs.

The nature of the offer - and the union's reaction to it - is expected to determine whether the two sides can reach a tentative agreement covering Ford's 99,800 U.S. hourly workers by the end of this week, company spokesmen said.

Earlier this week, UAW President Owen Bieber expressed optimism that an agreement with the No. 2 automaker could be reached this week, with the GM pact to be used as a pattern.

But top Ford bargainers called that target ''ambitious,'' with company spokesman Dick Routh saying negotiators were prepared to work through the weekend if necessary.

Stricter penalties for the use of overtime is the major issue between Ford and the UAW, Routh said. The UAW negotiated stricter penalties against the use of excessive overtime at General Motors, which is now assessed up to $5 for overtime hours logged by workers. The company is required to pay the penalty into a joint skills and training fund.

The union contends that Ford, which relies on overtime the most among the nation's Big Three automakers, should create more jobs instead.

''This is the strategy we adopted in the mid-1980s, and it has served us very well in the form of job security,'' Routh said of Ford's use of overtime. ''We feel we would like to have the flexibility of working overtime without paying such a stiff penalty for doing so.''

Ford, which only has 630 workers on indefinite layoff, vs. about 30, 000 at GM also maintains that overtime has benefitted both the company and workers, especially during a period of softer sales as the industry is now experiencing.

For the model year ended Sept. 30, Ford saw its share of the U.S. vehicle market decline to 23.8 percent from 24.4 percent in 1989, with the total industry shrinking 7.7 percent to an estimated 14.2 million units.

Routh also said Ford's hourly labor costs have grown to $30.98 a worker, including wages, benefits and average overtime, from $28.88 at the start of the last Ford/UAW pact in 1987.

''We must do everything we can to reduce costs to remain competitive, especially with the transplants, which now enjoy an $8-an-hour cost advantage over us,'' Routh said.

Transplants are the North American assembly plants operated by Japanese automakers that include Toyota, Honda, Mazda and Nissan.

Following a tentative settlement and worker ratification at Ford, the UAW will take its pact to third-ranked Chrysler Corp. But industry experts believe the union may have a tough time keeping Chrysler to stick to the pattern, since top company executives have openly called the GM/UAW pact ''unaffordable.''

PATERSON, NJ (OCT. 4) UPI - A judge visited a nursing home Thursday to examine a mentally incompetent woman whose father is seeking an emergency court order for an abortion.

The 33-year-old divorced mother of three was left mentally incompetent from complications during childbirth six years ago and lives in the nursing home.

The woman, whose name is being withheld, has become pregnant again, raising suspicions of rape and posing unprecedented legal questions over who has control of the 23-week-old fetus.

Her father, who is her legal guardian, is seeking court approval for the abortion.

Superior Court Judge Amos Saunders, after briefly hearing arguments, said he would talk to the woman himself to determine her mental state, then resume the court hearing in the late afternoon.

The woman's physician has told the court in legal documents that the ''latest possible time for termination within medically accepted safe standards'' is Oct. 5.

In court documents, the father said he feared his daughter had been raped at the Daughters of Miriam Center in Clifton.

''No one can be sure if these acts of sexual assault have ceased or are persisting,'' wrote Dennis Maycher, an attorney representing the father.

He had requested six months ago that she be removed from nursing home but was denied court approval when the nursing home argued that the woman would suffer a psychological setback if she were removed.

The father now has private nurses at his daughter's bedside around the clock.

Steven Schilsky, assistant executive director of the nursing home, said the nursing home discovered Sept. 18 that the woman was 21 weeks pregnant and, suspecting rape, immediately notified Clifton police.

The Passaic County prosecutor's office has joined the investigation.

Schilsky said there is a question as to where any rape might have occurred, saying the woman leaves the center to attend a church-related support group for young disabled people.

The father's attorney told The Record of Hackensack, N.J., that permission was being sought for the abortion because New Jersey courts have never faced the issue of whether a legal guardian can make such a decision without court approval.

''The issue is whether the guardian making a decision for her to have an abortion may make that choice without involving the court,'' wrote Joseph Hallock, an attorney representing Midlantic National Bank, the court-appointed guardian of the woman's financial affairs.

HANOVER, NH (OCT. 4) UPI - A crowd of more than 1,000 Dartmouth College students and staff turned out Thursday for a rally to vent their outrage at the printing in the Dartmouth Review of an anti-Semitic quote from Adolf Hitler.

But at a news conference before the rally, officials of the conservative off-campus weekly maintained that the quote was inserted in the paper by an unknown saboteur and accused college officials of trying to use the incident to attack the Review.

The Hitler quote was contained in the middle of a quote from Theodore Roosevelt on the paper's masthead, which is described as the paper's ''credo.''

College President James Freedman, a frequent target of the newspaper, told the crowd at the college green that the incident had led to ''a week of infamy at

Dartmouth.''

''We're trying to represent to the nation that the Dartmouth Review does not represent the views of students at Dartmouth College,'' Brian V. Ellner, the college student assembly president, told students at the rally.

''Things should never have gotten to this point,'' said rally organizer Rachel B. Coustan. ''This has gone too far this time.''

At a news conference earlier in the day, Dartmouth Review trustee Dimesh D'Souza compared the current controversy to the Tawana Brawley case in New York. In that case a black girl said she was kidnapped and raped by white men, a story that was later discredited.

''There is a strong possibility that it was an imposter,'' D'Souza said. ''It is a sabotage. It is a dirty trick. It is a subterfuge.''

D'Souza compared Freedman to the Rev. Al Sharpton, a black activist who used the Brawley case as a platform to espouse his views.

The quote, ''Therefore, I believe today that I am acting in the sense of the Almightly Creator: By warding off the Jews, I am fighting for the Lord's work '' was printed in the Oct. 3 edition of the Dartmouth Review. It was taken from ''Mein Kampf,'' Hitler's political autobiography.

About 3,000 copies of the paper containing the quote were delivered on Friday, which was Yom Kippur, the holiest day of the Jewish calendar. Another 10,000 copies of the paper were destroyed.

The Dartmouth Review has had a stormy 10-year history, frequently attacking Freedman, and blacks and women on the Ivy League school's faculty.

The newspaper, which has no connection with the college, is backed by William F. Buckley and other well-known conservatives.

GUATEMALA CITY (OCT. 4) UPI - Five of the seven people charged with killing U.S. citizen Michael Devine are members of Guatemala's army, the deputy attorney general for human rights said Thursday.

Deputy Attorney General Fernando Hurtado Prem said he received a letter last week from the defense minister saying murder charges have been filed against five soldiers and two others for their role in the killing of Devine.

Devine, 49, of Bellville, Ill., had lived in Guatemala for 18 years and was an innkeeper and tour guide in northern Peten province when he was kidnapped by five armed men in civilian clothes June 8.

His beaten and decapitated body was found the next day along a road in a jungle area of Peten province.

The killing of Devine and the rash of human rights violations in the country have put a thorn in relations between the United States and Guatemala.

U.S. Ambassador Thomas Stroock has criticized President Vinicio Cerezo's inability to control the daily kidnappings, disappearances and murders, which human rights groups say are committed mostly by the army.

Hurtado said the five soldiers are Rafael Tiul Cucul, Pablo Lajuj, Andres Norente, Ricardo Guzman and Banjamin Ponji.

Two of the soldiers were previously identified as belonging to an elite counter-intelligence unit under the direct orders of the army High Command.

(OCT. 4) UPI - They may have to use a coin in the House today to it comes to the showdown vote on the budget reduction plan. The latest count shows neither side has the votes it needs. But that has NOT stopped House leaders who say they have NO plans to postpone the scheduled afternoon vote. The 500-BILLION-dollar, five-year package raises taxes while it cuts government spending.

Berlin's historic Reichstag parliament building echoed to the sound of legislators today for the first time since 1933. The gathering of 633 delegates included 144 newcomers from what had been East Germany until it ceased to exist yesterday. Chancellor Kohl told those assembled in front of him that the newly unified nation will remain an important part of the western alliance.

French President Mitterand is holding talks with Saudi Arabia's King Fahd today in the second day of a visit to the Persian Gulf area. Mitterand spent the night aboard a French warship, one of several dispatched to the area. And he will review crack elements of the French Foreign Legion now in Saudi Arabia. Last week, Mitterand proposed what could become a peaceful settlement to the crisis. It has drawn expressions of interest from Iraq.

ORLANDO, Fla. (OCT. 4) UPI - The Walt Disney Co. filed a federal lawsuit Thursday accusing 37 Florida retailers and distributors of selling products illegally adorned with Disney characters.

The company said the lawsuit - the 26th such anti-piracy action undertaken by Disney since 1985 - charges the defendants with copyright infringement, false designation of origin and unfair competition.

The company said the retailers and distributors, including Gala Enterprises of central Florida, sold or supplied sweatshirts, T-shirts, hats, watches, dolls and other products with Disney characters in about 50 retail locations.

Disney said it is seeking an injunction to block future sales of pirated merchandise, and damages for willful infringement.

The company estimated its total damages at $50,000.

Disney said 15 Gala stores in central Florida were named in the complaint.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 4) UPI - Alaskans use more energy per person than residents of any other state while New Yorkers and New Englanders consume the least, an environmental group said Thursday.

In a state-by-state study of energy use, Public Citizen, a group formed by consumer advocate Ralph Nader, found the average American consumed 323 million British thermal units - or Btus - of energy a year, equal to the energy provided by 56 barrels of oil.

In contrast, residents of frigid Alaska used more than three times as much energy as the national average, consuming 987 million Btus annually, the equivalent of 170 barrels of oil a year.

Following Alaska among the 10 biggest energy consumers on a per person basis were, in order: Wyoming, 794 million Btus or the equivalent of 137 barrels of oil; Louisiana, 787 million Btus or 136 barrels; Texas, 564 million Btus or 97 barrels; North Dakota, 471 million Btus or 81 barrels; Indiana, 443 million Btus or 76 barrels; Kansas, 420 million Btus or 73 barrels; West Virginia, 429 million Btus or 72 barrels; Montana, 414 million Btus or 71 barrels; and Oklahoma, 397 million Btus or 68 barrels.

The report said those 10 states have less than 15 percent of the nation's popluation, but account for more than 25 percent of America's energy use.

The states using the least energy on a per person basis were, in order: New York, 200 million Btus or 34 barrels of oil a year; Rhode Island, 217 million Btus or 37 barrels; New Hampshire, 219 million Btus or 38 barrels; Massachusetts, 228 million Btus or 39 barrels; Vermont, 228 million Btus or 39 barrels; Florida, 231 million Btus or 40 barrels; Connecticut, 234 million Btus or 40 barrels; Hawaii, 240 million Btus or 41 barrels; California, 240 million Btus or 41 barrels; and Arizona, 252 million Btus or 44 barrels.

Those 10 states are home to 31 percent of the U.S. population but account for only 22 percent of the country's energy consumption, said the study, entitled ''Energy Audit: A State-by-State Profile of Energy Conservation and Alternatives.''

Jonathan Becker, one of the authors of the report, said the survey was based on Energy Department energy consumption data for 1988, the latest year for which information was available.

Becker said his group had no clear explanation of different state rankings, though Alaska's extremely cold climate obviously contributed to that state's high energy use.

However, he noted New York and New England states also had cold winters but managed to keep per person energy consumption very low.

Overall, the report said: ''If every state in the country consumed the same amount of energy as do the five most energy-efficient states, energy use in the United States would be 35 percent less than it is today.''

Other findings in the report include:

-In regard to actual petroleum consumption, Alaskans use the most, 71 barrels a year, more than three times higher than the national average of 24 barrels a year.

-Residents of Wyoming use the most gasoline, 666 gallons a year. Car- loving residents of California ranked 11th, at 444 gallons a year.

-Washington leads all states in utilization of renewable energy sources, with 54 percent of its energy coming from hydroelectric, solar, wind, geothermal and wood. The state's high ranking is largely due to hydropower.

Kevorkian told the Detroit chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists last night- quote- ''The law and ethics flatly don't mean a thing to me when a patient is in front of me and needs help.'' Kevorkian gained international attention when he aided the June 4th suicide of 54-year-old Janet Adkins of Portland, Oregon, who was suffering from Alzheimer's disease. Adkins died in Kevorkian's van after giving herself a heart-stopping injection of drugs.

She's charged with misdemeanor child abuse in the case involving her disabled son and also faces two counts of misdemeanor child neglect in incidents involving two younger children. A SAUDI-KUWAIT BORDER TOWN (OCT. 4) UPI - Two French and three British citizens laying low in northern Kuwait fled to Saudi Arabia aboard a Zodiac inflatable dinghy, dodging Iraqi naval patrols, mine fields and a choppy sea, it was revealed Thursday.

At the same time, hundreds of Kuwaitis continued to flee their occupied country for Saudi Arabia.

The men said they planned the escape for about five weeks and told friends they were going fishing, arranging to meet a tugboat in the Persian Gulf. But they missed the ship.

''Unfortunately the charts we had to go by were old,'' said Ivan Manning, 44, a British citizen. ''Our navigation was very hit and miss; we were totally off course.''

When they realized they would not be picked up as planned, the group had no choice but to navigate toward the Saudi Arabian coast, risking that they would be discovered by one of the many Iraqi warships that patrol the area.

At one point they almost put in at Kuwait City, thinking it was the town on the Saudi side of the border they were trying to reach.

Manning, Mike Teesdale and Keith Barkworth of Britain and Amedee du Paty de Clam and Jamel Cellier of France made the escape in 25 hours Monday and Tuesday, aided only by the obsolete navigation chart and the starlit sky.

Authorities only made their escape public Thursday, giving them a chance to rest.

The former hostages said they planned their escape while discussing the worsening crisis in Basrain in northern Kuwait, where they were employed on an engineering project.

They provided scant details but it was believed they were picked up by a Japanese vessel and transferred to a Saudi Coast Guard vessel before being taken to this town on the Kuwaiti border.

Barkworth is a sea captatin, Teesdale and Manning officials of a marine loading company.

Manning and the others said there were Americans where they had been staying but they declined to provide any specifics. 'We know of some information that will be passed on. They're OK,'' said Manning.

''We felt we were more at risk staying there,'' said Barkworth, discussing how they decided to dash for freedom under the guise of a fishing trip.

At the border town, officials said as many as 200 Kuwaitis a day are reaching Saudi Arabia, their cars searched thoroughly for explosives and weapons. Most were women and children and older men, said an official who asked not to be named.

Their passports and other papers were seized by the Iraqis, the official said, adding that it appeared many young Kuwaiti men remained in hiding rather than risk being picked up on a public trip to the border.

Other sources confirmed that linguists at the border were talking to those who presented themselves as Kuwait refugees to guard against infiltration by Iraqi terrorists.

The refugees were given 2,000 Saudi rials, approximately $555, and provided with temporary housing until they could get settled in other Saudi towns.

Additionally, the official said two Iraqi officers, a captain and a lieutenant defected Wedneday night.

DUMFRIES, Scotland (OCT. 4) UPI - Scots, testifying at an inquiry Thursday, recalled the night a jumbo jet crashed onto their town like ''a miniature atomic bomb'' - raining fire onto their homes and killing 11 of their neighbors.

They recounted how they heard a sound like rumbling thunder, a shrill whistle, then felt an explosion that shook their homes.

They described watching debris fall from the sky, and streets, gardens and rooftops ablaze with splattered aviation fuel.

They told of an orange mushroom cloud that rose into the night sky high above Lockerbie.

One woman said she felt a weak pulse in the wrist of a young woman who had fallen 31,000 feet to Earth near the cockpit of the Pan Am jet. But life quickly slipped out of her, as her rings glinted in the beam of a flashlight.

A common thread ran through the stories - shock and puzzlement over what had happened, a first impression that two military jets had collided, and the gradual realization that a passenger jet had crashed onto their town.

Although witnesses' accounts of the disaster have been told and re- told many times in the past 21 months, their stories repeated in a hushed courtroom had lost none of their dramatic effect.

They were testifying at a Scottish inquiry into the terrorist bombing of Pan Am Flight 103, in which 270 people died, including 11 people on the ground. The inquiry resumes Monday.

John Smith, 76, was one of a string of witnesses from Lockerbie who gave graphic accounts of the nightmarish scenes that shattered their town shortly after 7 p.m. Dec. 21, 1988.

The retired policeman, wearing gloves to protect his hands which are still affected by burns, told how he rescued his wife from their blazing home in Lockerbie's Sherwood Cresent, where the fuel-laden wings of the Boeing 747 fell.

Smith, walking with the aid of a cane, fitted his hearing aid before taking the oath and occasionally had to ask the lord advocate, who is leading evidence for the crown, to repeat his questions.

On the night of the disaster, Smith said he and his wife Janet were sitting in their living room waiting for ''Coronation Street,'' a popular soap opera, to start on television.

''I heard an airplane,'' he said, ''and I was just about to say 'This plane's very low' when something hit the roof. I didn't get the words out.

''Flames came from the ceiling right into the room. They spread from one end of the bungalow to the other. My head was badly burned and something - I don't know what - hit me and knocked me down.

''I tried to move it but couldn't. I didn't fancy getting burned so I tried harder and got it moved.''

Smith said he could not see his 75-year-old wife for the flames.

''I ran to try and get out the back door but I couldn't get out because of the flames. I then went to the back bedroom to see if I could get through the window but it was also in flames. I then went to the front door which was usually very hard to open but it opened just like that,'' he said.

''I went back to look for my wife but there was no reply when I shouted. I didn't know what to do. Then, there she was lying on the carpet ... she must have crawled a wee bit.''

Smith said he shouted to his wife to come out. ''She said 'I can't get up' but I told her to stay still and I would come and get her.''

He managed to get them out of their house to a garden wall, where a policeman and another man dragged them to safety.

NEW ORLEANS (OCT. 4) UPI - The Republican-backed candidate for U.S. Senate is withdrawing from Saturday's Louisiana primary to deny former Ku Klux Klan leader David Duke a chance to force incumbent Democrat J. Bennett Johnston into a runoff, an aide said Thurday.

The aide said Republican nominee Ben Bagert, a state senator, would announce his withdrawal at a news conference later Thursday. Earlier in the day, Bagert canceled a scheduled campaign appearance and pulled all of his television and radio campaign spots.

Bagert's withdrawal marked a second blow to Duke's campaign in as many days. On Wednesday, eight Republican senators in Washington endorsed Johnston, saying Duke - a Louisiana state representative running as a Republican - appealed to racist and anti-Semitic sentiments and did not represent the GOP.

Duke, a former leader of the Knights of Ku Klux Klan who has also had ties in the past to neo-Nazi organizations, has focused his campaign on attacks on welfare recipients, affirmative action, taxes and the establishment.

Under Louisiana election law, all candidates - including those, like Duke, not nominated by their parties - run in the same primary. If any one gets a majority, the person is automatically elected to the Senate. If no candidate wins a majority, there is a runoff between the top two finishers.

Bagert had run a poor third in all polls taken on the race since early in the year. His decision to pull out followed the release of a new poll less than 48 hours before the open primary that showed Bagert had no chance of making the runoff.

The poll released by Mason-Dixon Research in Baton Rouge showed Johnston with 53 percent, Duke with 26 percent and Bagert with 8 percent.

Under Louisiana's system, a runoff in November is mandated if no candidate takes more than 50 percent of the vote in the primary.

The Bagert campaign never got off the ground following his nomination by the GOP in January. In recent weeks, at least two top campaign aides quit, saying Bagert owed them money and that he had no chance to win.

Bagert also suffered a withdrawal of support from the Republican National Committee, which cut off funds.

The most recent campaign finance reports showed the Bagert campaign owed about $100,000 through Sept. 16, while Johnston, who already has spent $3.2 million, had another $1.7 million to spend. Duke, who has raised and spent almost $2 million this year, had $35,000 left.

In recent weeks, Bagert has run television commercials showing him meeting personally with President Bush in Washington and accepting the president's support for his candidacy.

In a radio interview, Duke said he would get 98 percent of the Bagert vote if the state senator withdrew and that he could beat Johnston in a head-to-head race.

''My polls show me running even with Bennett Johnston now,'' Duke said. ''I think we have a chance to win in the first primary... I've become the Republican candidate in this race.''

New Orleans pollster Silas Lee discounted the prediction, saying that - without Bagert in the race - Johnston was a shoo-in.

Secretary of State Fox McKiethen said that absentee votes for a candidate who has dropped out and any votes for him on election day would not be counted in the official results.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 4) UPI - Federal prosecutors said Thursday they have demanded documents and written explanations from the oil industry as part of a widening Justice Department investigation into recent gasoline price increases.

The department's Antitrust Division launched the inquiry Aug. 6 to determine if price-fixing or other antitrust violations played a part in sharp price increases at the gas pump following Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of oil-rich Kuwait.

Justice Department investigators already have questioned several top executives from oil companies, officials said, adding that the oil industry has cooperated in the probe so far.

''That phase of the investigation developed substantial information about the nature of crude oil and gasoline markets and how they behaved in the wake of the Aug. 2 invasion,'' said Assistant Attorney General James Rill, head of the Antitrust Division. ''It also provided us with an opportunity to have the parties explain the factors that caused them to raise gasoline prices.''

Earl Ross, spokesman for the American Petroleum Institute, an industry group, noted a similar inquiry by the Energy Department on an upswing in heating oil prices last winter found no evidence of collusion.

''While we are not privy to the pricing decisons of oil companies or the thousands of gasoline distributors and service operators, the American Petroleum Institute believes that a fair and impartial investigation of recent increases in the prices of crude oil and its products will reveal that a free market was at work,'' Ross said.

The department declined to name the companies or detail the nature of the information requested. But Rill said the subpoenas were issued to ''major oil companies and independent refiners and marketers of gasoline.''

The subpoenas should enable investigators to scrutinize oil industry explanations of the price hikes and to address some unanswered questions, Rill said.

Although the loss of oil production from Iraq and Kuwait largely has been offset by other producers, speculation has driven the price of oil up on world markets. However, that higher-priced oil was not used to make the gasoline Americans were paying more for last month.

The American Automobile Association said Tuesday the average price of gasoline is now 27.1 cents a gallon higher than Aug. 1, the day before Iraq invaded Kuwait. AAA said the average price of a gallon of regular gasoline - $1.346 a gallon - is at its highest level since Thanksgiving 1981.

''We aggressively will pursue this investigation until we determine whether or not violations of antitrust law contributed to the rise in gasoline prices,'' Rill said.

Antitrust investigators will continue to interview industry officials and collect information on oil prices and supplies, Rill said. The Federal Trade Commission, the Department of Energy and state prosecutors are assisting in the investigation.

The high profile inquiry is in contrast to usual Justice Department policy not to comment on pending investigations and comes in the wake of appeals to the oil industry by President Bush to refrain from taking advantage of the Persian Gulf crisis through speculation or price gouging.

In an effort to calm oil markets, Bush last week authorized a test witdrawal from the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, the nation's 590 million-barrel crude oil nest egg created following the oil shortages of the 1970s.

MOSCOW (OCT. 4) UPI - The Communist Party newspaper Pravda blamed the rise of democracy for the country's economic crisis Thursday and compared Mikhail Gorbachev's perestroika drive with the ''failed'' reforms of Nikita Khrushchev.

In a hard-hitting article that recalled its conservative style of the pre-glasnost era, Pravda lambasted the popularly elected radical politicians who have taken power in the Baltics, the Russian Federation and in Moscow and Leningrad, the nation's two largest cities.

Pravda also reported that its readers, in their letters to the newspaper, say they are very worried about the direction of the Soviet Union.

''One does not need to be clairvoyant to see that there is a real mess in the whole country,'' the newspaper said.

''The new people who have come to power appear to be unprepared for routine practical work,'' it said.

The article was the latest salvo in the battle between radicals who want the Soviet Union to move quickly to a market economy and transfer most power to local authorities, and conservatives trying to stem the central government's crumbling authority.

The bitter tract also reflected the growing conflict between Communist and anti-Communist forces, in which radicals such as Russian leader Boris Yeltsin, Moscow Mayor Gavriil Popov and Anatoly Sobchak have quit the party and relied on popular support for their political strength.

Pravda ridiculed the ''loud-mouthed promises of deputies who have laid claim to the role of 'real democrats' with pledges of positive change the moment they have power.''

The newspaper decried the recent bread shortages in Moscow and the absence of cigarettes that caused riots in a number of cities, saying that radical leaders engaged in abstract political debate instead of solving actual problems.

''No matter how wise the professors' heads are, citizens are not waiting just for promises, but for concrete deeds,'' it said.

Though still less daring than other newspapers that have flourished under Gorbachev's glasnost policy, Pravda has become livelier and shed some of its dogmatism since last November when the president replaced its former conservative editor with Ivan Frolov, a moderate and a Gorbachev ally.

But the article Thursday raised the specter of Nikita Khrushchev, the Soviet leader deposed in 1964 in a conservative backlash against his reform policies.

''Why in our state must one pay for every gulp of freedom with a loaf of bread?'' Pravda asked. ''Remember: There was a similar situation in the early 1960s ... when the reforms of Nikita Khrushchev failed because the administrative-command system crushed them.''

In a swipe at Popov, an influential economist before his election as Moscow mayor, Pravda accused ''some of the most respected economists'' of cowtowing to public opinion and ''not wanting to appear unpopular.''

The newspaper mocked the Russian republic's declaration of sovereignty, passed in June under Yeltsin's new leadership, saying that local governments are now rebelling against the federation's authority in a further decentralization of power.

''The democratic deputies are experiencing the consequences of their own actions,'' it said.

The Soviet Parliament gave Gorbachev new powers last week allowing him to impose economic measures and take other steps through presidential decree.

Pravda, however, said that ''at present the power of the center has become more consultative than commanding, and even presidential decrees are not always fulfilled.''

NEW YORK (OCT. 4) UPI - Two days after unveiling a massive $1.8 billion anti-crime plan, Mayor David Dinkins Thursday ordered an immediate hiring and promotion freeze and directed budget aides to draft a plan to lay off 15,000 city employees.

If enacted, the layoffs would be the biggest since the fiscal crisis of 1975, when the city hovered near bankruptcy. Some 25,000-27,000 city employees were let go at that time. There have not been any significant layoffs since.

The police hiring plan, which calls for adding nearly 8,000 officers to the force, would be exempt, however. The anti-crime program would be paid for through a host of new taxes.

The mayor said the city faces at least a $1.4 billion budget deficit in the next city fiscal year, which begins July 1, because of an accelerating decline in the local economy.

He said the freeze and the layoffs could cut $915 million from that deficit.

''With hard times come hard choices. If we are to maintain budgetary balance, decisive actions and the difficult consequences they bring are absolutely essential,'' Dinkins said.

''We all hope and pray for better economic times. Until they arrive, however, I will continue to impose strict budgetary discipline.''

The mayor's announcement came near the end of a week in which he unveiled the comprehensive anti-crime plan and announced a settlement with the city teachers' union calling for 5.5 percent wage hikes, of which the city will pay 1.5 percent.

Dinkins said city tax collection data reported this week for economically sensitive taxes showed city revenues are continuing to fall sharply.

The tax revenues for the first quarter of the current fiscal year, which began

July 1, were about $152 million below plan.

Dinkins said the hiring and promotion freeze would save the city some $115 million - $35 million over the rest of the current fiscal year and $80 million in the next fiscal year.

The mayor ordered all agency heads not to approve any pay raises and to restrict promotions only to positions that have recently been vacated.

The only positions exempted will be those mandated by state or federal law, those necessary to protect the health and safety of New Yorkers, those that produce revenue or avoid costs and those funded by non-city revenues.

The new police hirings called for in the anti-crime plan will be exempt.

WARSAW, POLAND (OCT. 4) UPI - Poland, struggling to make up a shortfall from Iraqi contracts canceled by the Persian Gulf crisis, announced Thursday it will buy half a million tons of oil from Iran.

Marcin Swiecicki, minister for economic cooperation who returned Thursday from a visit to Tehran, said the deal also assures Poland of up to 3 million tons of oil in 1990. A ton is approximately 7 barrels.

Poland, Czechoslovakia and other former East Bloc countries are scrambling to come up with new oil sources following the twin blows of the Gulf crisis and the Soviet Union's decision to curtail its deliveries to former satellites.

Moscow will also demand payment for its oil in hard currency at world prices as of Jan. 1. It has provided its former satellites with oil at subsidized rates.

In Budapest, a scheduled meeting this weekend of finance ministers from Hungary, Czechoslovakia and Poland to work out a joint stance on seeking new oil sources was unexpectedly canceled.

In Prague, Czechoslovak President Vaclav Havel called for an emergency weekend summit with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev because he said a one-third cutback in Soviet oil deliveries threatens the Czech economy.

The price to Poland of oil in the new contracts with Iran will be $33 to $35 a barrel - 80 percent more than it paid for Middle East oil before Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of oil-rich Kuwait and the Aug. 6 embargo of exports from the two Gulf nations.

Poland estimates it could lose up to $12 billion in the next five years as a result of the embargo, while Hungary says that besides oil losses, a $100 million Kuwaiti investment project had to be scrapped.

Swiecicki said he discussed the possibility with Iranian officials of paying with Polish machines and equipment. He said he did not discuss the possible sale of arms but did not exclude it.

''During talks with the Iranian side we were assured about the possibility of buying next year between 2.5 and 3 million tons of oil,'' Swiecicki told the Polish news agency PAP.

The higher oil prices are a critical economic blow, since Poland and other former East Bloc states are going through the painful process of adjusting their centrally planned economies for the rigors of the open market.

Moscow's former allies are concerned the Soviets might divert supplies that had traditionally gone to Eastern Europe to Western customers with ready hard cash.

Talks between Polish and Soviet officials in Moscow last month over the oil question yielded no results.

''Currently we are not able to say how much oil we will be able to import to Poland for hard currency next year,'' said Marian Malecki, managing director of the Polish foreign trade enterprise Ciech. ''It is also unclear whether the Soviet Union will meet this year's contracts.''

Moscow is already behind in its 1990 oil deliveries to Poland by 2.7 million tons. Polish officials say there is little hope of making up those shortfalls.

Amid panic buying at Prague gas stations, Czechoslovak Prime Minister Marian Calfa met with the Soviet ambassador to tell him Czechoslovakia is no longer receiving from Moscow even the minimum daily supply of 33, 000 tons of oil necessary to keep oil-processing plants in operation.

The Soviet Union now supplies 20,000 tons to 22,000 tons of oil daily and sometimes even less.

''There are certain hints that the situation might even worsen, which could bring about extraordinarily dangerous economic consequences on an international scale,'' the Czechoslovak news agency CTK said.

(OCT. 4) UPI - Japanese Premier Toshiki Kaifu met Thursday with Iraqi Deputy Premier Taha Yassin Ramadan in Amman, Jordan, to appeal for Iraq to leave Kuwait, but no breakthrough was reported.

Also a Soviet envoy flew to Baghdad to seek the release of thousands of Soviets from Iraq.

Before leaving for Turkey, Kaifu met with Jordan's King Hussein and told him that Japan would reward Jordan for adhering to U.N. sanctions against Iraq with a loan of $100 million and an additional $150 million in aid.

A spokesman for Kaifu said the premier renewed the U.N. demand that Iraq withdraw from Kuwait, restore the former government and free all foreign hostages. He said Kaifu made it clear that only when those conditions were met could ''fruitful negotiations for peace follow.''

During the meeting, Ramadan reiterated Baghdad's position on the crisis, acknowledged ''differences'' between the two sides and ''expressed appreciation to continue the dialogue with Japan,'' a Kaifu spokesman said.

Ramadan told Kaifu that Iraq rejects any dialogue to resolve the 2- month-old Persian Gulf crisis while the U.S.-led multinational force remains in the region, said a spokesman for the Jordanian Royal Court.

''The military escalation in the region and the speed with which the U.N. Security Council blocked the road for a peaceful solution to the gulf crisis raises the war atmosphere,'' the Jordanian spokesman quoted Ramadan as saying.

Ramadan made no offer to obey U.N. resolutions and withdraw from Kuwait, stating simply that ''war would be a catastrophe for humanity.''

Ramadan expressed interest in French President Francois Mitterrand's proposal last week for Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait, the restoration of an elected Kuwaiti government and an international peace conference to solve all conflicts in the Middle East.

Mitterrand left the Rea Sea port of Jeddah Thursday after concluding talks with Saudi King Fahd and other senior officials. Riyadh Radio reported that Mitterrand, who spent the night on a French warship off the United Arab Emirates coast for fear of terrorist attack, met at sea earlier Thursday with French military commanders.

Mitterrand then went to Jeddah for talks with Fahd. The French president was scheduled to inspect the Foreign Legion and other French troops stationed in Saudi Arabia as part of the multinational response to Iraq's Aug. 2 takeover of Kuwait.

In Paris, nine French hostages arrived home from Amman after being released by Iraq. Baghdad has offered to release all 350 French hostages in Iraq and Kuwait if a senior French politician visits Iraq.

Also, two French and three British citizens being held in northern Kuwait managed to escape aboard an inflatable dinghy. The group dodged Iraqi naval patrols, mine fields and a choppy sea to arrive in Saudi Arabia.

Gorbachev's envoy, Yevgeny Primakov, arrived in Baghdad from Amman Thursday after talks in the Jordanian capital with King Hussein and Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat, Amman Radio and the official Tass news agency reported.

While Primakov was in Baghdad, Tass quoted Gorbachev as saying he was sure the United Nations would avert a war in the gulf.

Tass said Primakov met with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz but it was not immediately clear if the Soviet Mideast expert would also meet Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein.

Amman Radio said one of the aims of Primakov's visit to Baghdad was to secure the release from Iraqi custody of some 5,000 Soviet trade and industry representatives, as well as a smaller number of Soviet military experts, from Iraq.

In New York, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said Primakov is to ''arrange normal conditions for the withdrawal of Soviet citizens'' from Iraq. He said ''some problems and difficulties'' arose among the 5,000 Soviets, including 150 military personnel and several hundred civilian advisers to the Iraqi army.

In Egypt, security services continued their investigations of pro- Iraqi terror squads and among those arrested this week were followers of Abu Nidal, the world's most-wanted Palestinian terrorist.

In a speech to his nation, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak warned Egyptians against aiding Iraqi terrorists and said they risked dire consequences for such actions.

In other developments:

-In Rome, Foreign Minister Gianni De Michelis said Italy's two remaining diplomats in Kuwait will be forced to leave their embassy ''within the next few hours or days'' because they have run out of food and water and Iraqi troops have sealed it off.

-In New York, the Saudi foreign minister, Prince Saud Al-Faysal, and Shevardnadze met at the Soviet Embassy to discuss strengthening international efforts to impose U.N. Security Council resolutions on the withdrawal of Iraqi forces from Kuwait.

-Australian Prime Minister Bob Hawke said in a Radio Australia broadcast aired in the Middle East that his government is prepared to help about 80 Australians detained in Kuwait and Iraq with cash and other aid.

-Iraqi bodybuilders have been banned from competing in the World Bodybuilding Championship in Kuala Lumpur Oct. 24-31. Iraq was earlier banned from the Asian Games in Beijing for its invasion of Kuwait.

BALTIMORE (OCT. 4) UPI - Despite its serious optical flaws, the Hubble Space Telescope has taken the clearest picture ever of mysterious Pluto and snapped a spectacular image of the ringed planet Saturn, astronomers announced Thursday.

The $1.5 billion telescope also has collected a variety of new images of galaxies, comets, stars and other celestial bodies that have provided tantalizing clues to such cosmological phenomena as enigmatic quasars and light-sapping black holes, scientists said.

Although none of the images has produced any major new discoveries, the work has elated astronomers, who earlier had expressed pessimism the flawed instrument would be capable of world-class science because of its inability to bring starlight to a sharp focus.

''The pictures, to me, already demonstrate an enormous potential for discovery with the space telescope as it is now,'' said Riccardo Giacconi, director of the Space Telescope Science Institute, which is in charge of doing research with the telescope.

''These observations give us a very good indication of the type of science we can carry out. We will do world-class science for years to come,'' he said at the first workshop held for reporters to discuss the telescope since its defect was discovered in April.

Previous images taken from Earth show Pluto, the ninth planet from the sun, and its moon, Charon, as overlapping blobs of light. The Hubble image shows two clearly distinct spheres.

Unlike other planets in Earth's solar system, the frigid, distant Pluto, located about 3.6 billion miles from the sun, has never been visited by any robot probes.

Previous pictures of Saturn taken by passing spacecraft have been more spectacular, but the Hubble image released Thursday is easily the best shot ever taken from the vicinity of Earth.

The image is so encouraging, Giaconni said he would grant excited astronomers' request to take more pictures of Saturn to study a rare white mark visible on its surface.

''It's the old 'a picture's worth 10,000 words.' I was personally shocked it was that good. I couldn't believe it,'' said NASA astronomer Edward Weiler.

''After two months of reading about the broken Hubble and having your neighbors give you sympathy for working on the Hubble, seeing a picture like that sort of shocks you,'' he said.

The $1.5 billion telescope was expected to revolutionize astronomy by using highly advanced instruments to peer more deeply into the cosmos than ever before from high above Earth's atmosphere.

But about a month after the telescope was placed into orbit in April, NASA discovered one of the telescope's supposedly perfect mirrors was shaped slightly incorrectly, preventing the telescope from focusing starlight sharply.

The embarrassing blunder set off a storm of criticism of NASA that was fueled by a series of hydrogen leaks that have grounded the space shuttle fleet since April.

NASA has stressed the telescope can do valuable research until the defect is corrected when one of the telescope's cameras is replaced in 1993.

While astronomers repeatedly stressed that the new images are inferior to what they had hoped to get from Hubble, the scientists said the pictures showed the telescope could still had unprecedented power and many images could be improved through computer processing.

In addition to the pictures of Pluto and Saturn, astronomers released images of a section of a so-called ''globular cluster'' named M14 where scientists had expected to find a nova. The detailed Hubble image, however, failed to detect a nova.

#90277u1511 10/04/1990 ~United Press International
WASHINGTON (OCT. 4) UPI - The Bush administration began its sales campaign Wednesday for an agreement on reducing conventional forces in Europe by showing that the Soviets will have to destroy vastly more weapons than the Western powers.

President Bush, hailing the agreement, said, ''As Europe is transformed politically, we must also redraw the military map of the continent and lift some of the shadows and fear that we and our allies have lived with for nearly half a century.''

Assuming that NATO and what is left of the shattered Warsaw Pact approve the agreement negotiated over the past 20 months, which is regarded as a near-certainty, the treaty would result in the destruction of tens of thousands of weapons, mostly Soviet.

Some of those figures were confirmed officially by Secretary of State James Baker, who finished off the so-called CFE negotiations Tuesday in 5 1/2 hours of talks in New York with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

Baker gave reporters at the White House these details:

-Each side will be limited to 20,000 tanks in Euorpe, meaning the Soviet Union and its former allies will have to junk tens of thousands of them, a process that has already begun.

-Each side will have to reduce to 20,000 pieces of artillery, a move that also has begun.

-The Soviets and former allies will have to junk thousands of armored combat vehicles or armored personnel carriers to meet a new limit of 30, 000 for each side.

-Although each side will be limited to 2,000 helicopters, there is an unsettled issue about whether a troop-carrier helicopter will count the same as a helicopter gunship and, if not, how inspectors would make sure that rocketpods are not strapped on a troop-carrier, in effect transforming it into a gunship.

-Baker did not give figures for combat aircraft, but officials said the total number will be about 6,700 for each side, meaning some obsolete aircraft will be junked or sold off.

-In a complex but bitterly contested part of the agreement, the Soviet Union will be permitted to have a maximum of about 33.6 percent of the total weapons in any category located in Central Europe. The paragraph means the Soviets will not be able to build up in order to replace the East German, Czech or Hungarian forces that are eliminated.

Baker addressed only obliquely a conspicuous gap in the treaty - manpower.

In February, he and Shevardnadze agreed that both NATO and the Warsaw Pact would be permitted to have 195,000 troops each in the central part of Europe, with the United States permitted to have another 30,000 in Europe outside that central zone.

But since that agreement, the disintegration of the Warsaw Pact has accelerated and it is now clear that 195,000 is an unrealistically high figure for the number of troops the Soviets could put into action in Eastern Europe.

''It is clear,'' Baker said two months ago, ''events have outpaced the negotiations.''

Baker said Wednesday the number of troops will be dealt with in later negotiations, rather than delay the signing of the first phase, which will permit the heads of government of the 34 nations of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe to meet in Paris in mid-November.

It is expected the number of troops will be at least 40,000 below the 195,000 negotiated eight months ago.

Baker said the treaty was important, even if it simply confirmed the spontaneous disarmament that is taking place in the post-Cold War period. He pointed to the intrusive inspection procedures, which will mean hundreds of inspectors, from 22 nations, poking through all of Europe to make sure there is no unsuspected build-up.

BELGRADE, YUGOSLAVIA (OCT. 4) UPI - A member of Yugoslavia's collective presidency Thursday launched an initiative to avert possible civil war, but anti-Serbian sentiments ran high at an emergency Croatian Assembly meeting.

As assembly members heatedly debated growing unrest in Serbian- dominated towns in Croatia, a Croatian deputy hurled a brief case at a Serbian colleague. Members of the ruling Croatian Democratic Union members reiterated charges that Serbia's Communist regime is stirring up Croatia's 600,000 minority Serbs.

''The Socialist Party of Serbia and its leader, Slobodan Milosevic, are the strategists of the unrest in Croatia,'' declared the assembly vice president, Vladimir Seks, who accused Yugoslav President Borisav Jovic, the Serbian representative and chairman of the eight-man federal presidency, of complicity.

Stipe Mesic, shortly to be sworn in as the Croatian member of the presidency, said Milosevic was whipping up Serbian nationalism in order to capture votes in the Dec. 9 multi-party elections for Serbia's Assembly, the first since 1945.

Elsewhere in the Croatian capital of Zagreb, 250 miles west of Belgrade, Vasil Tupurkovski, the Macedonian member of the presidency, opened a new political initiative with talks with Croatian President Franjo Tudjman and other senior officials.

Tupurkovski was appointed by the presidency to assess the situation in Croatia and prepare propoals for resolving Serbian-Croatian tensions that many Yugoslav and foreign observers fear might lead to civil war.

After meeting with municipal officials in Petrinja, a town 30 miles southwest of Zagreb that was the first of five Serbian-dominated towns torn by clashes between Croatian police and Serbs, Tupurkovski said he found ''no differences'' between Serbian and Croatian officials in the town.

''I am a slightly bigger optimist now than I was before coming to Petrinja,'' he said.

The initiative was prompted by three days of clashes between Serbs and police in five Serbian-dominated towns in Croatia, home to most of Yugoslavia's 4.6 million Roman Catholic Croats. The unrest triggered calls for retaliation and anti-Croatian protests in Serbia, where the bulk of the 8.5 million-strong Orthodox Serbian majority resides.

The riots erupted Friday after Croatian police moved to transfer to central armories police reservist weapons, unleashing pent-up fears among Serbs of Tudjman's nationalist regime that have been fanned for months by Serbian politicians, particularly Serbia's ruling Communists.

Serbs have also been alarmed by provocative anti-Serbian rhetoric by Tudjman's party, which is advocating the conversion of the loose Yugoslav federation of six republics of 23 million people into a confederation of independent states.

The confederation plan is supported by other minorities, who fear domination by majority Serbs because of the breakdown earlier this year of strong national Communist rule. Serbia's Communists advocate a federal system, in the absense of which they plan to claim Serbian areas now outside their borders.

The emergency Croatian Assembly session approved an agenda that included a proposal to impress on the federal government the need for an agreement on the future shape of Yugoslavia.

The legislature defeated militant proposals to declare Croatian independence and give the republic's laws primacy over statutes of the federal government, whose power has been dwindling because of the demise of the national Communist Party.

Meanwhile, the area around the Serbian-dominated town of Knin, 310 miles southwest of Belgrade, remained cut off from the rest of Croatia for a fourth day by road and rail blockades manned by armed Serbian vigilantes.

The barricades were erected after the Knin-based Serbian National Council declared autonomy for Croatia's Serbs because of alleged ''state terror'' and said it was assuming political control of Serbian enclaves.

The official Yugoslav news agency, Tanjug, reported that a pastry shop in Knin owned by an ethnic Albanian was damaged overnight by explosives in a fresh outburst of ethnic hatred. There were no injuries in the blast.

Serbs have been in dispute for years with ethnic Albanians over the future of Serbia's province of Kosovo. Serbs, of whom there are 200,000 in Kosovo, regard the province as the ''cradle'' of their Orthodox religion and culture. The 1.7 million-strong Albanian majority claims discrimination by Serbia.

AMMAN, Jordan (OCT. 4) UPI - Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu left for Turkey on Thursday after granting Jordan $100 million in an immediate emergency loan to alleviate its losses from the U.N.-imposed sanctions on Iraq Jordan's main trading partner.

Kaifu spokesman Shigeo Takenaka told reporters that after discussions with Jordanian Prime Minister Mudar Badran, Kaifu announced that Japan would grant Jordan $100 million in loans with a 1 percent interest rate to be repayed after 30 years.

He added that Jordan would also receive $150 million in soft loans for trade and industry purposes. This amount was part of a $1.4 billion allocation Japan had for Egypt, Jordan and Turkey - the three countries considered to be the hardest financially hit from the sanctions imposed on Iraq.

Egypt was granted $400 million during Kaifu's visit to Cairo before his arrival in Amman on Wednesday.

The Japanese spokesman said that his country was considering to provide Jordan with more aid, ''considering the effect on Jordan from sanctions on Iraq and in cooperation with other donor countries.''

There was some confusion over whether the $150 million was part of a deal Japan made with the small economically troubled kingdom in 1988 in which Jordan was granted $300 million. Japan still owed Jordan $90 million, which, according to a Japanese expert accompanying Kaifu, was part of the $150 million. This could not be confirmed, but if true, Japan would be granting Jordan only $60 million out of the allocated $1.4 billion for the three ''frontline'' countries with the gulf.

Kaifu's spokesman said that the conditions for the soft loans were not yet set but stressed that Jordan would receive this amount ''if Jordan complied with the embargo on Iraq.''

Jordan had repeatedly said it complied with a U.N. Security Council resolution that imposed trade sanctions on Iraq and stands to lose 50 percent of its national income as a result of this compliance.

The kingdom's national debt lies at $8.2 billion and is currently facing thousands of refugees pouring in from Kuwait and Iraq. It has appealed for international help to shoulder the financing of the refugees and their repatriation.

Japan said it contributed $22 million to the United Nations for the tens of thousands of refugees who stay in camps in Jordan until they are repatriated.

Kaifu was in Jordan as part of a five-state Middle East tour that also took him to Egypt, and in addition to Turkey, will visit Saudi Arabia and Oman.

Kaifu met with Jordan's King Hussein and the crown prince, but no details were available on their meeting.

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (OCT. 4) UPI - A just-condemned killer wants his execution by lethal injection scheduled as soon as possible, saying he does not want to languish on death row.

''Let's get it over with,'' Zane Hill told the Asheville Citizen, referring to the death penalty sentence he received Monday for killing his son.

During an interview at the Buncombe County Jail, the father of three said he is ready to die for murdering his second oldest son, Randy Hill, on Jan. 10.

''I don't think they should have given (the death sentence) to me to start with, but since they did, I'd just as soon get it over with,'' he said.

''I'm 54 years old and I don't want sit on death row for 20 years,'' he said.

Hill's sentence is subject to automatic review by the state Supreme Court. The court could decide to reduce Hill's sentence to life in prison, state officials said Thursday.

Joan Byers, an assistant state attorney general, said the review is required by law and nobody, not even Hill, can waive it.

''It could take one to three years for his first appeal,'' Byers said.

CHICAGO (OCT. 4) UPI - The Chicago Bulls Thursday signed unrestricted free agent Cliff Levingston to a two-year contract, adding some much-needed veteran bench help to their roster.

Levingston, a 6-foot-8, 220-pound forward entering his ninth NBA season, reportedly agreed to a complex deal that will pay him about $2.1 million, although only $1.1 million is guaranteed.

''We are happy to have Cliff in the fold,'' said Bulls vice president of basketball operations Jerry Krause, who negotiated with Levingston's agent for much of the summer. ''He gives our club another veteran seasoned playoff performer. He also adds solid defense, rebounding and speed at two positions.''

Levingston, 29, averaged 6.9 points and 4.3 rebounds last season with the Atlanta Hawks, for whom he played the past eight seasons. He has averaged 8.3 points and 6.1 rebounds for his career.

The Bulls, defeated in the Eastern Conference finals each of the last two years by the Detroit Pistons, added guard Dennis Hopson earlier to spell Michael Jordan. They were badly in need of a quality reserve player to back up small forward Scottie Pippen. Levingston, who fits right in with the Bulls' transition game, also can sub for power forward Horace Grant.

Levingston reportedly had been offered $4 million over four years by Atlanta, but he chose to test the free-agent market, which proved costly. The Hawks finally surrendered their rights to Levingston when they signed rookie Rumeal Robinson and had no room under their salary cap to deal with Levingston.

Levingston is expected to be in uniform Friday when the Bulls open training camp at the Deerfield Multiplex.

The Bulls made room for Levingston when they traded former first- round draft pick Jeff Sanders Tuesday to the Miami Heat.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 4) UPI - The Bush administration's proposed $7.3 billion arms sale to Saudi Arabia encountered sustained criticism at a Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing Thursday, but the panel's chairman said he knew of no plans to block the deal.

Committee members said the sale could erode Israel's ''qualitative edge'' in Middle East weaponry and would not eliminate the need for U.S. troops to defend the Saudis against an Iraqi or Iranian attack.

Administration officials, repeating arguments they made Wednesday at a House hearing, agreed that Saudi Arabia would not be able to defend itself even if it buys the $7.3 billion in tanks and other high-tech U.S. weapons.

But Reginald Bartholomew, undersecretary of state for international security affairs, said the arms would enable the Saudis to perform a ''blocking function'' - slowing down an invading army until U.S. troops could arrive.

The administration originally planned to sell some $21 billion in weapons to Saudi Arabia. But following congressional criticism of the deal, it decided to sell $7.3 billion of arms now and the rest next year.

Congress was notified of the sale Sept. 27 and has 30 days from then to block all or parts of the deal. Despite the controversy over the package, Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., chairman of the comittee, said he was ''not aware'' of plans by senators to block any elements of the sale.

Congressional sources said it was more likely that any effort to block sales to Saudi Arabia would come during the second phase of the deal, expected to be announced in January.

During the hearing, Pell released a letter that he and 13 other senators sent to President Bush before the sale was announced asking him to postpone sales of weapons that could not be delivered in the ''near future'' for possible use against Iraq, which invaded Kuwait Aug. 2.

But included in the current package are 150 M-1A2 tanks that could not be delivered to Saudi Arabia until 1993 - an issue that prompted criticism in Senate hearing as it had the day before in the House.

''I am concerned that in the rush to move this package forward we are creating an irreparable shift in the balance of forces in the region,'' said Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who has proposed leasing instead of selling arms to the Saudis. ''Let us not forget that Saudi Arabia is still in a state of declared war with Israel.''

WASHINGTON (OCT. 4) UPI - House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., said Thursday President Bush will let the Democratic-controlled Congress make unspecified changes in the bipartisan budget agreement in hopes of winning enough votes for congressional approval.

As a result of the Foley-Bush luncheon and the assurances it produced, Democrats decided to have the showdown vote later Thurday on the controversial budget plan, House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif, said after a Democratic leadership meeting.

Leaders had earlier considered delaying the vote until Friday, fearful they still did not have enough votes to pass it.

Panetta said Bush's assurance to Democrats that Congress would have some leeway in changing parts of the budget plan helped convince previously opposed or undecided Democrats to support the package.

Asked late Thursday afternoon if there were enough Republican votes to ensure passage, administration budget director Richard Darman said ''not yet.''

During a private White House lunch with Bush, Foley discussed a Democratic concern about how much flexibility Congress will have in changing the controversial five-year, $500 billion deficit reduction plan in the implementation stage, called ''reconciliation.''
 --

That stage, with an Oct. 19 deadline, would follow a showdown House floor vote scheduled either for later Thursday or Friday. Senate action is expected by Friday because Congress faces a Friday deadline for passing the budget plan. A temporary government funding bill expires then.

Asked if during the luncheon he sought from Bush flexibility to make more changes than the president would give, Foley said, ''No, certainly not.''

''I'm just saying that the president agrees with the bipartisan (congressional) leadership that the committees of juridiction have the responsibility to report this legislation and in doing so they have some flexibility,'' Foley told reporters afterwards.

While he said this was not a new understanding with the White House, its restatement was apparently needed Thursday to help win reluctant Democratic votes.

''One of the things that we also agreed on is that from the inception of this agreement we always recognized that in framing the legisaltive language of the reconcilation bill that the legislative committees would have some flexibility to achieve similar savings by alternative policies,'' he said.

Foley said he hoped the presidential assurances of unspecified flexibility would help produce additonal Democratic votes for the package, which was greeted by strong opposition from both parties because of its steep tax increases, Medicare cuts and other controversial provisions.

The five-year plan includes $134 billion in new gasoline, cigarette, alcohol, airline and other taxes and fees, $67 billion in defense cuts over three years limiting domestic spending increases to the rate of inflation, a $60 billion cut in Medicare and new tax breaks for investing in small companies.

Failure to adopt the deficit cutting package by Friday, and to pass separate implementing legislation by Oct. 19, would trigger up to $105.7 billion in automatic spending cuts required under the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law.

Those cuts, split between defense and domestic programs, would devastate federal services from air traffic control to meat inspection and disease research.

Before Foley meeting with Bush, Democrats apparently did not have a majority of their 258 House members behind the plan. But Democratic leaders said they expected to have enough votes by the time the vote occurred.

Republicans also were said to be short of a majority of their 176 House members to back the plan. To help get that majority, 40-50 House members, mostly Republicans, went to the White House early Thursday to be lobbied personally by Bush.

Rep. Jerry Lewis, R-Calif., chairman of the House GOP Conference, said after that White Houe session that ''we're getting very close'' to a majority even though ''we are not there yet.''

A majority in each party in each house must vote to approve the plan to ensure passage. That will prevent one party from blaming the other for the politically painful parts of the agreement a month before November's congressional elections.

Democrats said their colleagues cheered when Foley pledged to talk to Bush about flexibility as he ended his remarks at the private party caucus.

Rep. Dennis Eckart, D-Ohio, said the two biggest Democratic concerns about the package are the proposed $60 billion cut in Medicare over five years and the new two-week waiting period for unemployment benefits to begin, instead of the current one-week wait.

Other Democrats are concerned about the tax equity issue because they feel the wealthiest Americans got off too cheaply, not having to pay their fair share of deficit reduction and getting a tax break for investments in small businesses to boot.

''What the (Democratic) caucus is trying to tell the leadership and the president is that the president's got to move (from) protecting the wealthiest Americans'' from paying their share toward deficit reduction, Rep. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn., said in explaining why Democrats have been reluctant to back the budget plan.

''We're not going to cut $60 billion out of Medicare,'' Downey said. ''It's not going to happen. ... There are few things clearer in life.''

BALTIMORE (OCT. 4) UPI - Maryland's environment department has filed a lawsuit seeking the largest civil penalty in its history against Bethlehem Steel for alleged continued violation of air pollution laws, state officials said Thursday.

Officials said the suit filed in Baltimore County Circuit Court seeks more than $1 million in penalties for 107 alleged air pollution violations at the company's Sparrows Point plant.

The agency also is seeking $91,500 in administrative penalties for alleged failure to meet deadlines established in an amended 1989 consent order between Bethlehem Steel and the department.

''Since July 1988, (the department) has collected $1.2 million in penalties from Bethlehem Steel for numerous violations of Maryland's air pollution law '' said Environment Secretary Martin Walsh Jr.

''Since the amended consent order was signed, we have sought the maximum administrative penalty of $1,000 for each violation. To our disappointment, (the alleged violations) have continued,'' he said. ''For that reason, we have chosen to seek the maximum civil penalty of $10,000'' for each violation.

Walsh said the allegations in the suit concerned emissions from coke ovens, coke oven doors and the Basic Oxygen Furnace shop between April and June 1990.

Other alleged violations during the pushing of hot coke from coke ovens date back to October 1989, he said.

Bethlehem Steel spokesman Ted Baldwin said the company has not had a chance yet to review the state's allegations.

But Baldwin said the company currently is implementing a $92 million capital investment program to improve environmental controls, particularly at coke ovens.

The improvements should be completed in the next two or three years, he said.

The department and Bethlehem Steel signed a consent order in October 1987 and amended it in June 1989. The agreement detailed major capital projects designed to control emissions and established interim emission standards until the new controls were in place.

''The 1989 amended consent order reaffirmed Bethlehem Steel's commitment to cleaning up the Sparrows Point operation,'' Walsh said. ''That agreement was a milestone, but it does not free the company from its obligation to comply with Maryland's air pollution requirements and specific standards laid out in the consent order.''

(OCT. 4) UPI - The House is to vote this afternoon on the federal budget compromise, but House Speaker Thomas Foley says the vote might be delayed until tomorrow. Earlier today, Foley told the House Democratic caucus that he would talk to the president about changing the package. It has drawn opposition from both sides of the aisle. .

Motorists leaned on their horns in front of the White House today in a shrill sign of protest against the proposed budget, which carries 134- BILLION dollars in new taxes. Four young men in business suits held up placards reading ''honk if you hate taxes''... and motorists responded with a chorus of blaring blasts. One member of a conservative group calling itself Americans Against Tax Hikes yelled- ''Make George Bush read your lips- blow your horn.''

The costs of city services are rising across the country because of the Persian Gulf crisis. The U-S Conference of Mayors says a study of 50 cities found that the cost of fuel needed to run police cars, fire trucks and other vehicles jumped more than 30 percent in August. In some cities, the hike was higher.

Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu met for more than 90 minutes today with a high-level Iraqi official in Amman , Jordan. A spokesman says Kaifu repeated the U-N demand that Iraq withdraw from Kuwait... restore the emirate's former government... and free all foreign hostages.

Two weeks ago, the U-S Conference of Mayors criticized the Bush administration for NOT getting enough anti-drug money to the street level. Today, the administration awarded 42-Million dollars to 95 communities to help prevent drug abuse. The grants go to community coalitions in 36 states and the District of Columbia.

The new all-German parliament met for the first time today... following yesterday's re-unification of the two Germanys. The 663 deputies included 144 newcomers from the former East Germany. They used the historic Reichstag parliament building in Berlin for the first time since 1933.

(OCT. 4) UPI - More violence in Lebanon. Security sources say rival Palestinian factions clashed today in a refugee camp in southern Lebanon, wounding three gunmen. The fighting was between guerrillas of the Al Fatah movement headed by P-L-O chief Yasser Arafat, and gunmen of the Palestinian Communist Party.

An explosion ripped through an apartment building on the outskirts of Paris at dawn, collapsing the top three floors and burying at least 40 people under the rubble. Firefighters say at least one person was killed. There was NO immediate indication of the cause of the blast.

In Sofia, the capital of Bulgaria, several hundred on- lookers cheered as a helicopter removed a giant red star from the former Communist Party building today. (OCT. 4) UPI - A study released Thursday by a consortium of public interest groups lists New York as the most responsible user of energy in the United States, while Texas is the worst.

The study said if the states which are most wasteful of energy merely brought their consumption rates to the national average, the country as a whole would use 12 percent less energy than it does now.

Public Citizen, a consortium of five watchdog groups, said the federal government's failure to promote efficiency and develop alternative energy sources leaves those actions up to the states.

''By default, the states must take the lead in implementing sound energy policies,'' said Ken Bossong, director of Public Citizen's Critical Mass Energy Project.

The study calculated the individual states' per capita energy consumption and petroleum consumption, as well as the percentage of each state's consumption of renewable energy resources.

New York, Arizona, Vermont, California and Colorado, respectively, were listed as the most responsible users of energy.

By region, the Northeast had the lowest total energy consumption despite its long winter heating season.

Meanwhile, Texas, Wyoming, Alaska, Kansas and Louisiana were considered the most wasteful states in the union.

Texas uses far more energy and petroleum than any other state, the study said. In fact, even though it has only 42 percent of the population of California - the second most energy-consuming state - Texas used 37 percent more energy and 28 percent more petroleum.

In all, Texas accounts for 12 percent of all the energy consumed in the United States.

Per capita, Alaskans use the most energy, while New Yorkers use the least, according to the study.

''Responsible energy planning is more a factor in energy use than whether a state is located in a cold climate or is sparsely populated,'' said Jonathan Becker, primary author of the study.

LOS ANGELES (OCT. 4) UPI - Single-family home sales in California, in the doldrums for more than a year, are expected to worsen through next year, dropping another 14.9 percent a trade group predicted Thursday.

''California's housing market in 1991 will be affected by a slowing state economy and a continuation of this year's pessimistic market psychology,'' said Leslie Appleton-Young, vice president for research and economics for the 140,000-member California Association of Realtors.

The forecast by the association, which represents almost a fifth of the nation's realtors, comes as the most populous U.S. state's housing market remains mired in a year-long slump after going through a two-year boom that ended early last year. Sales of single-family detached houses in 1990 are expected to be off 12.8 percent from 1989's total.

While sales of existing single-family detached houses in the state totaled 538,700 in 1989, sales are expected to ease to 470,000 this year and to 400,000 units next year, the association said. If this forecast is accurate, the market would decline 14.9 percent in 1991 from 1990.

''We are going to have an environment in which people are waiting and seeing what happens to the economy and what happens to the housing industry,'' Appleton-Young said at the close of the association's three- day annual meeting in Los Angeles.

Most of the state's downturn will continue to come in urban coastal areas, such as San Francisco in the north and Los Angeles and Orange County in the south, where prices jumped by as much as 25 percent and 30 percent in 1988 at the peak of a buying frenzy. Many potential buyers were forced out of the market in those areas.

''The urgency factor that was driving those markets reached an affordability threshold,'' Appleton-Young said.

But sales activity will continue to be brisk in lower-priced inland areas like Sacramento, Riverside-San Bernardino, Fresno, Modesto and Bakersfield. During the first half of this year, sales activity in the inland areas represented a third of all California sales, compared to a quarter a year ago.

The affordability problem will keep buyer interest in smaller homes and condominiums strong, the group said. Condominium sales will post a slight 5 percent decline next year.

''Condos represent an attractive alternative for first-time buyers,' ''Appleton-Young said. ''That market has come back strongly from the ''said. ''That ma

Despite flagging sales, California housing will not suffer the deep declines in prices that hit such markets as New England and Texas in recent years. The group said the median price for a single-family detached house in 1991 will be unchanged from the actual 1989 price and the projected 1990 price - $195,600.

''The predictions of a 20 or 30 percent fall in California prices is just not going to happen,'' Appleton-Young said. ''I think it will be rare to find individuals in California who would say that they had to sell their home for less than they paid for it.''

The group predicted that a recession, both at the national and the state level will be short-lived and that economic conditions should begin to rebound by mid-1991.

''The outlook is a little bit bleak, but this recession will be a shallow one '' Appleton-Young said. ''This will not be a repeat of 1981- 82.''

California's economy and its housing market will perform better than the nation as a whole, largely because of growth in population and jobs, Appleton-Young said.

Further, she said, the state's housing market is not in danger of becomingoverbuilt because of both the scarcity of available land and tightening restrictions on development.

''Demand for housing will continue to outstrip supply,'' Appleton- Young said.

SANTA MONICA, CA (OCT. 4) UPI - Christian Brando's lawyer raised questions Thursday about the mental competency and credibility of his client's half sister, saying she has given a series of conflicting statements about the slaying of her lover.

The attorney, Robert Shapiro, made his comments during and after a Superior Court hearing at which Christian Brando's murder trial, over the objections of the defense, was tentatively delayed from next Tuesday until Nov. 5. A firm, new trial date will be set next Thursday.

Christian is charged with shooting to death Dag Drollet, 26, the lover of Cheyenne Brando, 20, in the Hollywood Hills estate of their father, actor Marlon Brando, on May 16.

Christian, 32, told police that the shooting was an accident, but Cheyenne Brando told investigators in June that her half brother had premeditated the slaying.

Prosecutors have said that Marlon Brando then arranged for Cheyenne to fly to Tahiti, where she shares a dual citizenship with the U.S., to avoid testifying against Christian. Once in Tahiti, she gave birth to a boy fathered by Drollet.

Christian's trial was delayed by Superior Court Judge Robert Thomas to give prosecutors additional time to try and subpoena Cheyenne to return to California to testify against her half brother. Prosecutors consider her testimony crucial to obtaining a first-degree murder conviction.

But Shapiro on Thursday attacked Cheyenne's credibility as a witness, saying in court that ''she has given five conflicting statements'' about Drollet's slaying.

Shapiro said that in one of the statements, Cheyenne indicated that ''somebody else is a motivating factor'' in the slaying, a notion the lawyer said was ''ludicrous.'' He would not elaborate.

Outside court, Shapiro told reporters that even if Cheyenne does return to testify, he will challenge her mental competency to do so.

''She is suffering from severe emotional and mental problems and her competency as a witness is questionable,'' he said. ''She is heavily sedated, unable to travel and unable to testify.''

After Cheyenne returned to Tahiti, authorities there - spurred on by Dag Drollet's father, Jacques, a powerful political figure in Tahiti - began an investigation of her alleged role in Drollet's slaying.

Los Angeles prosecutors do not consider Cheyenne, who has reportedly been incarcerated in a mental hospital in Tahiti, a suspect.

Deputy District Attorney Steven Barshop told the judge that according to a transcript of a court proceeding in Tahiti, Cheyenne has indicated that she is willing to testify at her half brother's trial.

Prosecutors last month requested that a federal judge ask French Polynesian authorities to subpeona Cheyenne in Tahiti, but were turned down. They are continuing their efforts in state court.

Police have said Cheyenne told them Christian had spoken on numerous occasions of killing Drollet and that, on the evening of the slaying, he had picked up the alleged murder weapon at his girlfriend's residence.

''She stated that the shooting was not an accident like everyone was trying to make it out to be,'' police said in court documents. ''Cheyenne stated, 'It's a murder, in case you don't know it.'''

Prosecutors contend that Christian premeditated the slaying, acting in response to Cheyenne's claims that Drollet had been physically abusing her.

If committed of first-degree murder, Christian could be sentenced to 25 years to life in state prison.

PARIS (OCT. 4) UPI - At least five persons were killed and eight others were injured Thursday when an explosion ripped through an apartment building on the outskirts of Paris, authorities said.

Among the injured, four people were in critical condition, including a 1-year-old baby and a 2-year-old girl, according to rescue workers.

The violent explosion set off a fire that proved difficult to extinguish because of precautions taken by firemen to prevent cement blocks from collapsing.

The cause of the explosion, which occurred at about 6 a.m. Paris time, remained a mystery Thursday night. Police and fire officials said the building was regularly inspected to insure it complied with gas and fire regulations.

But fire officials said they thought the blast had been caused by a gas leak.

''I thought a bomb had exploded,'' said a woman who lived in the building. ''My husband was unable to get out of bed and we heard a woman cry 'my daughter, my daughter.'''

CHICAGO (OCT. 4) UPI - Four banks that expressed willingness to provide $1.4 billion in financing for a $3.7 billion employee buyout of UAL Corp., could pull out unless syndication of the remaining $600 million in bank loans is significantly oversubscribed, analysts and banking sources said Thursday.

But a banker close to the buyout said the $2 billion loan syndication was already oversubscribed.

He said the employee group - United Employee Acquisition Corp. - pitched the deal to 26 banks and found about 20 interested in taking ''a piece of'' the $2 billion syndicate - including NMB Postbank Groep N.V. of the Netherlands, which agreed to provide $350 million.

Finalizing the $2 billion in bank financing for the $3.7 billion deal was mostly a matter of ''crossing the t's and dotting the i's,'' the source said.

That, he noted, includes convincing the four lead banks - First Chicago, Bankers Trust, Manufacturers Hanover and Security Pacific - that the syndication was successful enough to demonstrate a market for reselling some of the buyout loans should they choose to do so.

The four banks agreed to provide $1.4 billion in financing - $350 million each - for the buyout if UAEC efforts to syndicate the remainder of the financing were successful. But they reserved the right to pull out if they regarded the syndication less than a success.

''I think they wanted to see it (the syndication) oversubscribed and it is oversubscribed,'' he said. But he was unable to provide details on the extent of the oversubscription.

UAL stock dropped $6.50, to $104.25, in trading Thursday on the New York Stock Exchange. Volume was 482,000 shares.

Robert Decker, airline analyst for the investment rating firm Duff & Phelps, said he believed UAEC would have to show the syndication was ''substantially oversubscribed'' before winning any firm commitment from the four lead banks.

''I'd have to say I'll still be surprised if they put this deal together,'' Decker said.

Tom Leighty, an independent financial planner who follows the transportation industry, said UAEC's $2 billion syndication might need to draw as much as $3 billion in loan offers to persuade the lead banks to firm up their loan offers.

''The banks are going to want to be sure they can lay off some of those loans if they need to,'' he said.

Decker said bankers have a number of concerns - among them $500 million in outstanding UAL bonds that include a put option making them payable immediately in the event of a leveraged buyout.

He also said UAEC faces other financing problems - primarily the need to raise $750 million in capital by selling subordinated notes to UAL suppliers.

Boeing already has rejected UAEC's pitch.

''That leaves only Airbus and General Electric and I don't know how interested they are,'' he said.

The UAL board approved a $4.4 billion, $201-a-share buyout bid from UAEC last April and gave the employee group until Oct. 9 to finance the deal.

But Iraq's invasion of Kuwait - and the resulting higher fuel costs and lower earnings for airlines - made that deal unfinanceable.

UAEC now hopes to sell directors on the scaled-down bid, hoping they can win support if they have financing in place.

Under the new proposal, the employee group would acquire 80 percent of UAL for about $175 per share - $150 of it in cash, and the remainder in preferred stock and a ''stub.''

UAL Chairman Stephen Wolf is adamantly opposed to any scaling down of the $4.4 billion bid, saying restructuring and expansion are the best course for bolstering stock value.

Analysts, however, believe the board would go with the scaled-down employee buyout bid if UAEC can get rock solid commitments on financing before the Oct. 9 deadline.

''They'd probably rather take the $175 a share or maybe even $160 a share, if the financing is there, than face any possible consequences they might from stockholders if they turned it down,'' said Decker.

But, he said, if UAEC fails to lock up the financing before the deadline, the board likely will go with Wolf's plan for restructuring and expansion.

WARSAW, POLAND (OCT. 4) UPI - Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki announced Thursday he will run for president in the Nov. 25 election in a direct challenge to his former colleague, Solidarity leader Lech Walesa.

Walesa announced last month he would seek the post being vacated by Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, the former Communist Party chief. But Mazowiecki, his only serious rival, had shown a reluctance to directly challenge the Solidarity leader.

In a nationally televised statement on the evening news, Mazowiecki said he would run because he wanted to carry on the program that his Solidarity-led government has put into place in the year it has been in power.

''After much consideration, I have agreed to run if my candidacy is put forward,'' he said. ''One should go forward. One should follow the same road, not a different one.''

The Mazowiecki government launched a tough economic stabilization plan on Jan. 1 that checked rampant inflation and stabilized the Polish zloty, but at the cost of a more than 30 per cent drop in the standard of living and rising unemployment.

Walesa has criticized his former adviser for what he describes as foot-dragging on political reforms, including the ouster of Communist bureaucrats from middle-management positions where he says they are hampering economic progress.

Mazowiecki, looking tired, indirectly referred to that criticism in defending his government's record by hinting more changes were in store.

''As regards a broader program, I will present it at a different time,'' he said.

Several other political leaders are also expected to enter the race to choose the first popularly elected president in Polish history.

Jaruzelski, whom most Poles remember as the man who imposed martial law in 1981 to crush Solidarity, agreed to step down because of the changing political climate although his term runs until 1994.

His presidency was the result of a round table agreement reached between the then-ruling Communist Party and Solidarity last year which also provided limited participation of Solidarity candidates in parliamentary elections. Solidarity's ovewhelming victory in the races where its candidates could run swept it into power in a coalition government last fall.

Thus, Poland, which led the independence movement that ended up toppling communist regimes throughout the region in 1989, this year became the only remaining country without fully free elections.

To remedy that, Parliament last week passed constitutional amendments providing for the new presidential election and for new parliamentary election scheduled for next spring.

Mazowiecki is supported by a group of intellectuals and workers who have formed a political party called Democratic Action, while Walesa is backed by a group called Center Alliance. The two groups are the primary factions in the now-divided Solidarity movement.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 5) UPI - The dose of aspirin needed to reduce the risk of heart attack may be less than previously thought, perhaps as low as one-quarter of an aspirin per day, Swedish researchers reported Thursday.

The study followed 769 Swedish men with coronary artery disease who had suffered a heart attack or had severe, progressive chest pains. It found those who received the equivalent of one-quarter of an aspirin per day had 50 percent fewer heart attacks after three months than men who received phony pills.

In recent years, several much-publicized studies have found taking one-half an aspirin every day can cut the risk of heart attack. However, the researchers from Sweden's Linkoping University said their work is the first to show even lower doses can be beneficial.

''From previous studies, it is known that the side-effects and compliance with aspirin are dose-related. We found that aspirin 75 milligrams (one-quarter of a regular-strength adult aspirin) per day had few side-effects and most patients complied with treatment,'' Lars Wallentin and his colleagues wrote in their study published in the British medical journal Lancet.

Aspirin is thought to reduce the risk of heart attack and stroke by suppressing the formation of blood clots, which can clog narrowed arteries. However, the long-term use of the non-presecription drug can cause stomach irritation, bleeding of the stomach and ringing of the ears.

Researchers said 1.8 percent of aspirin-treated patients stopped taking the medication during the three-month study, compared with 1.3 percent of people taking phony pills.

In contrast to studies of higher aspirin doses, researchers said it appeared that it took at least two days for the protective benefits of low-dose aspirin to kick in. That finding prompted them to suggest patients might be given a higher, ''loading dose'' of aspirin for the first few days, and then switched to the lower dose regimen.

(OCT. 4) UPI - U.S. crude oil prices, led by a late selloff of gasoline, skidded downward in late trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange Thursday after being up earlier in the day.

Crude was supported earlier as markets anticipated an Iraqi U.N. speech would not match the conciliatory tone of President Bush's address earlier this week.

Heavy German buying of heating oil in Europe, buttressed by a strengthening German mark, also was giving support to the product markets, analysts said.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the U.S. benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for November delivery ended the day 39 cents below Wednesday's close at $36.93 a barrel after trading as high as $38.25 and as low as $36.30 a barrel.

''A late selloff of gasoline pulled crude down 30-50 cents in the last 15 minutes of trading,'' said Kirk Kinnear of the Phibro Division of Salomon Brothers in Greenwich, Conn.

On the Merc, unleaded gasoline for November delivery fell 2.28 cents to 90.86 cents a gallon after trading as high as 94.90 cents a gallon.

Mary Haskins of PaineWebber Inc., New York, saw the crude decline ''as a little bit of a technical pullback from yesterday's rally.'' WTI rose $3.14 a barrel on the Merc Wednesday.

Iraq's response to Bush's speech was expected in a U.N. speech Thursday night.

Initially, traders had expected the speech to be given by Iraq's Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz and was therefore seen as a major response to Bush's leaving open a way toward a peaceful settlement of the Persian Gulf crisis.

''Once it was clarified that Aziz was not coming, buyers started coming in again,'' said Nauman Barakat, vice president and senior energy trader at Merrill Lynch Futures Inc. in New York.

Peter Beutel of Pegasus Econometrics Group, of Hoboken, N.J., agreed the switch was influencing the market.

Aziz was scheduled to give the speech, but Thursday morning word was passed he would be replaced by Iraq's U.N. ambassador, the analyst said.

Barakat said the market also was supported by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's hard-line ''pep talk'' to Iraqi troops in Kuwait Wednesday.

But Peter Gignoux of Shearson Lehman Hutton's London office characterized the Gulf situation Thursday as ''a lot of diplomatic 'to- ing and fro-ing.' I'm not sure what you make of it.''

On the Merc, November-delivery home heating oil ended the day up 0.51 cents to 99.92 cents a gallon after being up as much as 2.93 cents in earlier trading.

The products were supported by heavy German buying of gasoil, or European heating oil, in Europe, Gignoux said. ''The strong mark has enabled them to buy more,'' he said.

In New York Thursday, the dollar fell to a record low versus the mark of 1.5330 marks.

As a result, gasoil had risen on London's International Petroleum Exchange to $332 a ton, or $1.06 a gallon, from Wednesday's $314 a ton.

Beutel also noted that last week there was ''an unseasonal draw on U.S.

heating oil stocks'' at a time of year when supplies are normally building for the winter.

The American Petroleum Institute reported U.S. heating oil supplies last week dropped 1.7 million barrels to 134.8 million barrels, still one of the highest levels in the last five years.

On the European spot market, where crude is bought and sold for cash, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent, which has led the surge in oil prices was down 35 cents to $37.50 a barrel after being up 70 cents at midday.

The United Arab Emirates' Dubai Light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East - lost $1 to $31.90 a barrel after being quoted midday $33.24 a barrel.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, prompt-delivery WTI fell 40 cents to $36.90 a barrel.

In Cairo, Egypt slashed the price of its crude $4 to $35 a barrel to match what it termed current developments on world markets.

In Tokyo, a leading Japanese economist forecast that once peace returns to the Middle East crude prices would dip back to their early- summer level below $20 a barrel before settling around $25 a barrel.

LEXINGTON, TN (OCT. 4) UPI - A Tennessee state senator who is a frequent critic of truckers was charged with aggravated assault for allegedly firing a gun at a truck driver who tried to slow him down on the interstate, authorities said Thursday.

State Sen. John Ford, D-Memphis, apparently became angry during a traffic jam Tuesday on Interstate 40 near the exit to Lexington, about 90 miles east of Memphis, Henderson County Sheriff Charles Woods said.

Nelson Kieffer, a truck driver from Dallas who filed the complaint, said he saw a brown Mercedes speeding along the interstate and heard reports on his CB radio that the Mercedes was forcing cars off the road. Truckers tried to slow the car down while trying to alert troopers on the radio, he said.

When that tactic failed, Kieffer pulled into the right lane to allow the car to pass.

''I moved over in the right lane and let him go on and he pulled up beside me and gave me the No. 1 sign and opened his sunroof, pulled a gun and took a shot at me,'' Kieffer said.

Kieffer, who was not hurt, copied down the number on the car's state Senate license plate, which later was identified as Ford's.

Ford, who has tried unsuccessfully to pass legislation prohibiting truckers from traveling in the left lane on interstates, denied the allegation.

''I don't know what you're talking about,'' Ford said. ''I'll tell you this, if they say that in a warrant I'm going to have them in court.''

The veteran lawmaker said he does not own a gun and said the charge against him ''is a figment of someone's imagination.

''It sounds like a bunch of rednecks playing games and trying to embarrass people with an election coming up,'' he said.

Ford is a candidate for re-election in November, but has no serious opposition.

Woods said he expects Ford to turn himself in after Ford's lawyer told the sheriff the senator would come to Lexington Friday.

Ford will be served with the arrest warrant at that time and will appear before a general sessions judge, Woods said.

Ford was involved in a high-speed interstate chase in 1980. A trooper who finally stopped the lawmaker said he was traveling over 100 mph near Dickson. The trooper said Ford was ''belligerent, arrogant and egotistical.'' Ford said he was trying to get to a ceremony at the governor's mansion and called the trooper a racist ''redneck.'' Ford was fined $25 for speeding.

A conviction on the felony carries a sentence of 3-6 years for a first offender. A felony conviction also would mean Ford, who has been in the General Assembly since 1975, would be prohibited from holding a state legislative seat.

Ford is a member of the politically powerful Ford family of Memphis. Ford's brother, Harold, is a Democratic congressman from Memphis. Another brother, James, serves on the Memphis city council.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (OCT. 4) UPI - President Vaclav Havel called for an emergency weekend summit with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and Soviet Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov to discuss a cutback in Soviet oil deliveries that threatens Czechoslovakia's economic recovery.

Finance ministers and their deputies from Hungary, Poland and Czechoslovakia are due to meet in Budapest this weekend to discuss channeling disposable oil supplies and forming a united front to bargain with the Soviet Union. But Czechoslovak Finance Minister Vaclav Klaus said Thursday that the meeting may not take place.

Czechoslovak newspapers reported Thursday that the country had only a two-day supply of crude oil, and Soviet deliveries were falling below the 30,000 tons daily needed to keep Czechoslovak refineries running.

Prime Minster Marian Calfa summoned Soviet Ambassador Boris Pankin to request an urgent meeting this weekend.

Economics Minister Valdimir Dlouhy, in an effort to cut fuel consumption, announced a complicated rationing scheme Thursday, giving drivers a minimal allotment of gasoline at current prices. He said the Soviets have been delivering only 12,000 tons of oil daily.

Jan Vrba, the Czech republic minister of industry, said the country has a 14-day supply of regular gasoline and a 21-day supply of high- octane fuel.

''There are indications this could drop even further and lead to extraordinarily dangerous consequences with broad international impact,'' Calfa's statement said.

Analysts and government officials say Soviet supplies are being cut back for several reasons: labor and mechanical problems in pumping Soviet crude, the rising price of world oil, and contracts with Comecon countries that guarantee oil deliveries against payment in soft Eastern European currencies and local goods.

Comecon is the old trade organization of socialist countries.

Czechoslovakia has minimal crude and refined petroleum reserves and depends on a continuous flow of oil from the Soviet Union.

Long gasoline lines were reported around Prague, as consumers braced for an expected rise in pump prices.

Klaus said he could not rule out ordering another round of increases in consumer prices before most prices are freed from constraints next January.

The sudden cutback in Soviet oil deliveries appears to have taken Czechoslovakia by complete surprise.

''This decision to ask for an emergency summit was done on the basis of the real development of supplies. Measuring devices told us the Soviet deliveries were falling,'' Klaus said, adding the Soviets had made no formal declaration of their decision to cut back deliveries.

Czechoslovakia is entirely dependent on heavy low-grade Soviet crude for its oil supplies, and a previous delivery shortfall last summer caused Czechoslovakia to raise gasoline prices at the pump to discourage fuel use.

Economists in Prague estimate that Czechoslovakia may need to find $2 billion to $3 billion to buy oil for next year.

Effective Jan. 1, 1991, Comecon will settle its debts in hard currency, and Czechoslovak officials say privately they fear the Soviets are holding out for more cash.

Czechoslovak Deputy Premier Vaclav Vales also met the Soviet ambassador Thursday, to discuss opening talks on property, economic and environemntal issues connected with the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Czechoslovakia.

MILWAUKEE (OCT. 4) UPI - The chairman of Wisconsin Electric Power Co. said Thursday the company took responsibility for an accident in which a 5-year-old boy suffered severe burns from a 4,800-volt electrical transformer.

''A computer search of our records today showed that a contractor working as a cable locator notified Wisconsin Electric in August that the padlock was missing from this specific transformer,'' said Richard Abdoo, company chairman and chief executive officer. ''It appears no followup action was taken.''

Matthew Brown, 5, of Franklin, Wis., was severely burned when he put his hands inside the unlocked transformer box while playing outside the Willow Glen apartment complex in Oak Creek on Tuesday.

He underwent surgery to amputate his left arm at the shoulder and to remove part of his stomach, where the electrical current exited his body. He was listed in critical but stable condition Thursday in the pediatric intensive care unit of Children's Hospital of Wisconsin in Wauwatosa.

''To Matthew Brown and his family, we offer our most heartfelt apologies, although they are inadequate,'' Abdoo said. ''We accept responsibility for our actions. We have already offered to underwrite Matthew's medical expenses.''

Abdoo said the transformer is an older design called a ''live-front'' transformer that has doors which normally are secured with a padlock. When the doors are opened, the exposed equipment remains energized, he said.

Abdoo said the company would either replace or refit its older transformers with additional safety and protection devices.

''We will commit every resource at our disposal to ensure that a tragedy such as this does not occur again,'' he said.

NEW YORK (OCT. 4) UPI - The dollar tumbled again Thursday in currency markets on the eve of the release of U.S. employment figures that could give the Federal Reserve yet another reason to guide short-term interest rates lower.

Currency traders said the New York market inherited a sharply weakened dollar from the Asian and European sessions. They said heavy demand for the Japanese yen dominated trading, keeping pressure on the dollar.

Many participants selling the dollar were betting Labor Department data to be issued Friday morning would show joblessness rising to 5.7 percent in September from August's 5.6 percent, as the U.S. economy veers into recession.

In New York, the dollar established another record low against the German mark closing at 1.5330 marks vs. 1.5415 Wednesday, the previous record. Before that, the lowest New York closing price was 1.5445 marks, set Aug. 23.

The dollar changed hands at 133.70 yen, off from 135.75. Traders said that was the lowest closing dollar-yen price seen in the New York market since April 1989.

Many players expected the Fed to move Friday to lower the federal funds interest rate, charged on reserve fund loans from one bank to another, to 7.75 percent from the current 8.0 percent.

Such expectations have been weakening the dollar for some time. But the Congress debating legislation to trim the U.S. budget deficit by $500 billion over the next five years, a rate cut seems all but assured. The Persian Gulf situation has apparently been pushed into the backround, at least for the time being.

Shearson Lehman Brothers currency analyst Lisa Finstrom said pressure on the dollar has been intensified by recession psychology.

''That's the key - this recessionary fear has gone wild,'' Finstrom said. ''They basically hit the dollar pretty hard this morning.''

The British pound surged to $1.9150 from $1.9020.

Other New York dollar rates: 1.2795 Swiss francs, down from 1.2825; 5.1350 French francs, off from 5.1690; and 1,148.50 Italian lire, down from 1,154.80.

In European markets, the dollar closed lower as Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan's positive comments on the budget agreement - facing a rocky course in Congress -continued to influence currency dealings. But traders said activity was thin in advance of the U.S. employment statistics.

''People might want to wait until U.S. unemployment figures come out to get a clearer view,'' said National Westminster Bank trader Geoff Earnshaw. He said lower U.S. interest rates were already factored into currency prices.

In London, the pound gained on the dollar to close at $1.9110 vs. $1.9005.

In Frankfurt, where there was a holiday Wednesday to mark German unification, the dollar plunged to 1.5335 marks vs. 1.5579 Tuesday. The dollar also fell in Zurich, to 1.2785 Swiss francs vs. 1.2850 Wednesday.

The dollar slipped in Paris, Brussels and Milan, to, respectively: 5.1365 French francs vs. 5.1980, 31.63 Belgian francs vs. 31.88, and 1, 149 Italian lire vs. 1162.15.

In Tokyo, the dollar skidded to its lowest close in 19 months, finishing at 135.90 yen compared with 136.65 Wednesday.

Gold moved up in Zurich, to $397 an ounce vs. $390.50, and in London, to $397 an ounce vs. $390.25.

But Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $393 an ounce, down from $394.25 Wednesday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled contract gold at $392.30 an ounce vs. $393.90.

Silver closed higher in Zurich at $4.75 an ounce vs. Wednesday's $4.70 but was lower in London at $4.70 an ounce vs. $4.71.

Republic closed cash silver at $4.69 an ounce, off from $4.71. Comex silver closed at $4.668 an ounce, off from $4.69.

NEW YORK (OCT. 4) UPI - Stocks closed mixed Thursday in light trading, but the Dow industrials rose sharply on optimism about the fate of the deficit-cutting plan for the federal budget now before Congress, as well as on technical and program buying.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 15.84 Wednesday, jumped 27.47 to close at 2516.83.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 0.53 to 171.33. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index advanced 1.29 to 312.69. The price of an average share rose 9 cents.

Declines narrowly led advances, 778-735, among the 1,967 issues crossing the Big Board tape. Volume totaled 145,410,000 shares, above the 135,490,000 shares traded Wednesday.

House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., said Thursday President Bush would let the Democratic-controlled Congress make unspecified changes in the budget plan in hopes of winning congressional approval.

Foley made the comment after a private White House lunch with Bush to discuss how much flexibility Congress would have in changing the controversial five-year, $500 billion accord in the implementation stage, called ''reconciliation.''

That stage, with an Oct. 19 deadline, would follow a showdown House floor vote scheduled for late Thursday afternoon or early Thursday evening.

Analysts said the news raised hopes in the market that the plan would be approved and sparked a late burst of buying.

''We saw some buying on the close, and it seemed to be fairly real buying, institutional buying, in anticipation of finally getting some good news (on the budget),'' said Ron Doran, director of institutional trading at C.L. King & Associates in Albany, N.Y.

Doran noted that while ''there is still uncertainty'' about the outcome of the budget vote, the optimism in the market stemmed from hopes for lower interest rates if the plan is approved.

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan has endorsed the plan, saying Wednesday that congressional failure to send it to Bush to be signed into law would be a ''grave mistake.''

Greenspan recently said the Fed could be prompted to ease its stance on interest rates should a credible budget proposal be approved.

Doran also said computerized program buying, used to profit on price spreads between stocks and stock-index futures, played a big part in the rally and explained why the gains were concentrated in the Dow.

Other analysts called the blue-chip rally technical in nature, part of the market's bid to rise up from the 2427.48 level in the Dow industrials that hasbeen the blue-chip average's low point since Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2.

''After the rally Monday, we had some profit taking after the market went up too far, too fast from an oversold condition. And then after some early program selling, we resumed the rally,'' said Brad Weekes, senior vice president in charge of sales and trading at Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities.

On the trading floor, Unisys was the most active issue, down 3/8 to 3 5/8 after a cautionary article about the company appeared in Thursday's Wall Street Journal. This was enough to send other technology issues lower: Motorola plunged 3 1/2 to 60 1/2, Digital Equipment sank 2 3/8 to 50 1/8 and Hewlett-Packard tumbled 1 3/4 to 29 1/4.

Elsewhere in the technology sector, Digital Communications Associates plunged 4 3/8 to 10 5/8 after reporting first-quarter earnings fell to 18 cents a share from 48 cents in the 1989 quarter. And the latest period included a special gain from the sale of a unit.

Navistar followed, reflecting a big block trade executed during the day, unchanged at 2 5/8. Philip Morris was third, off 1/8 to 48.

Tenneco was also active, plunging 4 3/4 to 45 1/4 after an analyst for the firm C.J. Lawrence reportedly cut 1990 and 1991 earnings estimates for the company.

But among the blue chips, AT&T rose 3/4 to 32 1/4, Eastman Kodak jumped 1 1/8 to 38 3/8, General Motors added 5/8 to 36 and IBM, bucking the trend in the technology sector, gained 1/2 to 107 7/8. USX rose 1 1/8 to 32 1/4.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 176,027,490 shares, compared with 165,415,720 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices closed lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 4) UPI - The House, taking a tough-on-crime stance, voted Thursday to expand the list of federal crimes that can carry the death penalty and to limit appeals by state prisoners who face execution.

Opponents criticized the amendments to an omnibus anti-crime bill as election-eve posturing and predicted the courts would declare it unconstitutional.

As originally drafted by the House Judiciary Committee, the bill was strongly criticized by President Bush, who threatened a veto because the measure was ''tougher on law enforcement than it is on criminals.''

But in a series of votes in the full House, amendments were approved to expand the use of the death penalty and otherwise strengthen federal anti-crime statutes.

Final passage of the bill was expected late Thursday or Friday.

An amendment to subsitute life in prison for the death penalty was easily defeated and then the House rejected, 319-108, an amendment by Rep. William Hughes, D-N.J., that would have stiffened the death penalty provisions.

Rep. George Gekas, R-Pa., then won approval, 271-159, of an amendment to add 10 death penalty offenses to the 10 already in the bill. His amendment also would change sentencing procedures to make it more likely the death penalty could be imposed, and would limit appeals in federal courts by state prisoners awaiting execution.

The House then approved an amendment by Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., 295-133, that would allow the death penalty to be imposed on people convicted of trafficking large quantities of drugs even if no specific death occurs.

The Senate passed its version of the crime bill earlier this year, but that measure faces a veto threat over a provision that would outlaw nine types of semiautomatic assault-type weapons. Bush has refused to ban such guns despite pleas from police groups.

The House bill contains no similar provision, but a separate bill to ban the weapons was scheduled to be taken up after the crime bill.

A House-Senate compromise will have to be worked out before a final version is sent to Bush.

If enacted, the new legislation would allow the federal courts to impose the death penalty for the first time since the Supreme Court struck down all death penalty laws in 1972.

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, defended the committee's version of the bill as ''a well-crafted and comprehensive effort to combat crime, from the streets of our cities ... to the boardrooms of savings and loans.''

During debate on the death penalty provisions, Brooks and Hughes complained that members wanted to vote for whatever amendment was the toughest, without regard for fairness or constitutionality.

Gekas said, ''The state of crime in our nation requires the strongest law enforcement tools that we can make available'' to police agencies.

In addition to restrictions imposed by the Gekas amendment, the House approved 285-146, an amendment by Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., allowing states to set time limits on appeals by state death row inmates based on constitutional challenges.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 4) UPI - The Agriculture Department is making the case within the Bush administration for offering export credits to the Soviet Union a senior department official said Thursday.

However, the official said the issue must be resolved ''consistent with broader policy issues.'' For months, the administration has linked improved economic ties to the Kremlin to enactment of Soviet laws guaranteeing free emigration.

''We're interested in providing credits,'' said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. ''We have been presenting our interest in doing this to other agencies.''

In the past, the Soviets have paid cash for purchases. Soviet officials, strapped for cash and facing deteriorating economic conditions, have expressed interest in obtaining up to $2 billion in the export credit guarantees.

The Soviet Union is the No. 1 market for U.S. grain exports. It bought 20.3 million metric tons of U.S. corn and wheat in the fiscal year that just ended.

The Agriculture Department recently offered the Kremlin, which is in the market for flour, the chance to buy 500,000 tons of wheat flour at discount prices. It was the first time the department has offered export subsidies on anything other than wheat for the Soviets.

On Wednesday, the Soviets purchased 150,000 tons of soybean meal, its first major purchase of U.S. crops since the advent of this year's harvest. Soviet farmers are projected to harvest a near-record crop but their country still is expected to be a major grain importer.

The official's comments were the strongest expression yet about a possible offer of credits. During the summer, the department said credits would be considered once emigration reforms were adopted.

Farm-state congressmen, worried about low domestic wheat prices and a projected decline in U.S. exports, have argued in favor of extending credits now in light of change in Soviet regulations.

LOS ANGELES (OCT. 4) UPI - The price of MCA Inc.'s stock fell Thursday following reports that its theme parks and some of its other assets may be excluded from a possible $8 billion buyout by Japanese company Matsushita Electric Industrial Co.

MCA's stock closed at $62.75, off 75 cents on the New York Stock Exchange. Matsushita's American Depositary Receipts, also traded on the NYSE, were up $2 to $139.50 an ADR.

Analysts and investors have speculated that Matsushita may only want to acquire MCA's film, record and television divisions, along with its 420 acres of real estate in the Hollywood area.

Such a deal would exclude the Universal Studios theme parks in Hollywood and Florida, its book publishers and its half-interests in the USA Network cable channel and the 1,800-screen Cineplex Odeon theater chain. The Florida theme park has been riddled with problems since it opened earlier this year, but most analysts believe it has excellent long-term potential.

''I would think that Matsushita would be interested in the theme parks, unless they are worried about the problems in Florida,'' said entertainment analyst Paul Marsh of Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards of Los Angeles.

Marsh said that the drop in the stock, which had jumped nearly $4 on Wedneday after both companies confirmed that they are holding talks with each other, may stem from investors believing that negotiations will not be concluded quickly.

''All that's happened so far is that Michael Ovitz has gotten the two sides to the table,'' Marsh said.

Ovitz, head of the high-powered Creative Artists Agency, is acting as an adviser to Matsushita on the deal.

''It's not easy to buy an $8 billion company,'' Marsh said. ''One would assume that they still have a lot of talking to do.''

Marsh and other analysts say that MCA's break-up value would be about $85 a share, but reports from Japan this week have indicated that Matsushita wants to pay only about $65 a share.

Matsushita, which has annual sales of $44 billion, had been widely identified as the potential buyer following last week's disclosure by MCA that it was holding buyout talks with a major international company.

If MCA makes the deal, it would also have to sell its WWOR-TV station in New Jersey, because of regulations barring ownership of U.S. TV stations by foreign interests.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL. (OCT. 4) UPI - The shuttle Atlantis appears to have been damaged somewhat when a 70-pound, 9-foot-long metal beam mistakenly left in the ship's engine room fell as the orbiter was being hoisted into the launch position, officials said Thursday.

The accident was the latest in a series of mishaps in recent months at the Kennedy Space Center that have raised questions about quality control and NASA's ability to keep the shuttle program on schedule, above and beyond the hydrogen fuel leaks that have disrupted the launch schedule.

But Forrest McCartney, director of the Kennedy Space Center, said the incident did not indicate a trend at the shuttleport and that a thorough investigation will be mounted to make sure a no similar problems happen again.

As for whether the accident caused any damage to Atlantis that would delay the ship's launch next month on a secret military mission, McCartney said it was too soon to say.

But sources requesting anonymity said the bar apparently fell 5 to 6 feet and that it came to rest near the intersection of several critical structural beams. The falling beam caused some damage to foam insulation and appears to have dinged several other components.

''I'm very disappointed,'' McCartney said in an interview. ''It was unexpected and we've not yet gotten down to the bottom line on it. Right now, I just can't think of any reason that should have happened. We've just got to figure out where the system let us down.''

With the shuttle Discovery on track for blastoff Saturday, Atlantis is scheduled for launch around Nov. 7 to ferry a military satellite into orbit, a classified mission grounded in July by a hydrogen fuel leak.

The $2 billion spaceplane was moved from its hangar to the Vehicle Assembly

Building earlier this week for attachment to a pair of solid- fuel boosters and an external fuel tank before rollout to launch pad 39A next week.

A massive yellow sling was attached to Atlantis Wednesday and two powerful overhead cranes picked the shuttle up and then rotated it into a vertical position so it could be bolted to its tank and boosters.

But as the nose of the shuttle rose, engineers heard at least three distinct ''thuds'' apparently coming from inside Atlantis's engine compartment in a period of between 2 and 2.5 seconds, according to sources who requested anonymity.

When engineers were able to gain access to the shuttle's engine room they were dismayed to find a bright yellow 9-foot, 70-pound ''access bar'' resting near the floor of the cramped compartment.

The metal beam, apparently left inside the engine room by mistake, fell through the compartment as Atlantis was rotated vertical.

''It's a 9-foot I-beam,'' said NASA spokeswoman Lisa Malone. ''It's bolted to part of the structure in the orbiter and they mount platforms on it so you can get access (to various systems).''

Before roll over to the Vehicle Assembly Building, access platforms are removed and the engine room is closed. For some reason, technicians missed the 9-foot beam that fell inside Atlantis.

Engineers worked Thursday to find out what damage, if any, the beam caused as it fell.

''They want to determine the course it traveled and any damage to any of the systems,'' Malone said. ''Right now, they're taking pictures and making measurements and that kind of thing.''

One source said the incident happened as Atlantis's nose was rotated between 30 degrees and 50 degrees past horizontal. Asked what the odds were the shuttle could have escaped damage, he said simply: ''None.''

LOS ANGELES (OCT. 4) UPI - A liberal political organization, responding to a growing number of servicemen and women seeking to avoid combat in the Middle East, said Thursday it has established a legal service for those applying for conscientious objector status.

The political lobby Americans for Democratic Action has enlisted attorney Bill Smith and other lawyers to aid members of the armed forces in applying for changes of assignment, reserve duty or discharges.

Smith, who provided similar services to military personnel and draft resisters during the Vietnam War, said the team of attorneys also is offering counsel to draft applicants who want to know how to record their objections before they register.

''Although we don't have a conscription system at this time, if the war in the Mideast should escalate, young men approaching age 18 want to know how to register a claim,'' he said. ''Well over half my calls come from young men faced with registering for the draft.''

Smith acknowledged that the military deployment in the Persian Gulf is enjoying more widespread American support than the Vietnam conflict did, but he said his office is receiving a growing number of calls from men and women asking for help in avoiding Persian Gulf assignments.

Smith, who specializes in military and veterans' law, said many people he has spoken with volunteered for service in the Army, Navy, Air Force or Marines to gain work experience, serve their country in peace time and enjoy education and other benefits.

''I talked with a nurse who joined the reserves who thought she was going to be sent to an earthquake disaster,'' he said. ''Now she faces the possibility of going to Saudi Arabia. That's a different contract than what she bargained for.''

He said following several court decisions, each military branch and the U.S. Department of Defense established policies and procedures by which servicemen and women who experience a change of heart can apply for different active duty assignments, reserve status or for a discharge.

Smith said enlistment applications offer an opportunity for volunteers to deal with the moral questions of going to war, but the reference is brief and recruitment officers generally do not raise the subject in interviews with enlistees.

''On this elaborate four-page application, one line says 'Are you a conscientious objector - yes or no?' No one tells you what a conscientious objector is. Most people can't even pronounce it,'' Smith said.

''Today I think recruiters have an obligation to let young people know they could be facing conflict in the Mideast and what that means,'' he said.

He said most callers seeking help are referred first to one of several peace-related organizations whose staff will assist them with applications. If they need legal representation, lawyers will take their cases.

Smith said the group's legal assistance program is not intended to offer an easy way out for anyone who prefers a comfortable stateside post over the Saudi Arabian desert.

''You've got to qualify,'' he said. ''You can't just say 'I'm opposed to going to Saudi Arabia because I'm allergic to sand.'''

Smith said claims based on deep religious or moral convictions against war succeed in winning a change in military status in about 80 percent of the cases.

HARTFORD, Conn. (OCT. 4) UPI - A former cardiologist surrendered Thursday and was taken to the state's maximum-security prison in Somers to serve a 20-year sentence for killing his wife with a baseball bat.

Dr. Russell Manfredi, 37, of West Hartford had remained free on a $250,000 appeal bond since his sentencing in December 1986, but had to turn himself in after the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear his case Monday.

''We finally have the day of justice,'' said State's Attorney John M. Bailey, who prosecuted the case. ''It was extremely frustrating, but the system did work.''

Manfredi was convicted of first-degree manslaughter in November 1986 for beating his wife, Barbara Billings Manfredi, 33, to death with an aluminum baseball bat in March 1985 during an argument in their bedroom.

Prosecutors claimed he threw her body out a second-floor window while their three young sons were in the West Hartford home and staged a car accident to cover up the crime.

Defense lawyers claimed Manfredi was denied his constitutional rights when a judge ordered him to undergo a psychiatric examination, but his conviction was upheld by the state Appellate Court and the Connecticut Supreme Court.

A brief hearing was held Thursday in Hartford Superior Court and Manfredi was then transported to the Somers prison for processing, said William Wheeler, spokesman for the state Correction Department.

Manfredi does not qualify for home release and would have to serve 10 years before becoming eligible for parole.

Once in custody, however, he could ask for a review of his incarceration by a federal district judge. His attorney, Michael Sheldon of the University of Connecticut law clinic, said he would consult with Manfredi about the last-ditch maneuver.

Manfredi had been living in Pennsylvania and working as an educator and counselor at St. Joseph's Hospital and Medical Center in Paterson, N.J.

He had been barred by Connecticut and Pennsylvania court orders from having any contact with his sons. The boys, now 8, 11 and 13, are under the legal guardianship of their mother's sister and her husband in Dunmore, Pa.

#90277u2001 10/04/1990 ~United Press International

NEW YORK (OCT. 4) UPI - Big U.S. investors seeking better returns on interest rates and gains on appreciating currencies shifted $20.9 billion into foreign stocks and bonds in the first half of 1990, up sharply from $8.1 billion in the same period in 1989, the Securities Industry Association said Thursday.

Meanwhile, foreign investors - wary of a faltering U.S. economy and the declining dollar - dramatically curtailed U.S. investments. Their net buying of American stocks and bonds plunged to $3.2 billion from $42.3 billion in the 1989 six months.

Leading this trend were Japanese investors, who removed some $10 billion from the United States in this year's first half, the group said.

The association's report on foreign activity was entitled ''From Locomotive to Caboose'' - suggesting that U.S. financial markets over the next few years may take a subordinate role to those abroad.

''I would sense that we see foreign money leaving the United States for the same reasons that U.S. money is leaving,'' said David Strongin, international finance director for the association. Namely: more advantageous interest rates overseas and strengthening foreign currencies.

Throughout 1989, large institutional investors, whether U.S. or foreign, have shifted investment funds into government and corporate bonds paying higher net interest, after inflation is factored in, than their U.S. equivalents. German and Japanese rates, in particular, have risen as U.S. rates decline.

Another big consideration for global money managers is whether the currencies in which bonds are priced are appreciating. As the dollar has fallen to newlows against the German mark and other currencies, the value of U.S. Treasury bonds has slipped relative to that of foreign bonds.

''They're buying into strengthening currencies, so on the way out they should not only get higher yield but earn on the currency play,'' when bonds priced in foreign currencies are cashed in for dollars, Strongin said.

''Higher interest differentials, higher interest rates obtainable overseas - those are the factors that have really contributed to it,'' said money manager Maddis Senner, president of SunRay Securities Inc.

''It's also just a general pessimism as to the state of the U.S. financial system on the part of money managers, just pessimism in general.''

Senner and Strongin both said they believed an important psychological factor was the dramatic political and economic revolution that has replaced Marxist states in Eastern Europe with emerging capitalist, democratic societies.

''U.S. investors going overseas is just the process of globalization ... and (they are) trying to benefit from East Bloc opportunities,'' Senner said.

Declining foreign investment in the United States has clear ramifications for U.S. government debt financing, the report said. From 1980 to 1989, the share of U.S. Treasury issues bought by foreigners rose from 14 to 24 percent - but in the first half of 1990 plunged to a mere 0.3 percent.

The securities group said U.S. investment in foreign equities, another term for stocks, rose by a net of $6.2 billion in the first half of 1990, against net purchases of $4.9 billion in the same period of 1989.

U.S. investors, led by cash-laden institutions like insurance companies and pension funds, put a record net $14.7 billion into foreign bonds of all kinds in the period, higher than the $3.2 billion net in the 1989 period.

That made for net U.S. first-half overseas investment of $20.9 billion vs. $8.1 billion in the first six months of 1989. First-quarter net securities purchases overseas by U.S. investors set a new record at $11.5 billion.

An even starker picture emerges when U.S. and foreign investment flows in and out of the United States are combined. The first half saw a $17.7 net capital outflow, against a $34.4 billion net inflow in the 1989 period.

''We think it's fascinating,'' said Strongin. ''It shows the times are changing.''

Comparing the first and second quarters of this year, U.S. investors surged into European stocks in the earlier three months for a net purchase of $5.9 billion. Net stock buying then dropped off to just $299 million in the latter period.

Similarly, U.S. investors slowed their movement into Eurobonds in the second quarter as net purchases declined to $5.6 billion from $9.1 billion, reflecting doubts about the inflationary effects of uniting East Germany with West Germany.

NEW YORK (OCT. 4) UPI - A messenger who worked for a Wall Street area delivery service pleaded guilty Thursday to charges he stole $133,000 in checks to buy fur coats and cruise around town in luxury cars, sipping expensive champagne.

To fuel his taste for the high life, Earl Small, 27, stole 60 checks from mail bags he was supposed to be delivering to the U.S. Postal Service.

Small, a messenger for the Wall Street Mail Pickup Service Inc., had picked up the mail bags from Marine Midland Bank, Investment Financial Corp., the YMCA Retirement Fund, and the firm of Brown, Brother and Harriman Co.

Small admitted he picked out the checks in the back of the truck and brought them to Wayne Melvin, 26, a convicted drug dealer.

Melvin had an assistant, Matthew Burke, 19, store the checks.

Then, Melvin had them cashed by three of his girlfriends: Dana Henderson, 23, a Chemical Bank customer who used her bank account to cash checks, Robin Hampton, who used her Citibank account, and Carmen Winn, 22, who used her position as a teller at Exte Bank in Manhattan.

Authorities said the money financed their extravagant lifestyle. They rented Bentleys and Jaguars, purchased cases of Dom Perignon and fur coats.

Small, of Brooklyn, pleaded guilty Thursday to charges of criminal possession of stolen property. As part of a plea agreement, he was promised a prison sentence of two to six years.

A similar plea bargain was struck Thursday by Melvin, who is currently serving one to three years on a narcotics conviction. He pleaded to criminal possession of stolen property and was promised a consecutive sentence of two and a half to seven and a half years in prison.

Burke, of Brooklyn, pleaded innocent to conspiracy, stolen property and grand larceny.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 4) UPI - The government approved the first new vaccine for young babies in 28 years Thursday, giving its blessing to a series of shots that shields infants from an infection that can kill them or leave them blind, deaf or retarded.

The vaccine is designed to guard against Haemophilus influenzae type b bacteria, which can cause meningitis - a potentialy lethal inflammation of the brain and spinal cord - and other potentially lethal diseases.

Haemophilus b disease attacks one out of every 200 children in the United States before age 5, said officials for Lederle-Praxis Biologicals of Wayne, N.J., which will market the vaccine.

''We believe that the new use of this vaccine will prevent a serious, contagious disease responsible for the majority of cases of meningitis, which can lead to brain damage and death in infants, in the United States today,'' Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan said in a statement.

Previously, the vaccine was approved only for use in children age 18 months or older because Lederle had not conducted enough tests to prove it was effective in young babies. However, most cases of Haemophilus b disease occur between six and 12 months of age.

More than 5,000 infants under 12 months are stricken by Haemophilus b disease each year, and about 800 of those babies die, federal health statistics show. In addition, about 38 percent of children who survive have neurological complications that may include blindness, deafness, mental retardation or paralysis.

The FDA said the new vaccine is the first routine vaccine it has licensed for young infants since the oral poliovirus vaccine in 1962. The immunization is given in a series of shots that starts two months after birth and continues at four months and six months. A booster dose is also needed at 15 months or older.

''Pediatricians can now administer HibTITER (the trade name for the new vaccine) simultaneously with other childhood vaccines at the age when infants need the most protection against invasive Haemophilus b disease,'' said Dr. David Smith, developer of the vaccine.

The vaccine can be given at the same times as the diptheria and tetanus toxoid and pertussis vaccine, and the oral polio vaccine, the FDA said.

In addition to the brain inflammation, other infections associated with Haemophilus influenzae type b include a frequently fatal inflammation of the flap covering the windpipe and pneumonia.

Lederle officials said the estimated annual cost of illnesses in the United States caused by Haemophilus b disease is more than $2.5 billion. Lederle plans to sell the vaccine series to pediatricians at a cost of about $58 per child.

Tests of the vaccine, which involved about 60,000 infants at the Kaiser Permanente Pediatric Vaccine Study Center in Oakland, Calif, found no serious side effects, the FDA said. Minor side effects include swelling and warmth at the shot site, and occasional fever.

LOS ANGELES (OCT. 4) UPI - Actress Roseanne Barr and her husband filed a $145-million lawsuit Thursday against the National Enquirer and the Star, alleging the tabloids illicitly obtained love letters stolen from them.

The lawsuit, filed in U.S. District Court, accuses the tabloids invasion of privacy, possession of stolen property, copyright infringment and infliction of emotional distress for publishing excerpts from four letters.

The Enquirer also was accused of racketeering for its alleged ''participation in a scheme to obtain the private papers and effects of celebrities by ... paying persons and entities to steal such information,'' the suit said.

The suit alleged the Enquirer pays its ''agents'' thousands of dollars to steal the personal effects of celebrities as part of a nationwide racketeering conspiracy.

Barr wrote the letters to her husband, Tom Arnold, shortly before the couple was married Jan. 20. Excerpts from the letters were printed in the Star on Jan. 6 and in the Enquirer on Feb. 6.

In one of the excerpts, Barr wrote, ''First comes love, then comes marriage, then comes Tommy with a baby carriage. I love you. I love Thomas Arnold.''

But the Enquirer told its readers other parts of the letters would not be published, describing them as ''raunchy'' and ''eye-opening.''

The letters apparently were stolen from Arnold's possession in January, the suit said, adding that the theft strikes to the ''root of the free and mutual interchange of opinions and sentiments between loving adults, which is essential to the well-being of society.''

In the lawsuit, the couple claims the tabloids have ''threatened to telecopy and fax the purloined letters to news agencies and other editors throughout the U.S.'' The suit seeks to enjoin the tabloids from releasing the letters for further publication.

Barr and Arnold are the most recent in a long line of celebrities who have filed suits against the Enquirer and other tabloids.

Last month, Elizabeth Taylor sued the Enquirer for printing an article alleging that her doctors were outraged that she was ''boozing it up'' while hospitalized earlier this year for a prolonged illness.

In the lawsuit filed by Barr and Arnold, the couple seeks at least $20 million in general damages and a $125 million in punitive award from the Enquirer and Star publishers News America Publishing Inc. and Murdoch Magazines.

MOSCOW (OCT. 4) UPI - President Mikhail Gorbachev issued a new decree Thursday allowing enterprises to negotiate wholesale prices as one of the first steps toward a market economy.

The official Tass news agency said the decree would broaden the economic independence of enterprises and ''increase their motivation in boosting output and production efficiency.''

Under the Soviet Union's centrally planned economy nearly all wholesale prices are currently set by the government.

Tass said Thursday's decree will allow for the ''extensive use of negotiated wholesale prices in dealings between economic enterprises.''

The decree was Gorbachev's second on the transition to a market economy since the Supreme Soviet gave him new economic powers less than two weeks ago. The first decree, on Sept. 27, ordered local governments and enterprises to honor contractual obligations through 1991.

WELLESELEY, Mass. (OCT. 4) UPI - The on-again, off-again proposed sale of EG&G Inc.'s fluid component technology subsidiaries has fallen through, the company said Thursday.

The latest plan called for EG&G to sell its five separate businesses to TI Group PLC for $240 million. But EG&G said it had ''terminated'' negotiations and declined to explain the sticking point in its talks with the British company.

The businesses earmarked for sale included EG&G Sealol and Sealol Industrial, in Warwick and Cranston, R.I. respectively, Pressure Science in Beltsville, Md., KT Aerofab in El Cajon, Calif. and a joint venture, Sealol Eagle in Japan said Deborah S. Lorenz, a spokeswoman for EG&G.

EG&G last summer disclosed plans to sell the properties first to TI but later said a Japanese company, NOK Corp., had made a higher bid. TI later came back with the still higher $240 million offer, EG&G said.

Lorenz declined to say whether the divisions would be put up for sale again. ''Right now we're just taking time to figure out how to proceed,'' she said.

TORONTO (OCT. 4) UPI - A class action law suit has been filed against Northern Telecom Inc. for allegedly wiretapping telephone calls and tapping private conversations at a Nashville repair plant, union leaders said Thursday.

The Canadian Auto Workers union said in a statement that the wiretapping was related to efforts by the company to thwart organizing efforts at the Nashville Repair and Overhaul Center from 1976 to 1984.

The suit alleges that Northern Telecom secretly taped private telephone conversations and private conversations between employees by means of hidden microphones throughout the plant between August, 1976 and April, 1984.

The CAW, which represents Northern Telecom workers in Canada, said the Communication Workers of America is seeking up to $3 million in damages, or $100 a day for each day the wiretaps were in place.

''The charges against Northern Telecom are serious,'' the CAW said.

The CAW said the suit was filed on behalf of about 1,000 employees, managers, union officials and others whose conversations were allegedly overheard.

The Nashville repair facility employs some 200 to 250 workers, a company spokeswoman said, adding the plant is not unionized.

Linda Henson, a spokeswoman for Northern Telecom Inc., said in a telephone interview from Nashville that ''the suit is going to be defended. We are going to go to court.''

Henson, who said the suit was filed in Federal Court in Nashville Sept. 13, declined to discuss the union's allegations, saying ''as long as a suit is under litigation, I do not discuss it.''

Northern Telecom Inc., headquarted in Nashville, is the United States subsidiary of telecommunications giant Northern Telecom Ltd. of Toronto.

Henson said only 1 to 1.5 percent of Northern Telecom's 22,000 U.S. employees are unionized.

The Communication Workers of America, the Communication Workers of Canada and the Auto Workers were scheduled to hold a joint news conference in Toronto Friday to provide further details on the law suit.

Northern Telecom is a supplier of fully digital telecommunications switching systems. It reported 1989 revenues of $6.1 billion.

The company reported second quarter earnings of $95.7 million, or 37 cents a share.

(OCT. 4) UPI - House Speaker Thomas Foley says President Bush will let Congress make some changes in the budget agreement, once it's initially approved. Foley says that's NOT a new understanding with the White House, but it apparently needs to be re-stated in order to help win Democratic votes. The House is to vote on the plan today or tomorrow. Foley's comments came after he met with Bush to discuss how much flexibility Congress would have in changing the plan.

The Bush administration has begun its campaign to gain approval of an agreement to cut conventional forces in Europe... showing Moscow will have to destroy many more weapons than the West. Some of those figures were confirmed officially today by Secretary of State Baker. He finished the so-called C-F-E negotiations with Soviet Foreign Minister Shevaradnadze two days ago.

FORT WORTH, Texas(OCT. 4) UPI - The president of a group of royalty owners of oil and gas interests Thursday said some politicians are planning to enact new punitive taxes that could devastate his group's members.

Jim Stafford, president of the National Association of Royalty Owners, addressing the group's meeting in Fort Worth, Texas, said unless the members acted quickly, they could expect a replay of the 1980 federal energy policy which produced the windfall profits tax.

''The last time we ignored the warnings, it cost 2.5 million royalty owners over a third of their income,'' Stafford said. ''It also cost the United States over 50 percent of our independent producers and resulted in wells being abandoned every 30 minutes.''

He said if a similar tax is enacted, ''there will be very, very few survivors.''

Stafford said three pending bills, which would reinstate the windfall profits tax, are receiving growing support.

He said outside the oil patch, the public is again turning its anger over high gasoline prices back to the domestic producer ''who will become the sacrificial goat for the futures traders, speculators, refiners, marketers and a global conflic.''

Stafford asked the group's 5,100 members to press for a national energy policy that will encourage domestic production in the lower 48 states and focus heavily on secondary and enhanced recovery which he said would double U.S. oil reserves.

He also proposed there be a reexamination of a tax on imported oil and a floor price for oil to spur domestic drilling.

NEW YORK (OCT. 4) UPI - The Catholic church has the right to evict a theater group using a church-owned facility to stage a play about a clergyman who kills a pregnant woman in an automobile accident while drunk, a judge ruled Thursday.

The RAPP Arts Center, which does not perform on Thursdays, will appeal the ruling and was considering moving the Friday night production of ''The Cardinal Detoxes'' to another location, said theater spokesman Brian Drutman.

The Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York, which owns the former parochial school being used as a playhouse, went to court to enforce the termination of its lease with the RAPP Arts Center.

The Archdiocese claimed that under the terms of the 1986 lease, the troupe was prohibited from performances involving obscenity, nudity, pornography or anything that would justify an R or X rating.

The lease also included a catch-all ban of any production ''the church may deem detrimental to its reputation.''

The off-off-Broadway production is a 35-minute monologue is about a clergyman living in a church detoxification center because he killed a pregnant woman in an automobile accident while driving drunk.

State judge Irma Santaella ruled the theater violated the lease, rejecting the troupe's argument that the church infringed on its constitutional right to free expression.

''In this case, the artistic director admits he signed the lease of his own free will and accepted the conditions of the church,'' Santaella ruled.

''As a tenant, he had freedom of choice and free speech and he waived it. He allowed the church to define his First Amendment rights knowingly.''

In a seven-hour hearing, the troupe's lawyer, Richard Sbeglia, urged Santaella to cut down the ''unconscionable'' catch-all provision and let the show go on.

''The court should not enforce any restriction in a contract or lease that deprives anyone of their constitutional rights, especially when it is at the whim of another party,'' said Sbeglia.

But the church's lawyer, Frank McLaughlin Jr., argued that the group waived its constitutional rights when it signed the lease. He said the production caused ''irreparable damage'' to the church's reputation.

A spokesman for the Archdiochese, Joseph Zwilling, cheered Santaella's ruling.

''It confirms what we have said all along that this was not a constitutional question. It was simply a landlord-tenant dispute and they violated the lease '' Zwilling said.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 4) UPI - Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., appeared before the Senate Ethics Committee Thursday and emerged expressing confidence the panel will clear him of wrongdoing in connection with campaign contributor Charles Keating.

The committee is investigating allegations McCain and four other senators improperly intervened with federal banking regulators on Keating's behalf when his Lincoln Savings and Loan Association was headed toward collapse.

Keating, now jailed on federal charges of fraud and securities violations stemming from junk bond sales by Lincoln, had contributed large sums of money to the campaigns of each of the senators.

McCain, the only Republican among the five, spent nearly three hours before the Ethics Committee Thursday, his second meeting with the panel since its inquiry began last December.

He told reporters afterward that he expected to be ''totally exonerated'' by the committee, but he acknowledged the probe has taken its toll.

''Personally, it has been difficult. Politically, it has been damaging,'' he said, adding, ''Many people in Arizona will judge my conduct by how the Ethics Committee judges me.''

McCain declined to talk about what was discussed during the meeting, saying only, ''I believe every question was answered, hopefully to the satisfaction of the committee. I feel good.''

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, also a target of the investigation, appeared before the committee for about 2 1/2 hours on Wednesday.

The New York Times reported Thursday the committee's special counsel, Robert Bennett, has recommended McCain and Glenn be dropped from the investigation because there was no pattern of ''credible evidence'' that they had sought to exchange political favors for contributions.

The Times reported Bennett recommended the panel to proceed with its inquiry of three other senators - Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and Donald Riegle, D-Mich.

The Ethics Committee issued a statement later in the day noting the appearance of recent news accounts of its inquiry and saying, ''These articles have contained a number of inaccuracies, distortions and misstatements.''

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (OCT. 4) UPI - Three defendants in a natural gas price-fixing lawsuit - Amoco Production Co., Oxy USA Inc. and Williams Natural Gas Co. - have agreed to pay $212 million in a settlement announced Thursday by state officials in Kansas and Missouri.

The settlement, which ended a six-year legal battle, was approved Thursday by U.S. District Judge Earl O'Connor.

A settlement was reached with Amoco Production, of Chicago, and Oxy USA last month, and an agreement was reached with Williams Natural Gas Wednesday night, said Kansas Attorney General Bob Stephan.

The plaintiffs, including Kansas and Missouri and utilities in both states, will receive $91.5 million in cash over the next two years and $120.5 million in cash over the next 20 years, said Missouri Attorney General William Webster.

The companies allegedly conspired to fix prices of natural gas by illegally changing gas purchase contracts to double the price of gas sold to the utilities, Webster said.

''Today's settlement is the largest price-fixing recovery in the history of both Missouri and Kansas,'' Webster said. ''Customers who were overcharged for natural gas will recover 100 percent of the overcharges. We estimate Missouri customers will receive more than $50 million in cash and discounted gas. In addition, commercial users will receive substantial benefits.''

The case started in 1984 when KPL Gas Service of Topeka, Kan., and two other utilities filed a lawsuit against a gas pipeline company and two natural gas producers.

''We're very pleased for our 1 million customers in Missouri and Kansas,'' said Tom Hall, KPL spokesman. ''We think it comes at a wonderful time and that the customers will benefit from this for many years to come.''

Other penalties included an additional gas stream of 800 billion cubic feet that must be dedicated to Kansas and Missouri customers over the next 20 years Stephan said.

''That gas will be provided to the customers at a very favorable price,'' Hall said. ''Not only will that make it favorable for residential customers, but for businesses to expand in Missouri and Kansas and to attract new business interest as well.''

Other plaintiffs in the lawsuit were Utilicorp United Inc. and Farmland Industries Inc., both of Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas Gas and Electric Co. of Wichita, Kan.

Farmland Industries, a farm cooperative with thousands of Kansas members, is ''the largest industrial user of natural gas in this state for its fertilizer plants in Lawrence and Dodge City and its refinery in Coffeyville,'' Stephan said.

The settlement would result in substantial benefits to Farmland members, he said.

KPL had allowed the attorneys general in Kansas and Missouri to negotiate on behalf of consumers who bought natural gas from the three utilities who sued the suppliers.

PATERSON, NJ (OCT. 4) UPI - A state judge Thursday denied a father's request for an abortion for his mentally incompetent daughter who may have become pregnant as a result of rape.

Afterward, the father of the woman, whose identity was being withheld, withdrew his request for an abortion, saying he felt his daughter's pregnancy was too far advanced.

''After talking with the doctors I feel we should let her go to full term,'' said the father, who is the woman's legal guardian. ''I don't now feel she should terminate the pregnancy. ... It's too late in the pregnancy. She is at risk.''

State Superior Court Judge Amos Saunders ruled, after hearing medical testimony, that an abortion would be risky at this point in the pregnancy and not in the woman's best medical interests. He did not elaborate.

The 33-year-old divorced mother of three, who suffered severe neurological damage during childbirth six years ago, told the judge during an afternoon visit to the nursing homewhere she lives that she wanted to bring the 23-week-old fetus to term.

''I chatted with the young lady,'' Judge Amos Saunders told the court. ''I indicated that I, along with others, were concerned about her health. She said she understood what pregnant was. She also said she wanted to have the baby.''

Saunders said it was not known under what circumstances the woman had become pregnant, but rape is suspected, and there are unprecedented legal questions over who has control of the fetus.

The woman's physician, Dr. Joseph Scian, testified in a deposition that the ''latest possible (time for) termination within medically accepted safe standards'' is Oct. 5.

He said she ''is very healthy except for her obvious neurolgical difficulty'' and that ''the risk is normal for birth for a woman her age despite her impaired mental condition.''

An ultrasound test conducted Wednesday showed a normally developed fetus, Scian said.

Sam Destito, the woman's court-appointed guardian, had suggested that the woman undergo gynecological and psychological examinations to determine whether having the baby would be safer than having an abortion.

''We do not know if it is more traumatic for her to bring the child into the world and then have to give it up for adoption or to abort it now,'' Destito said.

In court documents, the father said he feared his daughter had been raped at the Daughters of Mariam Center nursing home where she lived in nearby Clifton. He had requested six months ago that she be removed from the facility but was denied court approval when the home argued that the woman would suffer a psychological setback if she were removed.

The father now has private nurses at his daughter's bedside around the clock.

Steven Schilsky, assistant executive director of the nursing home, said the home discovered Sept. 18 that the woman was 21 weeks pregnant and, suspecting rape, immediately notified Clifton police.

The Passaic County prosecutor's office has joined the investigation.

Schilsky said there is a question as to where any rape might have occurred, saying the woman leaves the center to attend a church-related support group for young disabled people.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 4) UPI - The Agriculture Department is making the case within the Bush administration for offering export credits to the Soviet Union a senior department official said Thursday.

However, the official said the issue must be resolved ''consistent with broader policy issues.'' For months, the administration has linked improved economic ties to the Kremlin to enactment of Soviet laws guaranteeing free emigration.

''We're interested in providing credits,'' said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. ''We have been presenting our interest in doing this to other agencies.''

In the past, the Soviets have paid cash for purchases. Soviet officials, strapped for cash and facing deteriorating economic conditions, have expressed interest in obtaining up to $2 billion in the export credit guarantees.

The Soviet Union, the No. 1 market for U.S. grain exports, bought 20.3 million metric tons of U.S. corn and wheat in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30.

The Agriculture Department recently offered the Soviet Union, which is in the market for flour, the chance to buy 500,000 tons of wheat flour at discount prices. It was the first time the department has offered export subsidies on anything other than wheat to the Soviets.

On Wednesday, the Soviets purchased 150,000 tons of soybean meal, its first major purchase of U.S. crops since the advent of this year's harvest. Soviet farmers are projected to harvest a near-record crop, but their country still is expected to be a major grain importer.

The official's comments were the strongest expression yet about a possible offer of credits. During the summer, the department said credits would be considered once emigration reforms were adopted.

Farm-state congressmen, worried about low domestic wheat prices and a projected decline in U.S. exports, have argued in favor of extending credits now in light of changes in Soviet regulations.

(OCT. 4) UPI - Japanese Premier Kaifu met with an Iraqi deputy premier in Amman, Jordan, today... and appealed for Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait. A spokesman says Kaifu made it clear that Iraq must leave Kuwait before peace talks could take place. A Jordanian spokesman says the Iraqi official told Kaifu that Baghdad rejects any peace talks while the U-S-led multi-national force remains in the region. Kaifu also met today with Jordan's King Hussein.

Fuel price hikes stemming from the Persian Gulf crisis could end up affecting city services in the United States. The U-S Conference of Mayors says a survey of 50 cities shows costs for fuel needed to run police cars, fire trucks and other vehicles rose more than 30 percent in August. Conference director Thomas Cochran says that for most of those cities, the higher fuel costs ''will likely translate into cuts in public services.''

The state that uses the most energy per person is... Alaska, NOT New York. In fact, a study by the group Public Citizen says New Yorkers and New Englanders use the least energy per capita in the nation. Following Alaska, the other states in the top 10 energy-users are Wyoming, Louisiana, Texas, North Dakota, Indiana, Kansas, West Virginia, Montana and Oklahoma. Those states have less than 15 percent of the nation's population but account for more than 25 percent of America's energy use.

The grumbling in the Soviet Union is growing louder. An article in today's Communist Party newspaper Pravda blames the country's economic crisis on the rise of democracy. Pravda also compared President Gorbachev's perestroika drive with the ''failed'' reforms of former Soviet leader Nikita Krushchev.

The Walt Disney Company filed a federal lawsuit in Orlando today, accusing 37 Florida retailers and distributors of selling products illegally adorned with Disney characters. UNITED NATIONS (OCT. 4) UPI - U.S. and Soviet officials said Thursday that they are exploring ways to reactivate a U.N. committee to command the various military forces facing Iraq.

U.S. Assistant Secretary for International Affairs John Bolton and Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vladimir Petrovski held a news conference and discussed the U.N. Charter and its parts addressing the right to engage in military action.

Bolton said, ''The preferred solution here is the political and diplomatic one.'' But he added that there had already been two meetings of the U.N. Military Staff Committee to consider forming a U.N. command in the gulf.

The committee was created when the United Nations was founded in 1945 but ''was dead on arrival because of Cold War tension,'' Bolton said.

The committee ''is like sleeping beauty,'' Petrovski added, and ''needs a kiss of life from all member states.''

The United States has 170,000 troops in Saudi Arabia. They were rushed to that country following Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait. France, Britain and several Arab countries have also sent substantial forces to Saudi Arabia, which invited the foreign troops because it feared an Iraqi attack. The Soviet Union said it will send troops only under a U.N. command.

Although the United Nations has ordered Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait and has authorized a naval and air blockade of that country, it hasn't voted on any resolutions dealing directly with the foreign troops in Saudi Arabia.

Bolton said that Article 51 of the U.N. Charter, which gives nations the right of self-defense, would justify actions by the allied troops. But he said the United States was considering Article 42, which says the U.N. Security Council may call for joint military action by member states ''to restore international peace and security.''

Petrovski declined to say if the Soviet Union felt that Article 51 gave the allied troops the right to engage in military action without U.N. approval. But he said that ''it is necessary to act within the framework of the United Nations,'' implying that he favored activating Article 42 should military force be deemed necessary.

Both officials issued a joint statement committing both countries to strengthen U.N. efforts to promote international peace, and to establish ''a new sense of responsibility at the United Nations by encouraging the trend away from rhetorical excess toward efforts to deal pragmatically with the major issues of the 1990s.''

The statement also committed the two countries to clearing up their arrears to the United Nations. The United States, which owes just over $500 million, and the Soviet Union, which owes about $125 million, are the two largest debtors.

Bolton said that President Bush is ''outraged'' that America ''is the biggest deadbeat at the United Nations,'' and has asked Congress to approve paying off one-fifth of the arrears in each of the next five years.

The Soviet Union is up to date on its regular payments to the United Nations, Petrovski said, but didn't make contributions to the peacekeeping forces for many years. He said the Soviet Union reversed its policy three years ago and since then has brought its arrears down from $200 million.

LOS ANGELES (OCT. 4) UPI - A veteran federal narcotics agent was indicted Thursday on charges allegedly stole more than $1,700 confiscated from a drug dealer.

Eddie B. Hill, 49, currently a mid-level manager assigned to the Drug Enforcement Administration's ''cocaine desk'' in Washington, allegedly embezzled the money from the defendant in June 1987 after being told to return it to the man following his drug trial in Los Angeles, the three- count indictment charged.

Robert C. Bonner, head of the DEA in Washington, said that allegations of Hill's wrongdoing were regretful and that ''criminal violations by personnel of the DEA are rare.''

''I will not tolerate illegal behavior by DEA personnel,'' Bonner added.

Hill, a 15-year veteran with the DEA, faces a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison and a $750,000 fine if convicted.

The charges against him allege he embezzled money and lied about funds he was ordered to return to convicted drug dealer John Missas Lopez.

Following Missas Lopez's trial, the prosecutor in the case entrusted the money - $1,780 in all - to Hill to return to Missas. The money had been confiscated from Missas when he was arrested in 1985 by the DEA. The cash, however, was not proven to be drug profits.

The U.S. Attorney's Office received numerous inquiries about the missing funds and an investigation was launched.

Questioned about the missing money, Hill allegedly lied to a prosecutor that he had given it to another DEA agent to return to Missas while the defendant was in jail.

Hill, following his questioning, allegedly tried to return the money secretly, enlisting the aid of a DEA informant and a private investigator in San Diego to help him send about $1,895 to the U.S. Attorney's Office along with other property belonging to the defendant.

Assistant U.S. Attorney William Fahey declined to say whether investigators had uncovered any more evidence of alleged corruption by DEA agents in connection with the Hill case.

The prosecutor, however, said the investigation ''is still very active and continuing.''

Hill allegedly embezzled the money at about the same time several other DEA agents - including international karate champion Darnell Garcia - were under investigation for conspiring to sell millions of dollars of cocaine and heroin through a nationwide drug distribution ring from 1983 to 1988.

The 1988 indictments of Garcia and DEA agents John Jackson and Wayne Countryman marked the most sensational of three DEA corruption cases around the country at the time, involving seven agents who allegedly crossed the line from fighting illicit drug trafficking to participating in crime.

Countryman and Jackson pleaded guilty earlier this year. Garcia, who was a fugitive until his arrest last year in the tiny European country of Luxembourg faces trial Oct. 23.

SAN JOSE, Calif. (OCT. 4) UPI - Two brothers involved in a ring that plotted to steal supercomputer technology for sale to the Soviet Union pleaded guilty Thursday to federal conspiracy charges.

Ivan-Pierre Batinic of Fremont, pleading guilty before U.S. District Court Judge William Ingram, admitted he conspired to violate the federal Export Administration Act and conspired to transport stolen property.

His brother, Steven, of Mountain View, pleaded guilty to one count of conpiracy to transport stolen property.

Ingram set sentencing for Jan. 11. Violating the Export Administration Act carries a potential sentence of 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine, court authorities said. The transporting stolen property count could mean a maximum five years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

A third defendant, computer programmer Keven E. Anderson of Fremont, who was caught trying to flee the United States in October 1987, earlier pleaded guilty to one count of transporting stolen property and on Aug. 12, 1988 was sentenced to six years in prison.

Anderson's sentence was later modified and he was released from prison in January.

A fourth defendant, Charles Julius McVey, who authorities said was the mastermind of the computer theft ring, fled California in 1983 after he was indicted on earlier charges involving the illegal sale of computers to the Soviet Union. He was arrested in the small Canadian town of Teslin in the Yukon Territory and is still fighting extradition to the United States from Vancouver.

All four men were indicted by a federal grand jury on Nov. 3, 1987 on eight felony counts stemming from an alleged plot to steal technology and technical data from Saxpy Computer Corp. of Sunnyvale between May and October 1987.

The indictment said that the Saxpy supercomputer technology the ring intended to sell to the Soviets would have earned them more than $4 million.

The investigaton began in August 1987, when Ivan-Pierre Batinic and Anderson were searched clearing U.S. Customs in Vancouver and were found to be in possession of approximately $10,000 in $100 bills.

Investigators said the money was given to the pair by McVey, who had in his possession at the time of his arrest property belonging to the Saxpy company.

The indictment alleged Ivan-Pierre Batinic had stolen the items while employed at Saxpy.

Additional Saxpy technology in the form of manuals, reel-to-reel computer tapes and floppy discs were found in a storage locker, rented by Anderson in Fremont.

Defense Department experts said the technology had a direct military application and would have proven detrimental to U.S. national security interest if it had gotten to the Soviet Union.

The technology would have given the Soviets the capability to develop a supercomputer which, in the event of war, could anticipate American missile strikes, federal prosecutors said.

LAS VEGAS, NV (OCT. 4) UPI - A 31-year-old quadriplegic kept alive mechanically since he was a child managed to pull out his breathing tube Thursday and died while his right-to-die request was pending before the state Supreme Court, his step-father said.

Kenneth Bergstedt waited almost six months for the courts to decide whether he could die peacefully by having a doctor unplug his ventilator after administering a sleeping medication.

Ronald Bergstedt, who has cared for his adopted son single-handedly since the death of his wife in 1978, called police Thursday when he found that his son was dead. He told officers his son had somehow managed to get his breathing tube out of his mouth.

State District Judge Donald Mosley granted Bergstedt's petition for a right-to-die last June, but stayed the order until the precedent setting case could be reviewed by the Nevada Supreme Court. Mosley ruled the death would not be ruled a suicide and that anyone who helped disconnect the ventilator would not face prosecution.

On the day of Bergstedt's death, the Nevada Supreme Court still had not handed down an opinion, despite pleas by family lawyers that the case be expedited.

''I just have to think the considerations that he had must have been very important to him because I know he wanted to set a legal precedent, '' Mosley said Thursday.

Chief Supreme Court Justice Cliff Young, contacted in Carson City, said the court now will decide whether to consider the case moot because of Bergstedt's death or issue an opinion because of the importance of the case.

''There will be more questions like this.'' Young said. The Chief Justice said he favored writing an opinion, but stressed he was only one of five justices. They will decide what to do about the case when they convene next week.

Kenneth Bergstedt's greatest fear was that when his terminally ill father died he would face a lingering, painful death or be placed in institutional care. The father and son lived alone in a modest mobile home.

''He was afraid he would be all by himself on the machine and drown. It would take him four to six hours to die. It would be a painful process,'' the elderBergstedt said in an interview last summer, explaining that the water build-up in his son's ventilator had to be drained every hour around the clock.

The younger Bergstedt was paralyzed in a 1969 swimming pool accident in Indiana when he was less than 10 years old.

''He just wanted to go,'' Bergstedt, 65, said Thursday. ''I keep thinking of him and wanting to go in and check on him, but he is gone. They took him away this morning. He will be cremated.''

Police spokesman Steve Ducharme said the father told investigators his son asked him to unplug the life support systems Wednesday night, but that he told him he could not grant the death wish. Ducharme said Bergsted told officers Thursday morning that he ''woke up and saw that the (tracheotomy) tube had been removed and that his son apparently had unhooked himself.''

An autopsy is pending and homicide detectives are investigating the death.

Attorney Jack Cherry, who represented the Bergstedts in the right-to- die court petition, said Thursday: ''I guess Kenneth just decidied that he had gone as far as he wanted to go. I just hope that he has found whatever peace he was looking for.

No funeral is planned.

SANTA MONICA, CA (OCT. 4) UPI - A judge dealt prosecutors a blow Thursday in their efforts to compel actor Marlon Brando's daughter to return from Tahiti to testify at the pending murder trial of her half brother.

Superior Court Judge Joel Rudof denied the prosecution's request to issue an official letter from the court asking French Polynesian authorities to serve a federal subpoena on Cheyenne Brando, 20, if prosecutors can obtain such a subpeona.

Rudof, the acting supervising judge of the Santa Monica Superior Court, ruled that he does not have the authority to issue such a letter.

His ruling was the second judicial setback dealt prosecutors in their efforts to compel Cheyenne Brando to return from Tahiti to testify against Christian Brando, 32, charged with the murder of Cheyenne's lover, Dag Drollet, 26.

Deputy District Attorneys Steven Barshop and William Clark last month requested that U.S. District Court Judge Terry Hatter Jr. ask French Polynesian authorities to subpeona Cheyenne, but were turned down. Hatter ruled that the prosecutors had not provided him with legal documentation showing that he had the authority to grant their request.

Clark said Thursday he and Barshop have not yet decided what they will do next on the subpoena issue. He said they are considering appealing Hatter's ruling to a federal appellate court.

The prosecutors consider Cheyenne Brando's testimony crucial to winning a first-degree murder conviction.

Christian Brando allegedly shot and killed Drollet in Marlon Brando's Hollywood Hills estate on May 16.

Christian told police that the shooting was an accident, but Cheyenne Brando told investigators in June that her half brother had premeditated the slaying.

''She stated that the shooting was not an accident like everyone was trying to make it out to be,'' police said in court documents. ''Cheyenne stated, 'It's a murder, in case you don't know it.'''

Prosecutors said that after Cheyenne gave police the statement, her father arranged for her flight to Tahiti, where she shares a dual citizenship with the U.S., to avoid testifying against Christian. Once in Tahiti, she gave birth to a boy fathered by Drollet.

In another development Thursday, Superior Court Judge Robert Thomas granted a delay in Christian's trial, which was set to begin next Tuesday, so that prosecutors can have additional time to try and subpeona Cheyenne.

Over the objections of defense attorney Robert Shapiro, the judge tentatively delayed the trial until Nov. 5. A firm, new trial date will be set next Thursday.

During Thursday's hearing before Judge Thomas, Shapiro raised questions about the mental competency and credibility of Cheyenne, saying ''she has given five conflicting statements'' about Drollet's slaying.

Outside court, Shapiro told reporters that even if Cheyenne does return to testify, he will challenge her mental competency to do so.

''She is suffering from severe emotional and mental problems and her competency as a witness is questionable,'' he said. ''She is heavily sedated, unable to travel and unable to testify.''

After Cheyenne returned to Tahiti, authorities there - spurred on by Dag Drollet's father, Jacques, a powerful political figure in Tahiti - began an investigation of her alleged role in Drollet's slaying.

Los Angeles prosecutors do not consider Cheyenne, who has reportedly been incarcerated in a mental hospital in Tahiti, a suspect.

Prosecutors contend that Christian premeditated the slaying after Cheyenne claimed that Drollet had physically abused her.

If convicted of first-degree murder, Christian could be sentenced to 25 years to life in state prison. He does not face a possible death sentence. Christian remains free on a $4 million property bond posted by his father.

Final passage of a tough anti-crime House bill could come as early as tonight... action opponents are criticizing as election-eve posturing. (OCT. 4) UPI - Democrats in the House decided to have the showdown vote on the budget package later today... instead of delaying it until tomorrow. SARASOTA, FL (OCT.5) BUSINESS WIRE - Apollo Acquisitions of Florida II Inc. has announced that its board of directors and the board of directors of Colorado Style Potato Chips of Europe Ltd. have signed a definitive agreement for the acquisition of Colorado Style by Apollo.

Colorado Style will be operated as a wholly owned subsidiary of Apollo. Subsequent to completion of the acquisition, Apollo will change its name to Select Food Brands International Inc.

The company will manufacture a premium, high-quality, kettle-cooked potato chip. Apollo's low-cholesterol, low-sodium potato chips are intended to be marketed principally in Europe and Asia. The company estimates that kettle-style potato chips account for approximately 10 percent of the U.S. potato-chip market.

The European market for these premium chips is viewed as very attractive by the company. The United Kingdom potato chip market alone is estimated at $2 billion annually. Further the company states that there is currently no major producer of kettle chips operating in Europe.

The company intends to produce its potato chips and subsequently other snack products in a manufacturing facility in Ireland, permitting duty free access to 330 million European consumers and low corporate tax rates. The company has had extensive discussions concerning grants and favorable interest loans that may be provided by the Irish Development Authority and Allied Irish Banks a leading Irish financial institution.

Apollo has also entered into negotiations with a major European distributor of snack foods which has completed extensive taste tests on the company's kettle-style potato chips. A contract for product advertising and distribution is expected to be finalized in approximately 30 days.

Apollo Acquisitions completed its initial public offering, through Kober Financial Corp., in June 1990. The company expects that, subsequent to the acquisition, its shares will be eligible for listing on the NASDAQ system in the United States, as well as listing on the London and Dublin stock exchanges.

NEWPORT, KY (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - NS Group Inc. (NYSE:NSS) announced Friday that it has acquired the Koppel Steel Works (KSW) and Ambridge Rolling Mills (ARM) facilities located in Koppel, Pa., and Ambridge, Pa., from The Babcock & Wilcox Co., a Delaware corporation and PMAC Ltd., a Texas limited partnership (PMAC) for approximately $96 million in cash and securities.

The facilities were formerly operated by the Tubular Products Division of Babcock & Wilcox and have remained idle since 1988, when Babcock & Wilcox closed the facilities.

The acquisition is being financed through a combination of a cash equity investment by NS Group, financing provided by PMAC and $100 million in financing facilities provided by General Electric Capital Corp. (GE Capital). The GE Capital financing facilities include a working capital line and a capital expenditure line available for start-up and ongoing operation of the facilities.

The KSW facility contains a state-of-the-art melt shop installed in 1985 and has the capacity to produce 400,000 tons of steel products annually. The ARM facility, located 20 miles from Koppel, contains a modern seamless tube-making facility installed in 1976 and is designed to make specialty tubing, including bearing, mechanical and pressure tubing for use in a variety of markets, as well as oil country tubing for use in the oil and gas drilling markets.

The KSW facility will supply steel blooms to the ARM facility for the manufacture of tubular products in addition to sellng bar products to a variety of customers in the semi-finished steel marketplace. The KSW and ARM facilities will be operated under the name Koppel Steel Corp., a wholly owned subsidiary of NS Group Inc.

C.R. Borland, president and chief executive officer of NS Group, commented ''the addition of Koppel Steel Corp., will place NS Group in the forefront of the mini-mill industry in this country. The acquisition provides an opportunity to capitalize on our existing facilities and strengths in the oil country tubular market and also provides an entry into additional seamless tubular markets.

''This acquisition clearly places NS Group in a position for significant growth in the years ahead.''

NS Group has demonstrated a strong track record of successfully restarting shuttered steel facilities. The company's two core operating facilities, Newport Steel Corp., a manufacturer of tubular steel products, and Kentucky Electric Steel, a manufacturer of steel bars, were both acquired after their respective former owners idled the facilities.

In both cases, NS Group was successful in elevating the companies to profitability by cutting operating costs, improving product quality and negotiating reasonable labor contracts.

NS Group Inc. is a holding company that owns, in addition to Koppel Steel Corp., four operating subsidiaries: Newport Steel Corp., a tubular steel producer; Kentucky Electric Steel Corp., a producer of steel bars; Erlanger Tubular Corp., a processor of tubular products; and Imperial Adhesives Inc., an adhesives manufacturer. (NASDAQ:DPAC) has reported a net loss for the second quarter ended Aug. 31, 1990, of $119,774, or 3 cents net loss per share, on sales of $1,750,089 versus a net loss of $387,911, or 9 cents net loss per share, on sales of $1,777,463 for the same period last year.

ANCHORAGE, AK (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - National Bancorp of Alaska's (NBA) net income for the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990, was nearly $7.4 million, up 13.6 percent from the $6.5 million reported for the third quarter of 1989, according to Ed Rasmuson, chairman of the board.

Net income for the first nine months of 1990 was $19.9 million, an increase of 18.7 percent over nearly $16.8 million for the first nine months of 1989.

''Our quarterly earnings have been consistently higher this year,'' Rasmuson added. ''We attribute the increase in net income to the improving Alaska economy.''

The earnings per share for the third quarter of 1990 were 93 cents compared to 82 cents for the third quarter of 1989. The earnings per share for the first nine months of 1990 are $2.50 compared to $2.10 for the first nine months of 1989.

As of Sept. 30, 1990, National Bancorp of Alaska's total assets were $2.10 billion, a decrease of 6 percent from assets of $2.24 billion for the third quarter of 1989. Total shareholders' equity as of Sept. 30, 1990, was $214 million compared to nearly $192 million as of Sept. 30, 1989.

''The decrease in total assets is primarily attributable to the runoff of out-of-state brokered deposits which were acquired in the Alliance Bank transaction in April 1989,'' Rasmuson said. ''These deposits were not renewed as they matured. Our policy is to rely on traditional core deposits that create a strong and stable bank, rather than on brokered deposits.''

CAMARILLO, CA. (OCT. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Everest & Jennings International Ltd.

(ASE:EJ.A;EJ.B) announced Friday the resignations of Robert G. Sutherland, chairman and Terry Vandewarker from its board of directors.

Both Sutherland and Vandewarker are affiliated with Industrial Equity (Pacific) Limited (IEP), a substantial stockholder and creditor of Everest & Jennings.

The reasons given for the resignations were concerns over the potential conflicts of interest that could arise between the company and IEP as the company seeks to reach agreement with its primary domestic lender on long-term financing arrangements.

As previously disclosed, Everest & Jennings has been operating for the past several weeks on the basis of informal day-to-day waivers and extensions by its primary domestic lender, waiving certain loan covenant defaults and extending maturity dates under its credit agreement, while it has engaged in negotiations for long-term financing.

Although the company's lender has made formal demand for payment of amounts due, Barre L. Rorabaugh, the president and chief executive officer of Everest & Jennings, has indicated that ''Discussions with our lender here in the United States are continuing and we are in the process of attempting to structure a mutually satisfactory financing package.''

Both corporations develop and manufacture metrology and inspection systems for semiconductor process control and their product lines are highly complementary. Nanometrics' products include scanning electron microscopes and systems for submicron microlithography measurement and inspection, Nanoline, an optical-based measurement system and Nanospec, a thin-film

''Jack Harris and I want to combine our knowledge in metrology systems design to create a single company with the broadest range of products and skills in our industry,'' stated Coates.

''Through this means we expect to achieve substantial growth in world market share during the 90s. Nanometrics and OSI each offer more than a decade of experience in our fields and the largest customer base in our industry.''

''We at OSI are very enthusiastic about the prospects of a merger with Nanometrics,'' said J.R. Harris. ''Our applications and service capabilities will be greatly expanded and we will attain the critical mass that will allow us to provide the support and stability that our customers require. In addition our individual technologies are synergistic and will mesh quite well.''

The consummation of the merger is subject to the execution of a definitive merger agreement, approval of both companies' boards of directors and the stockholders of OSI, customary regulatory approvals, renegotiation of certain liabilities and contractual agreements and other normal conditions of closing. The parties hope to complete the transaction by the end of 1990.

The proposed terms provide for Nanometrics to issue one share of its common stock for each 13 shares of common stock of OSI outstanding on a fully diluted basis. SAN JOSE, CA (OCT. 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Maxoptix Corp. Friday announced support for its one-gigabyte optical cartridge format by a group of leading optical drive companies.

The group includes Hewlett-Packard Co., Philips and Du Pont Optical Co., Optical Storage Corp., Mitsui Petrochemical Industries Ltd. and Mitsubishi Kasei Corp.

Maxoptix President Steven Kitrosser said the endorsements will significantly boost Maxoptix' efforts to establish its 1GB optical cartridge technology as an industry standard.

The 1GB cartridge offers the higher-storage capacities required in many image processing applications. It will be available from the multiple manufacturers of the ANSI/ISO 650MB cartridge and offers performance advantages over the smaller-capacity cartridge.

Officials of the companies said their objective is to establish the 1GB cartridge format as the technology that disk drive manufacturers can easily incorporate in their drives. The 1GB cartridge is based on the ANSI/ISO standard continuous composite recording format.

Hoyle L. Curtis, research and development manager at Hewlett- Packard's Greeley Storage division, said: ''The Maxoptix 1GB format represents a viable capacity point for rewritable optical products and can provide customers with increased capacity and performance while still allowing compatibility with the ANSI/ISO standard.''

Michael A. Toomey, managing director of professional products for Philips and Du Pont Optical, said this new technology will make optical storage more attractive to a broader range of users.

A disk drive using a 1GB cartridge will track over the same surface area as a 650MB cartridge. The 1GB drive is able to transfer data an average of 50 percent faster, however, because data density is 50 percent greater. The 1GB cartridge also offers a faster seek time than the 650MB cartridge.

John Freeman, Maxoptix vice president of marketing, said the proprietary format of the 1GB cartridge concentrates more storage on the outer part of the disk surface. ''Because the 1GB cartridge is read from the outer tracks inward, the disk drive can achieve as much as 30 percent faster seek time over an equivalent capacity available on the 650MB cartridge,'' he said.

Hewlett-Packard Co. is an international manufacturer of measurement and computation products and systems. The company's products and services are used in industry, business, engineering, science, medicine and education in approximately 100 countries. Founded in 1939, the company has 95,000 employees and had revenue of $11.9 billion in fiscal 1989.

Philips and Du Pont Optical Co. manufactures optical storage media for all audio, video and data markets worldwide. The company's product line includes Write-Once and Rewritable disks, CD-Audio, CD-ROM, CD-Video and Videodiscs.

Philips and Du Pont Optical is a joint venture between N.V. Philips, the inventor of optical storage technology, and Du Pont, one of the world's largest suppliers of materials and components to the electronics industry.

Optical Storage Corp., founded in June 1990, is a joint venture among three Japanese companies: Sumitomo Chemical Company Ltd., Daicel Chemical Industries Ltd. and Sumitomo Metal Mining Company Ltd. The company is able to supply various kinds of optical storage media including 1GB cartridges.

It is capable of manufacturing a half-million 5.25-inch MO disk cartridges and 1.5 million 5.25-inch WORM disk cartridges a year. The company has headquarters in Tokyo and currently employs 150.

A major chemical maker based in Tokyo, Mitsui Petrochemical Industries Ltd. (MPC) is shipping its LightStore disks from its rewritable disk plant located at the Sodegaura site across the bay from Tokyo. LightStore media are based on substrates of MPC's unique, proprietary APO (cyclo olefinic polymer).

In addition to the extremely small moisture-derived distortion and optical anisotropy characteristic to APO-made substrates, LightStore disks boast long-term stability throughout the write/read/erase cycles owing to the super-longevity of the recording layer. In addition to 5.25-inch rewritable disks, 5.25-inch write-once media are also commercially available from MPC.

Mitsubishi Kasei Corp. is Japan's largest integrated chemical company. The company emphasizes research and development across a wide range of specialties including information and electronics products such as optical media. Established in 1950, the company currently has 8,900 employees and had a revenue of U.S. $5 billion in fiscal 1989.

Maxoptix, with headquarters in San Jose, was formed in March 1989 and is a joint venture between Maxtor Corp. (NASDAQ:MXTR) and Kubota Ltd. of Japan. Maxtor Corp., a leading manufacturer of high-capacity, high-performance disk drives, holds 75 percent interest in Maxoptix, which designs, markets and manufactures optical storage products.

Maxoptix manufactures the Tahiti I magneto-optical disk drive that can use the 650MB ANSI/ISO standard cartridge as well as the Maxoptix-developed 1GB cartridge. Kubota, which owns the rest of the company, is Japan's largest manufacturer of agricultural equipment and an investor in several Silicon Valley high-technology firms.

The company also announced the resignations of Gari Grimm, WordStar's president and chief executive officer, and Jim Dalrymple, WordStar's general manager and chief financial officer. The board of directors indicated that it believes Grimm had accomplished the task of reducing the company's operating expenses, and her decision to resign was amicable on both sides.

The board of directors, through a search committee headed by Stanley Cohen, is actively looking for replacements for these positions.

Revenue for the fourth quarter and fiscal year 1990 were lower than the like quarters of the prior year due to lower revenue and unit sales in the retail and government channels in North America.

In anticipation of this lower revenue level, the company implemented a cost reduction program in the latter half of fiscal 1990 resulting in lower operating expenses in the third and fourth quarters of the year.

The challenge for the coming year, according to company officials, will be to improve revenue and unit sales, introduce new products and continue the cost-reduction program.

PITTSBURGH (OCT. 5) BUSINESS WIRE - W.R. Grace & Co. (NYSE:GRA) Friday announced that it has exercised the first installment of its option to purchase additional equity in NOXSO Corp. (NASDAQ:NOXO), a Pittsburgh-based firm that has developed a patented acid rain control process.

The option permits Grace to purchase up to 908,314 shares for $2.257 per share in 36 equal monthly installments through 1993. If Grace exercises the option in full, the total exercise price would be slightly more than $2 million and Grace would own approximately 26 percent of NOXSO.

The option was granted in 1987 as part of three agreements executed between the two companies. These agreements established Grace as the licensed manufacturer of the patented sorbent used in NOXSO's acid rain control process.

''This purchase illustrates Grace's commitment to the NOXSO process and to the team organized to commercialize the process,'' stated Dr. L.G. Neal, president of NOXSO. Other team members building both a pilot and commercial scale demonstration of the NOXSO process include MK-Ferguson and Ohio Edison.

According to Dr. F. Peter Boer, executive vice president of W.R. Grace & Co., ''This additional investment by Grace represents our commitment to the results

NOXSO has achieved over the past few years. In addition to advancing its technology to curb smokestack emissions, it has made impressive strides toward setting up and commercializing this novel process.''

NOXSO Corp.'s business is the commercialization of the company's patented acid rain control process. The NOXSO process simultaneously removes 90 percent of sulfur and nitrogen oxides, the two pollutants emitted from coal fired utility plants' flue gas which cause acid rain, while producing essentially no solid or liquid wast.

SUNNYVALE, CALIF.(OCT. 5) BUSINESS WIRE - MIPS Computer Systems Inc. (NASDAQ:MIPS) Friday stated that preliminary financial information indicates total revenue for the third quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990, will be between $36 million and $38 million.

The expected revenue will be lower than the total revenue of $39.6 million recorded in the second quarter ended June 30, 1990, and will show significant growth from the $27.1 million recorded in the third quarter of 1989.

An increase in operating expenses from the preceding quarter in anticipation of revenue growth, coupled with the expected revenue figure may result in a modest loss for the quarter.

Third quarter systems revenue was impacted principally by the company's high-end system, the RC6280.

While production of the RC6280 increased significantly in the third quarter from second quarter levels, continued shortages of critical R6000 components resulted in lower than anticipated revenue shipments in the third quarter.

Technology licensing revenue should be within the company's expected range for the quarter and will include significant technology licensing agreements with a related party.

Robert C. Miller, MIPS Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, said: ''Naturally we are disappointed by the preliminary third quarter results. However, we have seen steady improvement in the supply of R6000 components for the RC6280 and this system continues to generate great interest with our customers.

MIPS sells its systems through OEM, VAR and reseller channels, and to system integrators worldwide. The company also licenses its technology to semiconductor companies, which supply components for the embedded control and computer markets.

SEATTLE (OCT.5) BUSINESS WIRE - Alaska Airlines has received Federal Aviation Administration approval for its fleet of Boeing 727-200 aircraft to take off in fog that would ground every other airline in the United States.

Alaska's 727-200s now are certified to take off with as little as 300 feet of runway visibility. Six hundred feet was the industry's previous lowest take off visibility level.

''This is a dramatic development, and a timely one as we're now entering heavy fog season,'' said Pat Glenn, Alaska's vice president of flight operations.

''The certification process was rigorous, but the results will be immediate - fog-related disruptions will be slashed. And that means passengers will spend more time in the air than in the terminal.''

Airports must be certified by the FAA to handle aircraft executing take offs in thick fog, Glenn noted.

Seattle-Tacoma International, Alaska's busiest airport, is expected to gain certification this month. Alaska plans to work with officials in other fog-plagued West Coast cities to get those airports certified as well. Portland, Seattle and Los Angeles airports are among the nation's foggiest.

Alaska's fog-busting capabilities come from an innovative avionics device called the HGS-1000 head-up guidance system, developed by Flight Dynamics Inc. of Portland. In operation, HGS looks like an advanced computer game. It converts signals transmitted by on-board sensors and airport radio navigational systems into a holographic image of the approaching runway. This, along with altitude, air speed and other flight guidance data is projected onto a glass screen positioned between the pilot's eyes and the aircraft windshield.

While this technology is used in advanced jet fighters, Alaska is the only airline in the world to install such an advanced system on a fleet of passenger aircraft.

Alaska has invested $12 million equipping its 727-200s with the devices and training pilots to use them. Alaska has used the HGS on passenger flights for about a year, but only on landings, Glenn said. ''These new capabilities at take off complete the equation. The results will be tangible,'' he said.

He noted that the HGS would have prevented all but a handful of Alaska's 299 flight cancellations and delays in December 1985 when a thick blanket of fog enveloped Sea-Tac Airport for 10 days.

In addition to fog busting, HGS features the most sophisticated windshear early warning and guidance mechanism.

Seattle-based Alaska Airlines serves 35 cities in Alaska, Mexico and five Western states.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (OCT. 5) BUSINESS WIRE - NYNEX Corporation will demonstrate several unique customer applications of SMDSsm service at the INTEROP 90 trade show, which will be held October 10-12 in San Jose, Calif.

SMDS service provides users with wide area multi-megabit data connectivity.

The NYNEX demonstrations are part of a cooperative effort by the company and three other regional holding companies - BellSouth, Pacific Bell and Southwestern Bell - designed to underscore the potential of SMDS technology as a means of interconnecting local area networks (LANS).

''SMDS answers the needs of large customers for wide area networking while avoiding the high cost of dedicated facilities,'' said NYNEX's Wayne Zuckerman Managing Director - Large and Medium Business Markets. ''Customers will pay only for what they use.''

NYNEX will demonstrate a multimedia group conferencing service that allows simultaneous transmission of documents between users for real-time viewing and collaborative editing by the users.

In addition, the company will demonstrate two prototype applications for network management of SMDS service. The first application, NYNEX NetWindow network management system, identifies and diagnoses any failures in the SMDS network, thus guaranteeing network reliability.

The second, NYNEX LANPATH manager, is a customer premise network management prototype that shows how SMDS can be managed as part of a customer's broader network where SMDS is used to interconnect LANS.

''These demonstrations will enable both customers and vendors to visualize the robustness and capabilities of SMDS to fill a void in the area of LAN interconnectivity.'' said Zuckerman. ''We are interested in working with business customers to develop SMDS as a viable choice for high-speed data communications.''

LOS ANGELES (OCT. 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Leisure Technology (NYSE:LVX) announced Friday that its board of directors decided that the company will not make the semi-annual interest payment due on Oct. 15 on its 15-3/4 percent Senior Notes (AMEX:LVXB) due in 1999.

''The company is considering various strategies relating to the notes, of which there are $40 million outstanding, although no proposal has been formulated at this time,'' said Michael L. Tenzer, chairman of the board and chief executive officer.

''The Board determined not to make this interest payment as a result of working capital shortages caused by a severe additional deterioration in the housing markets served by the company during the last quarter,'' Tenzer said.

''As part of our strategy to respond to continued negative cash flow from operations, Leisure Technology yesterday executed a letter of intent with a substantial company for a financing facility which, if consummated, will provide additional working capital,'' Tenzer said. ''Further action is required in addition to this financing. The company intends to meet with its secured lenders within the next few weeks to develop and implement a restructuring plan,'' Tenzer added.

Tenzer said that revenue from Leisure Technology's housing operations for the second quarter ended Sept. 30 totaled an estimated $11.8 million, excluding $3.2 million in revenue from a non-consolidated joint venture which owns Leisure Village Ocean Hills, an active adult community in North San Diego County, Calif. This compares to revenue of $39.4 million for the same quarter one year earlier and $22.1 million during the first quarter of the current fiscal year.

Backlog at Sept. 30, 1990, June 30, 1990, and Sept. 30, 1989 was $32.6 million (excluding Leisure Village Ocean Hills backlog of $6.1 million), $48.3 million and $98.5 million, respectively.

Leisure Technology, founded in 1957, is the largest publicly-owned nationwide developer of active adult communities and is currently developing active adult single family or full-service retirement communities in New Jersey, New York, Florida, Illinois and Calfifornia.

CHICAGO (OCT. 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Molecular Biosystems Inc. (NYSE:MB) Friday commented on several findings presented Thursday at the Fifth Annual "Advances in Echocardiography Symposium'' sponsored by the University of Chicago.

The findings were reported by scientific and clinical investigators who have been conducting pre-clinical and clinical studies using Albunex, MBI's proprietary ultrasound contrast agent.

The most significant findings involved the observation of myocardial perfusion after intravenous injection of Albunex. Mark Monaghan, M.Sc., of Kings College Medical Center in London, reported data that was suggestive of myocardial perfusion in patients.

Additionally, Sanjiv Kaul, M.D., associate professor of medicine at the University of Virginia in Charlottesville, reported that myocardial perfusion was visually observed after intravenous injections in dogs.

It is estimated that the majority of patients who undergo routine echocardiography (6 million tests annually in the United States) may be candidates to receive Albunex if myocardial perfusion information could be obtained.

A number of other studies were presented, including data from MBI's Albunex Phase III clinical trials in the United States and Phase II clinical trials in Japan. Linda Crouse, M.D., of the Mid-American Cardiology Association in Kansas City, Mo., reported on Phase III Albunex clinical studies involving 175 adult echocardiography patients at eight centers.

Crouse concluded from these studies that contrast echocardiography using intravenously administered Albunex improves endocardial border delineation in 79 percent of patients when scored by the investigators and in 84 percent of patients when graded by the blinded reviewers.

The Fifth Annual University of Chicago Symposium on Advances in Echocardiography is being held at the Knickerbocker Hotel in Chicago and runs through Friday.

Molecular Biosystems Inc., located in San Diego, is a leading biomedical firm developing proprietary medical products that diagnose human disease, including Albunex, an injectable contrast agent for use in ultrasound imaging. In addition, it is a leading developer of direct, non-radioactively labelled genetic probe products.

CHELSEA, MA (OCT. 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Town & Country Corporation (AMEX:TNC) today reported a decrease in revenues and a loss in the company's historically weakest second fiscal quarter which ended August 31, 1990.

Management cited continued softness in the economy and disappointing sales in its scholastic and recogition businesses as the primary reasons for the decline.

Consolidated net sales for the second quarter were $86.2 million down $2.8 millon from last year's $89.0 million. The loss for the quarter was $3.2 million, slightly less than the comparable quarter's loss of $3.5 million in fiscal 1990. On a per share basis, the loss for the second quarter was $0.27 compared with $0.29 a year ago.

For the six months of fiscal 1991, sales totaled $186.0 million compared with $194.1 million last year. The six-month loss was $3.0 million, versus last year's loss of $2.8 million. The per share loss was $0.25 compared with a $0.23 loss in fiscal 1990.

C. William Carey, Town & Country chairman and chief executive officer, said, ''Uncertain economic conditions and diminished consumer confidence continued to affect U.S. retailing during our second quarter, and many of our customers maintained a conservative posture with regard to inventory and inventory replenishment. Although we are disappointed with our overall performance, our traditional jewelry manufacturing companies were close to internal sales projections.

''On a positive note, sales at Little Switzerland, our luxury products retailing group in the Caribbean, reported a second quarter sales increase over last year.

''Looking ahead to our second half, we remain optimistic that our third and fourth quarters will track our historical revenue and income patterns. However, with prevailing market conditions, no one can predict with any degree of confidence what consumer attitudes will be. Therefore, during the second half of the year we will concentrate our efforts on reducing operating expenses and strengthening our balance sheet,'' the Town & Country chief executive concluded.

Town & Country Corporation is an international manufacturer of fine jewelry with facilities in Massachusetts, New York, Texas, Hong Kong and Bangkok. The company also operates the Little Switzerland luxury products retailing network which is headquartered in St. Thomas, Virgin Islands. Little Switzerland sells upscale jewelry, watches, crystal, china and fragrances in Caribbean free-port locations.

LONDON (OCT. 5) BUSINESS WIRE - At its Ninth Annual General Meeting, members of the International Petroleum Exchange passed a resolution to expand its present membership structure in favor of seat splitting.

Under the new regulations, each of the existing 35 Floor Member Seats will be converted on a two to one basis with four trading rights attached to each seat.

Over the past two years there has been an increasing demand for IPE memberships and the Exchange has recognized the need to broaden its capacity.

The new structure offers greater flexibility whereby existing members have the right to retain both seats or, alternatively sell or lease their additional seat. As a result new members can enter the market which, it is envisaged, would attract new customer business and further increase liquidity.

''This is an important step in the development of the Exchange and one which I am sure will help us remain competitive, encourage growth and increase turnover for each member,'' said Peter Wildblood, IPE's chief executive.

At the same meeting two new directors were elected to the board of the IPE; Rob Cole, Trafalgar Commodities Limited and Anthony Norton, GNI Wallace Limited.

MEMPHIS, TN (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Union Planters Corp. (NYSE:UPC) Friday announced the retirement of Robert F. Fogelman from the board of directors of the corporation and its largest subsidiary Union Planters National Bank.

A spokesman for the corporation said that Fogelman tendered his resignation in a letter dated Sept. 27, 1990, and that no specific reason was given in the letter. The spokesman said that Fogelman had provided valuable service and input to both organizations since his election as a director in 1985.

Fogelman spends a great deal of time away form the city and the spokesman speculated that this might be part of the reason for the resignation. Fogelman, who will continue to be a friend and supporter of both organizations, has not disposed of any shares according to the most recent SEC filings and insofar as it is known has no immediate plans to do so.

During his time with the company, he helped build Diamond Shamrock into one of the largest independent marketing and refining companies in the United States.

Currently a resident of Boerne, Texas, Mark is considered by some to be ''the father of the petrochemical industry'' in the United States because of his work in building the first BTX (benzene, toluene, xylene) plant and marketing its three products for Cosden Petroleum, now known as American Petrofina.

DALLAS (OCT. 5) BUSINESS WIRE - The Securities and Exchange Commission has approved Central and South West Corp.'s (NYSE:CSR) application to reactivate its CSW Energy Inc., unit with authority to spend as much as $75 million to develop non-utility projects.

William R. Stratton has been named president of CSW Energy. He had been senior vice president of finance for Public Service Co. of Oklahoma, a CSW operating company, since 1980.

Stratton said that, as a startup company, CSW Energy is not likely to have any break-through announcements in the immediate future.

''But over the long run--with the capabilities CSW brings to non-utility generation--we should emerge as a significant player in a major subset of America's electric power industry.

''Over the next decade, it seems likely that non-utility enterprises will build half the new generating capacity in the United States,'' Stratton said.

Pending the SEC's approval, the staff of CSW Energy had been looking at marketing opportunities and discussing joint-venture affiliations with independent developers.

CSW Energy will get a first look at projects originated by several independent developers. ''Those that seem meritorious, we will follow through by providing financial, engineering and environmental support,'' Stratton said.

Central and South West Corp. is a Dallas-based public utility holding company. In addition to CSW Energy, it owns four electric operating subsidiaries that serve customers in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas. It also owns an Oklahoma intrastate natural-gas pipeline subsidiary.

EAST HARTFORD, CT (OCT. 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Friday, KCR Technology Inc. (NASDAQ:KCRT) and its major shareholder, Moore Business Forms Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Moore Corp. Ltd. (NYSE:MCL), made the following joint announcement.

Effective immediately, KCR will stop the active manufacturing, marketing and sale of its direct charge deposition non-impact printers. The currently installed base of some 18 machines will continue to be fully serviced and maintained by KCR personnel and will continue to provide feedback to KCR management concerning product capability and required enhancements. KCR operations will be refocused and will concentrate on the completion of several critical development projects which are necessary to refine its printer product.

For the immediate future, Moore Business Forms Inc. has agreed to provide the funding necessary to finance the restructured operations of KCR and its critical development projects.

Recently, Moore and KCR commenced an active search for a strategic investor partner who could leverage the proprietary printing technology which KCR has developed. Preliminary interest in this technology has emerged, and Moore and KCR have agreed to use their best efforts to attract a strategic partner. Possible terms and parties were not disclosed. If an acceptable strategic partner arrangement cannot be negotiated, it is unlikely that the company would be able to continue.

While Moore has successfully developed specialized ion deposition printing technology for use in its manufacturing operations, it has concluded that the manufacture and sale of printer products, such as those developed by KCR, is outside its corporate business mission. Therefore, both KCR and Moore recognize the need to place the KCR technology with a partner who has a demonstrated capability to manufacture and sell non-impact printers.

The announced restructuring will best position KCR to take full advantage of any strategic arrangement. Moore and KCR believe that such an arrangement would offer the best opportunities for KCR and its stockholders.

WOBURN, MA (OCT. 5) BUSINESS WIRE - MedChem Products Inc. (AMEX: MCH) announced Friday that its board of directors has adopted a shareholder rights plan in which preferred stock purchase rights will be distributed as a dividend at the rate of one right for each share of common stock held as of the close of business Oct. 9, 1990.

Dr. David A. Swann, chairman of board, said the rights plan ''was not adopted in response to any actual or anticipated takeover threat, but reflected a decision by the board that such a plan could benefit the company and its shareholders if such a threat ever arose.''

He stated that the rights plan ''would not restrict consideration by the board of any offer on terms favorable to all shareholders, but it is intended to protect the interests of shareholders in the event the company is confronted with coercive or unfair takeover tactics.''

Each right will entitle the holders of the company's common stock to purchase 1/100 of a share of preferred stock in the company at an excercise price of $25. The rights will be excercisable only if a person or group has acquired beneficial ownership of 20 percent or more of the common stock or announces a tender or exchange offer that would result in such person or group owning 30 percent of more of the common stock.

If, after the rights become more exercisable, certain further events occur involving the potential acquiring person or group, such as a merger or increase in beneficial ownership of common stock by such person or group, each right not owned by a 20 percent or more shareholder will enable its holder to purchase at an exercise price of $25 that number of shares of the company's common stock which equals the excercise price of the right divided by one-half of the current market price of such common stock at the date of the occurence of the event.

The company will generally be entitled to redeem the rights at 1 cent per share at any time until the 10th day (unless otherwise extended by the board) following public announcement that a 20 percent stock position has been acquired and in certain other circumstances. The rights will expire on Oct. 9, 2000 unless earlier redeemed or exchanged.

WELLINGTON (OCT. 5) - New Zealand Prime Minister Mike Moore pledged Friday his government would hold firm to its economic goal of achieving zero to two per cent inflation by the end of 1992.

In a campaign speech leading up to October 27's general election Mr. Moore told the Auckland Chamber of Commerce that if re-elected his government would sit down with business, industry and working people to get advice on macro-economic policy.

The government's inflation target has been controversial here and the opposition National Party pledges the same inflation goal but by 1993. Several key opposition figures have criticised the targets.

Mr. Moore said economic growth would be the key to creating a socially just economy. The government would continue to take measures to reduce the public debt and keep inflation under control.

He said pressure would be taken off interest rates and the general requirement for taxation would be controlled by maintaining a balance between government income and spending.

Mr. Moore, who is also trade and foreign minister, said it was a major concern to New Zealand that the Uruguay round of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), due to wind up in Brussels in December, leads to free trade in agricultural goods.

The liberalisation of world trade could increase the average international price of dairy products by 61 per cent and lift beef prices 21 per cent, he said.

SYDNEY (OCT. 5) - Australia is looking to expand its economic links with Taiwan to acknowledge more adequately the blossoming trade between the two countries, government sources indicated Friday.

The Australian Government has long been criticised by segments of business because of what is perceived to be an inconsistent policy that prevents official contact with Taiwan for fear of offending Beijing.

Yet trade with Taiwan was worth 3.8 billion dollars (3.2 billion U.S.) last year, while trade with mainland China was worth only 2.4 billion dollars (two billion U.S.).

Other South-East Asian countries such as Japan and Singapore have managed to forge closer, though still unofficial, ties with Taiwan without upsetting China and now Australia is under pressure to do the same.

Foreign Minister Gareth Evans is studying a comprehensive and confidential assessment prepared by his bureaucrats which presents options for how this could be done.

However, Mr Evans' staff say the choices stop short of ending the present one-China policy, which recognises Beijing as the legitimate government and Taiwan as a province.

Mr. Evans said last month that the report, which he described as quite a sensitive policy exercise, would remain confidential while he made informed judgments on it.

Many private companies keen to exploit new business opportunities with Taiwan often find themselves frustrated by the simple lack of official Australian representation.

The Opposition and a number of business groups say this is costing Australia millions of dollars in business each year.

As a result, the government is being encouraged to open direct contact with the Taiwan authorities for trade talks.

A decision had already been made to assign extra staff to the Australian Commerce and Industry Office in Taipei, partially funded by the government but officially run by the Australian Chamber of Commerce.

The new staff are likely to be involved in the sort of work that would normally be done by embassies or consulates, such as immigration procedures.

Although visas are issued in Taiwan, they are regarded as having been issued in Hong Kong, the kind of inconsistency the government wants eliminated.

TAIPEI (OCT. 5) - Soaring crude oil prices and a domestic economic stagnation pushed Taiwan's annual inflation up to 6.5 percent in September, the highest in nine years, economic officials said Friday.

The officials with the Directorate General of Budget, Accounting and Statistics attributed the surge in the September consumer price index mainly to hikes in transportation charges on the island, which followed domestic fuel price increases in the previous month.

Sluggish economic activity amidst a declining local stock market, rising fresh vegetable prices after typhoon damage and higher costs of education and clothing had also pushed the index up from August's 5.63 percent, they said.

In the face of soaring crude prices stemming from uncertainty in the Middle East, the agency predicted that inflationary pressure would continue and the index would be over five percent for the coming month.

The agency had adjusted the projected inflation rate for this year to 4.2 percent from 3.64 percent, it said.

WELLINGTON (OCT. 5) - New Zealand's deer industry earned itself 84 million New Zealand dollars (51 million dollars U.S.) in the year to June, the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries reported Friday.

This was 30 percent up on earnings for the same period last year.

Deer velvet sales accounted for 51 percent of the earnings, the report said.

Deer, introduced into New Zealand early this century, caused serious environmental problems and in the 1970s were hunted by helicopter gunships with their carcasses being left to rot in the mountains.

Today deer farming is an extensive industry and any wild deer are plucked from the mountains with nets and flown to farms.

TOKYO (OCT. 5) - Kirin Brewery Co., Ltd. said Friday it would set up a joint venture with the top U.S. fruit juice maker Tropicana Products Inc. to sell Tropicana fruit juice on the Japanese market from next year.

The joint venture, to be called "Kirin-Tropicana" and equally owned by Japan's top beer brewer and Tropicana, will market Tropicana-produced orange and other natural juices from next March, ahead of liberalization of orange juice imports in the spring of 1992, Kirin officials said.

Kirin-Tropicana also will develop juices for Japanese tastes, with its annual sales targed at 100 billion yen (752 million dollars) in 1994.

Kirin Brewery, already tied up with Tropicana's parent firm Seagrams in whisky production, had sales totaling 1.2 trillion yen (nine billion dollars) in the 12 months to March this year.

KUALA LUMPUR (OCT. 5) - Malaysia produced 2,358 tons of tin-in-concentrates in July, down from 2,417 tons in June and 2,881 tons a year earlier, Bernama news agency said Friday.

Cumulative production in the first seven months of the year fell 3.6 percent to 17,753 tons from 18,414 tons in the same period last year, Bernama said, citing figures released by the Department of Statistics.

Malaysia imported 1,771 tons of tin-in-concentrates in July compared to 1,530 tons in June and 705 tons a year earlier while imports in the first seven months fell to 12,225 tons from 12,526 tons previously.

The imports were mainly from Australia (4,947 tons), Canada (2,312 tons) and China (1,570 tons).

Malaysia's tin metal export fell to 3,309 tons in July from 3,416 tons in June and 4,172 tons a year earlier.

Cumulative exports in the first seven months fell to 28,386 tons from 30,382 tons in the same period last year.

The main buyers were the Netherlands (6,769 tons), Japan (6,488 tons), the United States (4,340 tons) and South Korea (2,358 tons).

CAPE CANAVERAL, FLORIDA (OCT. 5) - A loose metal beam went crashing through the engine compartment of the space shuttle Atlantis, damaging plumbing and insultation, while the shuttle was being moved here on Wednesday, the NASA disclosed Thursday.

Forrest McCartney, director of the Kennedy Space Center, said it was too soon to tell whether the damage would delay Atlantis' mission in early November. Hydrogen leaks have already delayed the secret military mission.

Workers heard the 32-kilogram (70-pound) beam banging around the engine compartment as the orbiter was being raised to a vertical position in an assembly building on Wednesday, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said.

The workers were unable to open the compartment until Thursday, after the solid rocket boosters and external tank were attached to the shuttle.

The beam dented some insulation covering interior components and plumbing, said Mr. McCartney said.

The bright yellow beam, measuring 2.7 meters (nine feet) long, was left by an experienced crew and paperwork indicated that everything had been removed, he said.

In Washington, meanwhile, a federal judge was expected to rule Friday whether Discovery's launch, carrying a nuclear-powered sun probe into space, will be allowed to proceed.

NASA said the countdown for Discovery's liftoff at 7:35 a.m. (1135 GMT) Saturday, which began Wednesday, was continuing without mishap.

The plutonium-powered probe Ulysses is to speed toward Jupiter and use the planet's gravity to boomerang into orbit around the sun. It is to explore the sun's poles in 1994 and 1995.

Environmentalists opposed to the probe's plutonium generator asked U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch Thursday to delay the mission for at least a year, basing their appeal on NASA's inability to send up a shuttle in nearly six months.

They accused NASA of ignoring the danger that would result from an accident involving the 10.8 kilograms (23.7 pounds) of radioactive plutonium-238.

The space agency has been dogged by months of embarrassing failures. Columbia has been grounded by hydrogen leaks since May, Atlantis since June.

NASA must launch Columbia by October 23 or wait 13 months for the proper planet alignment for the Ulysses mission.

WIESBADEN, GERMANY (OCT. 5) - Unified Germany had a trade surplus of 7.5 billion Deutsche marks (4.8 billion dollars) in August, the federal statistics office said here Friday.

The current balance of payments surplus for the whole of Germany stood at 3.4 billion marks (2.19 billion dollars) for the same month, the office said.

They were the first trade and balance of payments figures to be issued for the whole of Germany, after the unification of East and West Germany took effect Wednesday.

The economy ministry said Friday that industrial orders in the former West Germany rose five per cent in August over the July level, with foreign orders down one per cent but domestic orders up eight per cent.

HANOI (OCT. 5) - Vietnam has adopted tough measures to face up to an energy crunch stemming from cuts in Soviet oil supplies and a rise in crude prices caused by the Gulf crisis.

Experts say the situation could deteriorate if the Gulf crisis continues and as Hanoi begins next year to pay for Soviet oil shipments at international market rates and with scarce hard currency.

The Hanoi Moi daily said Friday that authorities had adopted stiff measures "to improve distribution and make radical cutbacks in consumption" of motor fuels.

The belt-tightening, according to Hanoi Moi, will be felt throughout government -- including in the defense and interior ministries -- whose "needs will be tightly controlled."

A noticeable decrease in Vietnam's petroleum supplies has recently prompted rationing in various parts of the country and price hikes at the gas pump on the open market in the past three weeks.

In Ho Chi Minh City, the economic hub of the nation, the price of gas doubled three weeks ago from 1,500 dong (23 U.S. cents) to 3,000 dong (45 cents) a liter.

Gas is selling in Hanoi at 2,200 dong (35 cents) against 1,100 dong (18 cents) two weeks ago.

The widely respected Vietnamese economic weekly, Market and Price, said the prices of petroleum products were expected to continue climbing in October due to increases in imported fuel prices.

Experts said the pressure on prices was largely due to decreases in Soviet exports of oil to Vietnam, which has begun buying from Japan and Singapore at the higher market prices caused by Iraq's August 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Up to now, the Soviet Union has supplied Vietnam with 80 per cent of its total yearly refined imports of three million tonnes on a barter basis at below market rates.

Vietnam, though a crude oil producer itself, has no refineries and so must import refined oil.

"Soviet sources of motor fuel under previous accords are now uncertain," the Hanoi Moi said. "And beginning in 1991, we will not be able to take advantage of Soviet loans to buy their surplus oil."

"Fuel requirements in production and daily life are increasing while our supply of hard currency remains weak," the daily said.

The number of motorcycles and mopeds on the road, and more recently of private cars, has increased in Vietnam in the past two years, and motorized vehicles are slowly overtaking bicycles as the main means of transport.

Among the measures the government has implemented is a ban on the private use of government vehicles and an "energetic and effective" battle against the theft of state fuel supplies -- currently a wide-scale problem.

The state's joint venture firm with the Soviet Union, Vietsopetro, announced recently it had increased production in the first six months of the year to 1.2 million tonnes and had targetted 2.5 million tonnes of crude for the whole year.

Western oil companies, including British Petroleum, the Anglo-Dutch group Shell and the French company Total are currently exploring for oil in Vietnamese waters.

RANGOON (OCT. 5) - Burma's military government revoked the accreditation of Frederick Vreeland as U.S. ambassador to Burma, a spokesman of the government information committee said Friday.

Lieutenant-Colonel Ye Htut said the decision was taken Thursday at a council of ministers' meeting presided by senior general Saw Maung, chairman of the State Law and Order Restoration Council, and officially conveyed to the U.S. embassy in Rangoon.

The spokesman said Vreeland's accreditation was approved by the government on June 9.

On October 2, a BBC broadcast quoted Vreeland as saying that the economic sanctions by the U.S. and some other governments were justified in view of the Burmese government's failure to hand over power to the political party which won the elections in May and to release political prisoners.

"Mr. Vreeland has thereby shown himself to be a person likely to view the affairs of Burma in a bad light," the spokesman said.

The spokesman also alleged that the U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee had discovered that Vreeland was a career intelligence official, having served the Central Intelligence Agency for 33 years under cover of a diplomatic official.

The expulsion of Vreeland is Burma's first revocation of diplomatic accreditation since independence in 1948.

BONN (OCT. 5) - Industrial orders for West German firms jumped five percent in August compared to July, the sharp growth triggered by a boom in domestic demand, Bonn said Friday.

The Economics Ministry said that domestic demand in the western part of Germany jumped eight percent from July to August, while foreign orders rose just one percent.

Comparing the two-month period July-August 1990 to the same two months last year, the ministry said industrial orders were 9.2 percent higher by volume and 10.8 percent higher in value.

While domestic demand in July-August 1990 was up by 14.6 percent, foreign demand was only 0.2 percent higher, the ministry noted.

Meanwhile in Wiesbaden, the Federal Office of Statistics said that for Germany taken as a whole, the country showed a surplus in foreign trade in eight-month January-August period.

The office said combined East and West German exports reached 454.9 billion marks (297 billion dollars), up 1.2 percent, to imports of 370.8 billion marks up 3.7 percent.

At the same time, the the balance on current accounts dropped to a surplus of 84.1 billion marks, down from 91.8 billion marks surplus in the same eight-month period of 1989, the office said.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 5) - Britain's Diana, Princess of Wales was guest of honor here at a charity gala organized to benefit art and AIDS-inflicted babies, with patrons paying at least 2,500 dollars per ticket to attend.

For 1,000 dollars more, donators could shake hands with the 29-year-old princess at a reception.

Organizers said 260 tickets were sold. The Departmental Hall, where the gala was held Thursday night, was well short of full.

The event was organized to benefit the Washington Ballet, the London City Ballet, the British-American Arts Association and Grandma's House, a Washington home for babies with Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS).

The princess, who has shown a longstanding interest in both the arts and AIDS victims, arrived here Thursday. She had afternoon tea at the British ambassador's residence before the gala began.

She is scheduled to meet Friday with First Lady Barbara Bush at the White House and then visit Grandma's House before returning to Britain.

It was the princess' second trip to the United States without her husband, Prince Charles, and her first trip outside Britain this year.

LOS ANGELES (OCT. 5) - Iraq has high-explosive devices that have the equivalent power of small nuclear bombs and the United States has no ready defense against the weapon, the Los Angeles Times reported Friday.

The fuel-air explosives, known as FAEs, have 10 times the destructive power of conventional explosives without the radiation fallout of a nuclear weapon, the newspaper said.

FAEs, which can be launched as bombs from airplanes or as warheads on missiles create a huge fireball and shock wave over a concentrated area, the paper said.

The Los Angeles Times reported that Pentagon officials have said the United States has no defense in place against the FAEs.

The United States does not carry FAEs in its arsenal.

"These are blast-effect weapons, and what you can't see can kill you," Henry Sokolski of the Defense Department's international security affairs office was quoted as saying.

U.S. forces would have the most difficulty defending against a missile-delivered FAE, military officials said. But there is no clear evidence that Iraq has the capability of mounting the explosives on missiles, they added.

Five senators have requested in a letter to Defense Secretary Dick Cheney that he launch an investigation to determine Iraq's supply of FAEs.

According to the newspaper, earlier reports indicated that the German arms industry had supplied Iraq with the scientific knowledge to build the FAEs.

Messerschmitt-Bolkow-Blohm, a major German aerospace and defense firm, conducted feasibility studies on an FAE device while participating in a missile project with the Egyptian government.

A company spokesman said that project was terminated in 1988.

The German magazine Der Spiegel and the British Broadcasting Corporation have reported that Egypt gave the studies to Iraq.

A congressional investigator, whom the newspaper did not identify, said that U.S. technology may have also been involved.

According to Pentagon sources, the devices are in the arsenals of China, France, Israel, the Soviet Union, Spain, Germany and perhaps some third world nations, in addition to Iraq.

KABUL (OCT. 5) - Mujahedeen resistance fighters have overrun a provincial capital in central Afghanistan after attacking a 500-man strong garrison, a top Afghan military officer acknowledged here Friday.

Deputy Defence Minister Mohammad Nabi Azimi told reporters that an unspecified number of mujahedeen surprised the "small garrison" in Tarin Kot, the capital of Uruzgan province overnight Wednesday.

"Through the betrayal of the governor (Abdul Shakoor) and some of his colleagues, they (the mujahedeen) were able to come and take Tarin Kot," General Azimi said, confirming mujahedeen claims that they had captured the town.

Tarin Kot is the first provincial capital to fall into the hands of the mujahedeen since Soviet troops completed their withdrawal from Afghanistan in February of last year.

Gen. Azimi said several security posts in the province had also fallen and that the fate of the 500 men in the Tarin Kot garrison was not immediately clear.

He said government troops had however put up a "brave fight" defending the garrison, though they had failed in the end.

"Mujahedeen casualties may have been very heavy," he said.

"The fall of the small town of one and a half square kilometers (one square mile) cannot be compared to the successes of government troops (elsewhere in the country) against the enemy," he said, adding that the government would shortly recapture the town.

A government spokesman late Thursday had denied mujahedeen claims that Tarin Kot had fallen following three weeks of secret negotiations between the resistance and the governor.

Diplomats here said the loss of Tarin Kot would be a serious embarrassament to the government of President Najibullah, who has been consolidating his position both militarily and politically since the Soviet withdrawal.

Gen. Azimi accused the Pakistani military and its intelligence wing of supporting and fuelling the mujahedeen attacks against key towns and against the capital of Kabul.

He said he had "reliable reports" that the Pakistani military intelligence agency, the Inter Services Intelligence (ISI) had given the mujahedeen two months to take a key town inside Afghanistan before winter sets in, slowing the current fighting season.

SINGAPORE (OCT. 5) - Singapore will lift its ban on investments in Vietnam and Cambodia as soon as the Supreme National Council of Cambodia is represented at the United Nations, it was announced here Friday.

A foreign ministry statement said the government would lift the ban imposed earlier this year in view of recent developments that have significantly improved prospects for a political settlement in Cambodia.

Singapore imposed a ban on its citizens' investing in Vietnam and Cambodia because of the Vietnamese invasion and occupation of Cambodia.

The statement said the ban would be lifted because of recent agreement among the various Cambodian factions to accept a U.N. plan for a comprehensive political settlement.

AMMAN (OCT. 5) - Jordan plans to limit traffic to help economize petrol consumption given the current Gulf crisis, an authoritative source said here Friday.

Prime Minister Moudar Badran had told reporters Thursday that rationing measures would be introduced "in the next two days" but added that "Jordan has sufficient oil reserves and is currently using them for its consumption."

Cars will be allowed to circulate on alternate days depending on whether they have even or odd licence plates, the source said.

In other measures to save energy, banks and offices will open only five days instead of six, but be allowed an extra hour every day, he said. Shops are to close at 7 p.m., much earlier than usual closing times.

Before the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait on August 2, Jordan imported 90 percent of its oil from Iraq at preferential rates.

It has continued to take delivery of Iraqi oil in repayment of debts, despite the international embargo against Baghdad. But the amount has dropped to 40 percent of its annual consumption of around 15 million barrels a year.

Jordan's Queen Noor said Wednesday in Washington that Amman was still receiving oil from Iraq because of the cut in supplies from Saudi Arabia and the international embargo against Baghdad.

"The Gulf crisis has dealt us an economic blow," the queen said in a speech at the Brookings Institute, a leading Washington think tank.

Amman says it will not stop importing Iraqi oil until an alternative arrangement is found. Saudi Arabia stopped oil exports to Jordan on September 19 in reprisal over Amman's refusal to condemn the Iraqi invasion.

MUNICH, Germany, Oct 5 (AFP) - German luxury car maker BMW is not worried for the future of the auto market even if the current situation in the United States is very difficult, board chairman Eberhard von Kuenheim said here.

"We have every reason to be satisfied," Mr. von Kuenheim told a press conference late Thursday. "We are in an exceptionally good overall situation for the ninth year running.

"We have already been getting ready for at least three years for a recession which never came. If it does happen -- although we are not too convinced by this scenario -- it would be a normal development and we have been preparing for it for a long time," he added.

He also noted that the steep rise in oil prices since the outbreak of the Gulf crisis in August had not so far had a noticeable effect on the rhythm of auto buying.

"In real terms, petrol is still cheaper than it was at the beginning of the 1970's," Mr. von Kuenheim said.

BMW's U.S. sales fell six per cent in the first nine months of this year, largely due to the dollar's weakness against the Deutsche mark, but Mr. von Kuenheim saw no reason to panic because of this development on the company's second largest market.

In volume terms, sales are expected to hold steady at 64,000 vehicles for the whole year, and this sector is still profitable even if the level of performance is not seen as satisfactory at the moment.

Overall sales in the first nine months of this year were up 0.1 per cent in volume terms over the same period last year at 388,000 vehicles while in money terms they were up 1.2 percent at 20 billion Deutsche marks (12.9 billion dollars).

Mr. von Kuenheim would not give a profit figure for the period, but said it was slightly higher than the first nine months of last year.

The group made a net profit of 558 million Deutsche marks (360 million dollars) for the whole of 1989.

On the thorny issue of Japanese car imports into Europe, Mr. von Kuenheim said that reciprocity was the key word.

"The Germans have always built their success with their borders open to competition," he said.

BONN (OCT. 5) - The German lower house, or Bundestag, on Friday adopted a new electoral law that creates two separate election zones for the all-German elections due in December.

The vote came less than week after the Constitutional Court invalidated an earlier electoral law adopted only last August.

Meeting for the first time in Bonn in joint session two days after East and West Germany merged, deputies agreed to create two separate electoral zones in the December 2 poll that will cover the two former states.

The move is aimed at offering smaller parties that spearheaded last year's democratization process in East Germany a chance to enter the new all-German parliament.

To take a seat in parliament, parties must now receive at least five per cent of the vote in either zone. The new law also authorizes electoral alliances -- different parties running together on the same list -- in former East Germany.

The high court Saturday ruled that the electoral law adopted by parliaments in Bonn and East Germany in August was unconstitutional because it posed unfair obstacles to smaller groups.

Without separate election zones, the five-per cent threshold would have meant that popular movements like New Forum, the ecological Greens, the reformed communist Party of Democratic Socialism (PDS) and the conservative German Social Union would be excluded from parliament.

Some of these groups might achieve five per cent of the votes in former East Germany but not of the votes in East and West combined.

The Greens, the PDS and the ultra-right Republicans had brought the case before the Constitutional Court in Karlsruhe.

The new electoral law is to go to the upper house, or Bundesrat, Monday.

Meanwhile in Berlin, a hot-air balloon bearing the colours of Europe which had been flown over the city's historic Brandenburg Gate during reunification celebrations Wednesday was stolen by unidentified people overnight Thursday.

The thieves made off with the deflated balloon, worth 60,000 Deutsche marks (39,000 dollars), its basket and a trailer where they had been stored, said Jean-Marc Culas of the French-German aerostat school at Strasbourg, France, and Baden-Baden, Germany.

EINDHOVEN, NETHERLANDS (OCT. 5) - British-based publishing group Maxwell and Dutch electronics giant Philips have agreed to develop a joint multi-media language project, it was announced here Friday.

The new company, Maxwell Multi Media, in which each side will hold an equal stake, will be based in London, Philips said. The amount of investment required for the language product was not given.

Philips later intended to collaborate with the Berlitz Publications language group, part of Maxwell-managed interests, to develop other language-teaching aids, Philips spokesman Jan Geel said.

A Dutch radio report said that the joint venture would result in the launch at the end of 1991 of inter-active language courses for schools, companies and individuals.

The programme would be carried on a new Philips product, the CD-1 compact disc. The hardware is capable of reading sound signals, text, graphics, photographs and animated pictures.

The radio quoted Philips president Jan Timmers as saying that the agreement represented a "very important development" for the electronics division.

Philips is undergoing radical restructuring of its loss-making computer division to cope with severe financial problems and plans to axe 10,000 jobs.

The Maxwell group recently announced that it was disposing of assets, notably in television, to reduce heavy borrowings.

PARIS (OCT. 5) - The Paris Appeals Court has ruled that surrogate motherhood is legal, reversing its own earlier decision which had outlawed the practice known popularly as "rent-a-womb", court sources said Friday.

The court ruled, in two decisions dating from June 15, that surrogate motherhood was legal as long as the biological mother consented to renounce the child voluntarily and permanently.

The decisions stated that the practice of surrogate motherhood did not contravene public order or morality, the sources said. The controversial practice enables sterile women to have a baby through a contract between her male partner and another woman who bears the child.

The court noted that there was no "social danger" as long as no money exchanged hands between the would-be parents and the surrogate mother, but refrained from explicitly banning paid contracts.

The court had been approached concerning the case of two baby girls, Marie and Elise born in 1987 and 1988, who were abandoned by their biological mother in order to be adopted by the wife of the babies' father.

The court noted that while adoption following a surrogate motherhood created an "artificial" parenthood, this was comparable to other legal situations such as the adoption of children abandoned at birth, or the official recognition of a child by adopted parents "irrespective of his real parenthood".

The practice was consequently in line with article 12 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights under which a family is constituted around the biological father.

On October 11, 1988 the same court had ruled that any surrogate mother contract was illegal under the civil code, notably arguing that a baby was "something outside commerce".

The state prosecutor's office said that the June 15 decisions could only be appealed exceptionally "in the interests of the law", and that they were final in the case of Marie and Elise.

The Paris Appeals Court is the most important of the 32 such tribunals in France.

NEW DELHI (OCT. 5) - Thousands of doctors and nurses boycotted hospitals and private clinics here Friday in an unprecedented show of solidarity with Indian students enraged over a caste-based government job quota scheme.

The Indian capital's eight main state-run hospitals shut down and physicians closed thousands of clinics in solidarity with the students protesting the August 7 decision that blocks almost half all state jobs for underprivileged lower castes.

"Only emergency services will function," Delhi Medical Association (DMA) member Inder Prakash Dhalla said as the one-day strike got under way at 9.30 a m. (0400 GMT).

Dr. Dhalla, who heads a doctors' protest action forum against the government reservation scheme, said some 20,000 physicians, surgeons and nurses had joined the strike in the first such mass protest in the capital.

More than 30,000 patients would be affected by Friday's boycott as five main medical associations were supporting the strike, he said amid reports that hospital orderlies and cleaners were also refusing to work.

A children's hospital, which treats some 2,500 patients daily, also closed down and senior faculty members and researchers boycotted classes and hospital wards in the prestigious All India Institute of Medical Sciences here.

The Delhi Nurses Union, which has thousands of members, boycotted work for two hours, and some 2,800 private practitioners and family physicians had been asked not to answer calls from their patients, Dr. Dhalla said.

"We cannot abandon admitted patients and thus the nurses will return to their wards after two hours," he said.

Groups of DMA doctors walked on foot through the crowded old city areas here, urging their colleagues to join the boycott in support of the student-led protest now raging across India's north and east, witnesses said.

BRUSSELS (Oct. 5) - A first contingent of Belgian paratroops arrived in the Rwandan capital Kigali, facing a rebel insurgency, a few hours after dawn on Friday, the private Belgian television channel RTL-TVI reported.

A Belgian journalist in Kigali told the channel that the soldiers landed without difficulty and joined French Foreign Legion troops sent into Kigali on Thursday. Their mission was to protect the airport.

Following reports of heavy fighting overnight, the only traffic on the streets of the Rwandan capital was a few official cars and military vehicles, said the journalist, who works for Le Soir newspaper.

He said that a special Air France flight was late on Friday to evacuate "women and children of a mix of nationalities". In Nairobi, meanwhile, several sources said 200 French people should leave Kigali if the plane was able to land.

In Bonn, a German Foreign Ministry spokesman said the 400 Germans in Rwanda would be helped to leave by the French. He said French and German people in Kigali would be flown to Zaire or Burundi in Transall planes, while those living in north or south Rwanda would be taken out by road convoy.

Belgium's Sabena airline meanwhile said it currently planned to maintain its five weekly flights to Kigali, though Air France cancelled one flight and Kenya Airways said it would not "risk its planes in a combat zone".

The Rwandan Defence Ministry has ordered people to stay at home following heavy fighting overnight around military bases, according to several reports in the region.

A large rebel force of Rwandan refugees and Ugandan army deserters swept into the small east central African country from neighbouring Uganda early on Tuesday in a well-organized operation apparently launched on Sunday.

The government of President Juvenal Habyarimana has asked for Belgian and French military assistance to the former Belgian colony, where about 1,600 Belgians and 670 French nationals live.

FRANKFURT (OCT. 5) - Deutsche Bundesbahn, the West German federal railway, foresees a record operating deficit of 6.2 billion marks (4.05 billion dollars) in 1991, under financial plans drafted by the executive board here Friday.

The deficit would surpass this year's losses expected to reach some 5.3 billion marks.

A railways spokesman said the plan must still be approved by the supervisory board on October 18.

The rise in the deficit was expected due to declining revenues coupled with rising costs, among others including the preparations going on to introduce the high-speed "Ice" train next year.

Under the financial plan, the railroad will have to borrow soem 5.1 billion marks, raising the Deutsche Bundesbahn's total debt load to around 52 billion marks. The Bonn government last year pledged to assume 12.6 billion marks of the railroad's old liabilities.

The spokesman said the 1991 budget figures do not include any costs involving the East German railroad, Deutsche Reichsbahn, which under the unification of Germany became a special asset of the West German railroad. It could not yet be foreseen when the fusion of the two railroads will be carried out.

COLOMBO (OCT. 5) - Thousands of Sri Lankans stranded in Kuwait are expected to leave the tiny emirate following Saudi Arabia's decision to open its borders to trapped Sri Lankans, officials said Friday.

Bradman Weerakoon, international affairs advisor to President Ranasinghe Premadasa, told reporters here that the stranded Sri Lankans now have two new options in their bid to return home.

They can either cross the Saudi Arabian border from southern Kuwait or travel home aboard an Indian ship that is currently unloading food for Indian nationals at the Kuwaiti port of Ulkassar, he said.

He said Saudi Arabia had agreed to open its borders to the Sri Lankans and that New Delhi had offered to repatriate Sri Lankans aboard the Indian ship.

"India has made an offer and we have accepted that," Mr. Weerakoon said.

Nearly 27,500 of the more than 85,000 Sri Lankan workers stranded in Kuwait since Iraq's August 2 invasion, have already returned home on flights organised by the United Nations-sponsored International Organisation for Migration and Air Lanka.

Mr. Weerakoon said about 50,000 others remain in Kuwait, while another 17,000 Sri Lankans were at refugee camps in the Middle East, particularly in Jordan.

He said the Sri Lankans could travel through Kuwait's southern border to Dhahran in Saudi Arabia or Bahrain, which was a 200 kilometer (124 mile) journey and from there be returned home on special air flights.

Sri Lankan returnees have been so far travelling in buses from Kuwait to Amman via Baghdad, a 2,000 kilometer (1240 miles) trek.

Mr. Weerakoon said the Indian ship would be leaving the Ulkassar port for Dubai from where the Sri Lankans will be flown home.

Baghdad allowed India to send a shipload of food for its stranded nationals in Kuwait and Iraq and make use of the ship's return journey to evacuate Indian workers.

HONG KONG (OCT. 5) - The Hong Kong government has abandoned plans to obtain private financing for the first major phase of its showpiece 127 billion hongkong dollar (1.63 billion U.S. dollars) dollar) ports and airports project.

On Friday, Chief Secretary Sir David Ford announced that the government will supply its own financing for the link between the new airport's island site and the mainland.

The link will be made by two suspension bridges. The bridges will have two tiers, the top one carrying a six-lane highway and the bottom tier carrying both railway tracks and roads.

They will be bigger than any others elsewhere in the world. The cost is estimated at six to seven billion Hongkong dollars.

Private backers have been reluctant to commit funds to the scheme while uncertainty remains over the attitude of Bejing which will take over Hong Kong in 1997. Chinese officials have repeatedly criticised the project for being too costly and said that they should have been more fully consulted because the new airport will only come into operation after 1997.

Sir David said that Chinese criticism played no part in the government's decision to provide its own financing, indicating that ''at least three'' international consortia had expressed a willingness to bid under a build-operate-transfer scheme. However, he said that time and money could be saved by the government providing its own financing.

HAMBURG (OCT. 5) - Hamburg exhibition authorities were putting the final touches Friday to preparations to host the world's single largest tourism parley, the 60th American Society of Travel Agents (ASTA) congress.

The annual ASTA congress, being held for only the second time in Germany, runs October 7-13 under the motto "Be A part Of World History".

Tourism industry managers from 75 countries were expected to participate in the congress, which local officials hope will provide a boost in foreign visitors to Hamburg and northern Germany.

Of the total costs of over 15 million marks (9.8 million dollars) involved in the congress, the city of Hamburg and local hotels are providing about half the expense, officials said.

A decade ago, the city of Munich became the first German city to host the ASTA congress.

VIENNA (OCT. 5) - Eastern Europe's energy shortage is worsening rapidly as a result of increasing cuts in Soviet oil deliveries coupled with the Gulf crisis, which has made oil more expensive on the international market.

Czechoslovakia and Bulgaria, which have until now relied almost exclusively on Moscow for crude oil supplies, have been forced to ration petrol and refined oil products for both individuals and industry, which will mean a significant fall in their industrial production levels.

Poland and Hungary are also suffering the effects of a 30 percent cut in Soviet crude deliveries, which has forced them to turn to the international market where they have to pay in scarce hard currency.

The rise of prices as a result of the Gulf crisis and an international oil embargo on Iraq and Kuwait has only exacerbated the problem, and both countries have drastically increased petrol prices in a bid to cut consumption.

Romania only relies on Moscow for 20 percent of its oil, but has already warned that it will be seeking heavy cuts in energy consumption this winter.

Czechoslovakia, which imports 97 percent of its oil from the Soviet Union, is physically incapable of bringing in enough supplies from elsewhere to fill the gap as supplies from Moscow are reduced.

An oil pipeline from the Adriatic coast can carry only a third of its needs and there is no other possibility available in the short-term.

"If we do not manage to resolve our oil supply problems, our industry is rushing headlong towards ruin," Prime Minister Marian Calfa has said.

(The Czechoslovakian news agency CTK said Friday that Moscow had agreed to stabilize oil supplies soon at between 30,000 and 35,000 tons a day, after falling as low as 20,000 tons in recent days.

KUALA LUMPUR (OCT. 5) - Peninsular Malaysia will hold its 8th general elections on October 21 while nominations have been fixed for October 11, Election Commission Chairman Tan Sri Abdul Kadir Talib announced Friday.

Abdul Kadir said elections for parliamentary seats in the East Malaysian states of Sabah and Sarawak will be staggered from October 20 to October 21, while nominations will be held on October 11.

This decision was taken following a commission meeting held in Ipoh, the capital of the West Malaysian state of Perak.

Parliament and 11 state assemblies were dissolved Friday to pave the way for the election.

The country's constitution stipulates that general elections must be held within 60 days of the dissolution of parliament.

Haji Mohamad Salleh Abu Bakar, said the 8th parliament would convene within 120 days of the dissolution.

The new parliament will have a total of 180 seats, including three new constituencies in the East Malaysian state of Sarawak.

SOWETO, SOUTH AFRICA (OCT. 5) - It is time South Africa's black leaders buried past differences and spoke with one voice, African National Congress (ANC) Deputy President Nelson Mandela said Friday.

He was addressing a press conference at his home in this sprawling black township near Johannesburg after a lengthy meeting with representatives of five of the country's six self-governing tribal homelands.

"We agreed (during the meeting) that we should stretch our hands to one another ... to forget the past and to pool our resources," he said.

Mr. Mandela expressed sorrow that Zulu leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi had not attended the meeting, which he had called to discuss ongoing violence between ANC supporters and members of Mr. Buthelezi's Inkatha Freedom Party.

Earlier this week, the Zulu leader declined Mr. Mandela's invitation because he had been invited as leader of the KwaZulu tribal homeland instead of as president of Inkatha.

"We regret the he (Mr. Buthelezi) did not attend. We think this meeting would have afforded him the opportunity of giving his views," Mr. Mandela said.

Asked whether a one-on-one meeting with Mr. Buthelezi was possible, the de facto ANC leader repeated an earlier view that "the time is not ripe" for it, but declined further comment when pressed for his views on what circumstances had to exist for such a meeting to take place.

Up to 4,000 people have died in the ANCInkatha conflict since it first flared in Natal province in 1986, and another 800 lives have been lost since the fighting spread to black townships around Johannesburg on August 13.

Mr. Mandela said the homeland representatives he met Friday had all agreed that a "third force" comprising "state agencies" was orchestrating the killings and that it was not a ZuluXhosa clash as the media made it out to be.

Earlier this week the ANC leader accused military intelligence, an alleged military "hit-squad" known as the civil Co-operation Bureau but now disbanded, and the National Intelligence Services (NIS) of fomenting the violence -- a claim which has been denied by Defence Minister Magnus Malan and the NIS.

"The government must take full responsibilty for the conduct of their own state agencies," Mr. Mandela said Friday.

Apart from Mr. Buthelezi who was not represented at all, two homeland leaders did not attend the meeting but sent representatives in their place.

Prince Mahlangu of KwaNdebele and Kenneth Mopeli of QwaQWa were out the country, Mr. Mandela said.

Those who did turn up at Mr. Mandela's home were Hudson W. Ntsanwisi of Gazankulu, Enos Mabuza of KaNgwane and Nelson Ramodike of Lebowa.

LAGOS (OCT. 5) - A Japanese oil company is to begin lifting Nigerian crude oil this month under an agreement signed in September, Nigerian Minister of Petroleum Resources Jibril Aminu said.

He told a delegation representing about a dozen Japanese companies late Thursday that the agreement was a reflection of the good relations between the two countries.

The minister did not give the name of the company or the amount of oil that would be lifted.

The President of the Japan-Nigeria Association, Kazuo Haruna of the Marubeni Corporation, who led the Japanese delegation, said that the supply of Nigerian oil to his country would help it survive the current Gulf crisis.

The Japanese delegation also held talks Friday with minister of state for external affairs Zakari Ibrahim and was due to meet President Ibrahim Babangida later in the day.

HARARE (OCT. 5) - A cabinet minister here claims East European governments are forcibly separating Zimbabwean men from local girls they have married or made pregnant and deporting them on false accusations of being AIDS carriers.

Minister of State for National Scholarships Joseph Culverwell told the Financial Gazette in an interview published on Friday that "some" Zimbabwean students had been "forced to return home under false pretences".

"When they came back they underwent medical tests and we found they did not have AIDS," he told the paper.

Mr. Culverwell did not disclose the numbers of students involved or the fate of the East European wives and their children. He said his officials were now touring the states in which Zimbabwe's 1,908 students were undergoing courses, trying to solve problems.

He denied a report in the official newspaper of Zimbabwe's ruling ZANU party, the People's Voice, that hundreds of Zimbabwean students had been sent home from eastern European states which had recently thrown off communist party rule.

"Hardly a dozen" had been repatriated simply because their sponsors had fallen from power, Mr. Culverwell said.

Four years ago President Robert Mugabe ordered the dismissal of the editor of Harare's government-controlled Sunday Mail for publishing a report that Cuba had sent home Zimbabwean students with AIDS.

North Korea, with whom his government maintains close ties, used to warn foreigners they would be deported, and their lovers shot, if they imperilled the "homogeneity" of the Korean nation.

KINSHASA (OCT. 5) - President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire sent 500 of his best trained and armed troops to Rwanda overnight Thursday to help his embattled counterpart Juvenal Habyarimana, the Zairean AZAP news agency reported Friday.

The decision to send soldiers of the Special Presidential Division followed a defence council meeting chaired by Marshal Mobutu to consider a Rwandan request for assistance in combatting a rebel incursion, AZAP said.

Marshal Mobutu sent the 500 men from Goma, on Zaire's eastern border with Rwanda, and the rest of the Zairean army has been placed on full alert, while the 31st Paratroop Brigade is standing by in Kinshasa for possible rapid intervention in Rwanda, AZAP said.

The despatch of the presidential troops came under a joint defence accord linking Zaire and Rwanda. They have a common border more than 200 kilometres (125 miles) long on Lake Kivu and, with Burundi, are members of the Economic Community of the Great Lakes Countries.

French and Belgian troops have already arrived in the Rwandan capital Kigali, with an officially announced brief of protecting the 670 French and 1,600 Belgian nationals in the former Belgian colony. These troops were reported Friday to be controlling Kigali airport and embassy premises.

Rwandan refugees and Ugandan army deserters launched an incursion into Rwanda from Uganda early this week. An Agence France-Presse correspondent on Friday reported heavy fighting overnight around military bases in Kigali. Clashes were reported close to the airport.

NEW DELHI (OCT. 5) - India has repatriated 108,491 of its nationals from Iraq and Kuwait as of early Friday, and thousands more are waiting to return, the government said here.

An external affairs spokesman told reporters that some 4,000 Indians had been returning home daily by sea, air and overland since the August 2 invasion of Kuwait by Iraq.

He said about 2,000 Indians were still in Baghdad, waiting to go to Amman, another 3,500 were in transit between Kuwait and Amman, and about 16,000 were in refugee camps in Jordan.

There were an estimated 172,000 Indians in Kuwait and 10,000 in Iraq during the Iraqi invasion. The spokesman gave no breakdown for the remaining Indians.

PRAGUE (OCT. 5) - The Soviet Union has agreed to boost oil deliveries to Czechoslovakia from their recent low levels to ease a crude oil shortage threatening the country's economy, the CTK news agency said Friday.

The agency said in a report from Moscow that trade talks in the Soviet capital had resulted in a pledge to stabilise oil deliveries soon at between 30,000 and 35,000 tons a day.

Czechoslovakia relies on Moscow for virtually all its oil, but deliveries have been falling throughout this year and have recently dropped as low as 20,000 tons a day.

The government has said that the minimum required just to keep the country's petrochemical industry and refineries running is 33,000 tons a day.

Czechoslovakia, which has been importing some 16.5 million tons of Soviet oil a year, is currently seeking other sources of supply, including direct negotiations with the Soviet republics where it is produced.

It is to begin negotiations in Prague on Monday on taking 500,000 tons of crude from the Tyumen region in Russia, the largest of the Soviet republics, CTK said.

Shrinking supplies and rumours that stocks were running out panicked motorists this week, and huge queues formed at service stations on Wednesday, prompting the government to announce Thursday a 33 per cent increase in fuel prices with effect from Saturday.

BUDAPEST (OCT. 5) - A two-hour "warning" strike by Hungarian miners protesting against proposed pit closures was supported Friday by 100,000 workers and affected all sectors of the mining industry, the MTI agency reported, quoting the federation of mining unions.

Representatives of the industry and social affairs ministries said that they had been surpised by the strike because negotiations were continuing and the government was inclined to satisfy the miners' demands if possible.

But the union federation said that the warning was justified because the government had shown itself incapable of replying to the "just demands" of miners who were worried about plans to close unprofitable mines and wanted guarantees about their pay.

MTI reported that coal miners stopped work around the country, in some cases defying a ban on striking, and that in some mines the stoppage had near unanimous support.

HAVANA (OCT 5) - Cuba's Communist Party announced Friday a major streamlining of its Central Committee, cutting two of the seven committee secretaries and reducing the committee staff in half.

The official party daily, Granma, said the shakeup, which will also see the provincial-level party bureacracy slashed by 50 percent, "will keep paperwork and other aspects of bureaucracy to a minimum."

Losing their posts as secretaries on the Central Committee were General Sergio Perez Lezcano and Jorge Risquet Valdes, who remains a member of the committee.

At the same time the Central Committee's Military Committee, formerly headed by General Perez Lezcano, was replaced by a military commission reporting directly to the Politburo.

Gen. Perez became a member of the Central Committee last February, while Mr. Risquet has been a voting member since 1975.

The remaining Central Committee secretaries are President Fidel Castro (first secretary), Second Secretary Raul Casto (Mr. Castro's brother), Julian Rizo Alvarez, Carlos Aldana Escalante and Jose Ramon Machado Ventura.

Granma said 10 of the Central Committee's 19 departments were being eliminated resulting in a reduction of more than 50 percent of the committee's staff.

The position of non-voting member on the Central Committee, of which there are currently 78, has also been eliminated, the paper announced.

While Granma presented the changes as designed to eliminate bureaucracy and improve the functioning of the party apparatus, rather than as an economy measure, the cutbacks came amid a major government effort to handle an economic slowdown caused by sharp reductions in cheap imports from the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

Authorities have already ordered drastic reductions in energy use to cope with a shortfall in oil supplies and last month instituted strict rationing for a wide range of food products and other consumer goods.

LONDON (OCT 5) - North Sea Brent crude oil prices firmed here on Friday on a new bout of nervousness about the continuing Gulf crisis, analysts said.

Brent for November delivery reached a high of 37.75 dollars a barrel during the session, but then fell back slightly in late afternoon to 37.10, against 36.6 dollars at the Thursday close.

Lucy Haskins, an analyst at Barclays de Zoete Wedd brokerage, commented that the rise was due to diminishing hopes for a diplomatic solution to the Gulf crisis, after what the market views as a hardening of the Iraqi stance.

She said that market fundamentals now justify a Brent price of 30 to 32 dollars, and the excess is due to "sentiment". If war were to break out in the Gulf, prices would surge above 40 dollars a barrel, she said.

BLACKPOOL, England (OCT 5) - Britain's opposition Labour Party ended one of its most important conferences in years here Friday proclaiming itself a reformed and unified government-in-waiting ready to fight and win general elections next year.

In a departure from tradition, the conference drew to a close with an impassioned rallying cry for Labour politicians to return to their constituencies and begin campaigning for elections which the party leadership predicted would take place in the coming year.

Under British law elections must take place by June 1992, but the govenment has not yet announced the date.

"Labour has changed and there is no going back," party campaign coordinator Jack Cunningham said in the closing speech.

"The British people have seen a Labour government-in-waiting -- a Labour Party poised for victory and prepared for government," he said.

Mr. Cunningham said the ruling Conservative Party was demoralized, the government discredited and incompetent, and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher "isolated and out of touch", and issued a challenge for the next elections.

"On the day of your choice, in the month of your choice, in the year of your choice, whenever you choose, Labour is ready for that general election," Mr. Cunningham said. "We are ready not just to win but to govern."

This year's conference, possibly the last before the next elections and coming after three consecutive general election defeats for Labour, was described by political sources here as one of the party's most crucial gatherings in decades.

Although delegates undermined the party's efforts to project a unified front by voting against the leadership's recommendations on several key issues, analysts said the conference represented a key success in leader Neil Kinnock's efforts to recast the party as reformed, moderate and capable.

LOME (OCT. 5) - Demonstrators attacked two police stations and damaged and burned several official vehicles here in the capital of Togo Friday, an Agence France-Presse journalist on the scene reported.

Soldiers forcibly expelled several hundred demonstrators, most of them youths, from a courtroom where two men were being tried on charges of distributing anti-government leaflets.

The soldiers beat the youths who were calling on the authorities to free the two men. At least three demonstrators were injured when they jumped from the courtroom's second-floor windows.

The youths were dispersed in the city center, where they attacked the police stations and burned at least three government vehicles. They also burned part of the city market.

The capital was reported calm by mid-day and soldiers had taken up positions at all major intersections and strategic locations around town, the AFP journalist said. Parts of the city were closed to traffic.

In a statement broadcast on national radio, President Gnassingbe Eyadema "condemned the way the events took place" at the courtroom.

The government also called on the population to "boost its vigilance" and to denounce those who carried out "these acts of violence and vandalism."

The lawyers' union has asked to meet the president to discuss the incident.

Both men on trial, Logo Dossovi and Doglo Agbelenko, were sentenced Friday to five years imprisonment for "preparing and distributing untruthful and defamatory leaflets and inciting the army to mutiny."

They were among 13 people, including nine students, who were taken in for questioning about the leaflets.

The 11 lawyers defending the two said their confessions had been extracted through torture and asked they be released.

Last month the national commission of Togo's human rights league said the two accused and two others had been tortured by police. As a result, national security chief Captain Laokpessi Pitalou Ani was sacked.

The other 11 people among the 13 arrested August 23 to 27 have been released.

ANKARA (OCT. 5) - Japan announced Friday the full extent of its aid for the countries that have born the brunt of the economic embargo against Iraq. Jordan's crown prince called the burden of applying the sanctions ''economic suicide''.

In Ankara, Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu said 200 million dollars would be lent Turkey on bargain terms. Egypt has been promised 300 million dollars and Jordan 100 million dollars from the same facility.

The Japanese are also making other loans to Turkey to encourage trade. Kaifu travels next to Saudi Arabia and Oman.

In an article that appeared Friday in the British newspaper The Independent, Crown Prince Hassan said he hoped the west did not expect his country to commit political as well as economic suicide.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's popularity among Jordanians and elsewhere in the Arab world gave Amman little room for manoeuvre, he said. The U.N. Disaster Relief Organisation (Undro) said Friday Jordanian camps currently held 43,590 refugees from Iraq.

In Geneva, the International Organisation for Immigration (Iom) announced it had repatriated by air 73,520 refugees from Iraq and Kuwait between September 3 and October 3.

They were picked up from Jordan, Iran, Saudi Arabia and Turkey, it said. Another 37,126 refugees were booked for flights home until mid-October. Most are citizens of Bangladesh, India, the Philippines and Sri Lanka.

NEW DELHI (OCT. 5) - Police opened fire on rioting prisoners in a maximum-security jail here Friday, leaving at least nine people dead and 200 wounded, officials said.

The wounded included at least 125 prisoners and 75 prison officers and wardens a senior official said. Several of the wounded prisoners were said to be in critical condition.

It was the bloodiest revolt ever in Tihar jail, which opened in 1958 and, like most prisons in India, has been plagued by allegations of corruption as well as overcrowding.

The revolt, which lasted more than two hours, erupted after the death of an inmate awaiting trial on criminal offenses, which the prisoners blamed on jail authorities.

Jail officials said the prisoner died earlier in the day of natural causes, but his cellmates alleged that he died from lack of medical care in the sprawling prison in New Delhi's western suburbs.

As news of the death spread, hundreds of the estimated 3,000 prisoners began hurling rocks and other missiles at the wardens.

Prisoners then broke out of their cells and rampaged through the facility, attacking guards as well as policemen guarding the prison.

Policemen initially tried to beat the prisoners back into their cells with repeated baton charges and tear gas. They finally opened fire and managed to crush the riot after nearly six hours of violence.

Police said the prisoners tried to burn everything in sight, including a warehouse.

Inspector General of Prisons H.P. Kumar told reporters that some prisoners showered kerosene on several jail officials and policemen in a bid to burn them to death.

PARIS (OCT. 5) - French mountain climber Marc Batard, who has given himself less than 24 hours to climb two Himalayan peaks, completed the first half of his goal Friday when he reached the summit of Mount Everest.

The 36-year-old alpinist, well-known for his solo climbs, was accompanied by Christine Janin, who became the first French woman to conquer the world's highest peak, and photographer Pascal Tournaire.

The team took an hour's rest before tackling Mount Lhotse, which at 8,516 meters (about 28,000 feet) is the world's fourth highest summit.

They started the climb towards Everest from their camp at 6,300 meters (nearly 21,000 feet), and planned to head down the southern pass before attacking Lhotse.

Mr. Batard had climbed Mount Everest without oxygen in 1988, taking 22 hours and 29 minutes. Stradling the border of Nepal and Tibet, it measures 8,848 meters (29,028 feet).

LONDON (OCT. 5) - Natural rubber prices lost ground this week on the London physical market on persistent lack of interest, traders said Friday.

The price for Ribbed Smoked Sheet No. 1 (RSS 1) for November delivery closed at 520 pounds per ton against 535 the previous Friday.

Traders said that the prospect of lower demand from tyre manufacturers due to a slowdown in the car industry had also depressed the ton.

Furthermore, production in the Far East is now entering its peak period (October to December), they said.

"Unless something drastic happens in the Gulf, prices could fall a bit more", one trader said.

Some buying of commodities, including rubber, would probably be triggered by war breaking out in the Gulf, he added.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 5) - Dissident Chinese students are being forcibly repatriated and harassed by Japanese authorities apparently bowing to pressure from business interests anxious to restore full trade ties with Beijing, a human rights group said here.

Asia Watch, a branch of Human Rights Watch, said some Chinese students in Japan have been forced to return to China despite evidence they faced arrest and persecution there.

Japanese authorities also impeded access by Chinese nationals to legal counsel and information in asylum and refugee cases, the group said in a report received here Friday.

It said about 63,000 Chinese students were currently in Japan, 11,000 of whom left China after the June 4, 1989, military crackdown on pro-democracy demonstrators in Beijing. Chinese authorities subsequently arrested thousands of suspected supporters of the democracy movement.

Asia Watch mentioned the case of a Chinese student who had helped the wounded during the military assault on the Beijing protesters and whose application for a visa extension - filed in July 1989 - has not even been accepted by the Japanese Immigration Bureau, which is pressing for his repatriation.

Repatriation "is in clear violation of the universal right to seek asylum from persecution," Asia Watch said.

The failure to promptly extend the visas of Chinese students is contrary to a pledge Japan made at a G-7 meeting in Paris last July to "extend the stays of those Chinese students who so desire," the report added.

The report also criticised Tokyo for failing to protest "the systematic harassment and intimidation" of dissident Chinese students in Japan by Chinese Embassy officials.

According to Asia Watch, the government of Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu "is responding to pressure from Japanese business and financial circles who wish to resume their extensive trade and industrial ties with China."

Another source of pressure, the report added, are "Immigration Bureau officials who are concerned with the influx of illegal laborers."

BEIRUT (OCT 5) - Several thousand supporters of General Michel Aoun demonstrated east of here Friday as a government blockade of the region held by the renegade Christian leader entered its second week.

Despite petrol shortages caused by the blockade, hundreds of cars lined the road leading to the Monteverde crossing, one of seven passage points between Gen. Aoun's Metn region and the rest of Lebanon.

Since September 28, President Elias Hrawi's troops have prevented vehicles from entering the Metn and its 500,000 inhabitants have begun to suffer severe shortages of essential goods, including produce and medicine.

President Hrawi has said the measures are aimed at forcing Gen. Aoun to submit to his authority and has not ruled out a military operation to oust him from the Baabda presidential palace from where he commands 17,000 troops.

The general's supporters have staged a series of protests against the blockade in the past few days, including one on Monday that led to a shooting incident in which 15 people were killed and 104 wounded.

Witnesses said the Lebanese Forces (LF) militia, a Christian group deeply hostile to Gen. Aoun which has cooperated with President Hrawi's army in sealing off the Metn, was responsible for the incident.

Since the shooting, the army surrounding the Metn has responded to demonstrations by closing off affected crossing points to pedestrians.

The blockade of the Metn, a region of 300 square kilometers (120 square miles) that stretches northeast from Beirut, has increased press speculation that the Syrian-backed president may launch an attack against Gen. Aoun.

Press reports on Friday alleged that the French military attache in Beirut,

Colonel Serge Ivanovsky, had met officers loyal to the general to discuss counter-measures to a possible attack against the Baabda palace.

The French embassy here "categorically" denied the reports.

LUSAKA (OCT 5) - Zambian opposition leaders said Friday they would defy a police ban and go ahead with a major political meeting this weekend.

"The police are succumbing to intimidation outside the police force," said Akashambatwa Lewanika, secretary of the Movement for Multi-party Democracy (MMD).

"If you continue obeying the bid of an unjust government they will continue being unjust. You have to resist," he added.

Last month, Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda announced that multi-party elections would be held next year in this hitherto one-party state. But the authorities have been accused of not allowing opposition meetings.

Police rejected an application by the movement to hold a convention at the Mulungushi conference hall in Lusaka. The hall is always used for meetings of the ruling United National Independence Party (UNIP).

Police spokesman Anthony Kaitisha said police felt it would not be safe to grant the movement permission, adding that if the meeting went ahead it would be breaking the law under Zambia's state of emergency.

Organisers say up to 1,000 people from all over Zambia are expected to attend the convention, called to discuss forming a new political party.

They said the meeting would be held at an alternative private venue, thought to be either a discotheque in the city centre or the garden of a private house.

LAGOS (OCT 5) - The United States embassy in Nigeria denied here Friday that it had called for the removal of Nigerian troops from war-torn Liberia.

Nigeria has contributed more than half of the approximately 6,000 troops sent to Liberia by the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS).

Other countries that contributed to the force, known as ECOMOG, were Ghana, Sierra Leone, Guinea and Gambia.

"The U.S. government has not made any call for the removal of Nigerian or other forces belonging to ECOMOG from Liberia," the embassy said in an official statement.

Two Liberian radio stations controlled by rebels of the National Patriotic Front of Liberia (NPFL) led by Charles Taylor had reported that the United States had called for the removal of these Nigerian troops, the embassy said.

The report, attributed by the radio stations to "Mark Fryer, chief of the U.S. State Department's West Africa desk", was a fabrication, and no such official was employed by the State Department, the U.S. statement said.

KHARTOUM (OCT 5) - A famine has triggered an exodus from Sudan's Kordofan region, the deputy governor of western Sudan told a leading daily on Friday.

Lieutenant-Colonel Abdel Wahab Hassen Hussein told al-Ingaz al-Watani that food had grown scarce in the region because of a drought.

He said the population was moving to the capital of Khartoum and to White Nile province in central Sudan in hopes of finding food.

Cattle and other animals were dying in great numbers, the deputy governor said. He appealed to the central government to buy surviving animals because people were no longer able to care for their livestock.

The commissioner of Khartoum municipality has refused to grant assistance to the migrants, saying they should seek help from local authorities at home.

The government has not released any figures on the daily arrivals, but a ministerial committee is due to hold an emergency meeting on the issue soon.

ILIGAN, Philippines (OCT 5) - Air force planes blasted a rebel-held army camp Friday in the first government attempt to crush a military rebellion in the southern Philippines, but mutiny later spread to another city.

About 100 mutinous soldiers, wearing electric-pink armbands and some carrying machine pistols, left their training camp and marched late Friday to the public square of this city in the southern island of Mindanao.

They were at the camp to be rehabilitated from their pro-rebel links.

Police and paramilitary troops cordoned off the square. "If ordered to arrest them we will do it," city police chief Captain Marcial Gonzaga said. One marcher said: "They better not do that."

"We don't want any fighting," said another soldier in the uniform of an army major. He said the group wanted to see rebel army Colonel Alexander Noble.

Col. Noble had seized two military camps in the nearby cities of Cagayan de Oro and Butuan Thursday and proclaimed an independent republic in Mindanao.

Cagayan de Oro is about 50 kilometers (31 miles) northeast of here. Butuan is another 100 kilometers (62 miles) east.

Government forces recaptured the Butuan camp earlier Friday, aided by two rocket-firing air force planes.

All three cities, within 150 kilometers (93 miles) of each other on the northern coast of Mindanao, were paralyzed as a result of the rebellion.

Airports and ports were closed to traffic and barricades were erected on streets to restrict troop movements.

In Cagayan de Oro, witnesses said at least four giant transport planes disgorged troops, tanks and other military equipment at the airport as government troops prepared an assault on Col. Noble's forces, entrenched at an army divisional headquarters there.

Col. Noble offered to vacate Camp Evangelista "for the sake of peace" and said he expected the government to open talks with him.

In Manila, armed forces chief General Renato de Villa told reporters: "The secessionist rebellion of Noble and Canoy is finished."

He was referring to Reuben Canoy, a politician heading the separatist Mindanao Independence Movement, which the government says supports the rebels.

The general urged civilians in Cagayan de Oro to "get out of the way," saying the military will arrest all mutineers and their civilian supporters. "If they put up a fight, it is unfortunate but they will be defeated," he said.

PRETORIA (OCT 5) - The South African government lifted a 9 p.m. to 4 a.m. curfew in Soweto, the country's largest black city, Friday but received a lukewarm response from the African National Congress (ANC).

Instead, the black nationalist organisation demanded in a statement that an independent body be established to investigate complaints against police.

Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok's office later said in a statement that despite numerous requests to the ANC to back allegations and produce evidence of violence against the ANC, "not a shred of real proof has been produced".

"Perhaps the ANC should stop portraying itself as the victim of apartheid and violence, and channel its energies into getting the peace process going as it has committed itself to doing," Mr. Vlok's statement said.

The ANC statement said there was never any need for the curfews imposed on four townships around Johannesbrg on September 21 and blamed the government for using them to "prevent free political activity ... thereby weakening the ANC and other opponents of apartheid".

The curfews were part of stringent government measures taken in a bid to end the worst wave of black-on-black violence in South African history, which saw nearly 800 people killed since August.

The ANC has claimed that elements of the security forces hostile to the organisation helped instigate the violence, and objected to measures taken by the authorities to stop the fighting.

Mr. Vlok said earlier that unrest and violent crimes had decreased to such an extent that the curfew would be lifted in the Soweto districts of Meadowlands, Dobsonville and Diepkloof from Friday night.

The curfew still remains in force in the townships of Tokoza, Katlehong and Vosloorus, to the east of Johannesburg.

Law and Order spokesman Captain Craig Kotze told commercial radio on Friday that the curfew could be reinstated in Soweto if it was found necessary.

The ANC statement claimed Mr. Vlok "knows too well that the bandits are lying low and will resume their activities when ordered to do so".

It said "only a handful of these murderers" had been apprehended and, in some cases, the ANC alleged, "criminals" had been released on bail or freed.

The ANC also called for the "demilitarisation" of the police and the disbanding of "murder squads".

ACCRA (OCT 5) - Rebels of the National Patriotic Front of Liberia have captured the home county of slain President Samuel Doe, giving them absolute military control of rural Liberia, according to reports here Friday.

The reports said rebels led by Charles taylor took the area last week and burned down Doe's house and several vehicles.

They said there was fighting until loyal troops ran out of ammunition and fled across the border into the Ivory Coast.

The reports said there have been reprisal killings by Taylor's forces, who are said to be killing people of the Krahn ethnic group of Doe.

Taylor has said he controls about 90 per cent of the West African country and would hold elections next Wednesday. Taylor has refused to accept the interim government which has Amos Sawyer as president, saying that he himself was president of the war-torn country.

His bid to capture the executive mansion, the seat of government in the capital, Monrovia, has met with stiff opposition from Doe's forces, rebels of the second rebel group led by Prince Johnson and the West African peacekeeping force.

Taylor has been pushed back several kilometres in the latest fighting in Monrovia.

HELSINKI (OCT 5) - A new economic forecast published here on Friday paints a gloomy outlook for the Finnish economy.

Finland enjoyed high and relatively stable economic growth throughout the 1980's, but the economy is now showing alarming signs. The forecast that Conservative Prime Minister Harri Holkeri ordered from the Ministry of Finance says that output growth, which last year was five percent, will be two per cent this year and nil in 1991.

Only last month, in a draft 1991 budget, the government predicted that growth this year will be 2.5 percent, and half a percent next year.

But the government's forecasts were based on a crude oil price of 25 dollars a barrel, and the new forecasts are based on 35 dollars a barrel.

The figure for unemployment next year is now projected at 4.5 percent while a figure of four percent was mooted in the budget. This year unemployment is running at 3.3 percent.

The current account deficit, which will be about 23.7 billion markka (about 6.2 billion dollars) this year, will reach 26.5 billion in 1991.

Price increases, mainly due to expensive oil, will push inflation to an annualised six percent in December, the forecast said.

LAGOS (OCT 5) - President Ibrahim Babangida urged Japan on Friday to redress trade imbalances between the two countries.

Receiving a 26-man Japanese delegation, comprising representatives of the 15 Japanese firms operating in Nigeria, President Babangida said that between 1985 and 1988, for example, Japanese imports from Nigeria stood at only 21.5 million dollars compared to its exports to the West African nation during the same period of 1.27 billion dollars.

This imbalance could be bridged if Japan imported more of Nigeria's non-oil products and if it could encourage more of its firms to do business in Nigeria, he said.

PARIS (OCT 5) - French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas underlined here Friday that the United Nations has sole jurisdiction in the Gulf crisis.

The only way to prevent a war in the region was to make the U.N.-imposed trade sanctions against Iraq effective.

Political observers here saw the statement as intended to confirm that France rejects a military attack against Iraq.

''France acts only within the framework of the Uinted Nations'' and has no intention of adopting a different policy, Dumas said in an interview with Rtl radio. ''It is important that the Kuwait affair remains under the jurisdiction of the U.N.''

''The embargo has been seen to be effective,'' Dumas said. ''One hopes that (Iraqi President) Saddam Hussein will alter his position.'' If such a change did not take place, then a new situation would arise.

The Gulf crisis currently vacillated between ''the logic of war'' and ''the logic of peace'', Dumas said.

CALGARY (OCT 5) - Canada has signed five new assistance agreements with the six-member Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) in efforts to strengthen its commitment to development in the region, it was announced Friday.

Canadian Secretary of State for External Affairs Joe Clark and Monique Landry, Minister for External Relations and International Development made the announcement.

It came on the second day of a four-day meeting in Calgary and Jasper, in the Canadian Rockies, between Canadian officials and the foreign ministers of Brunei, Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand.

The five new programs, which will cost around 35 million dollars in funding commitments by the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA), are directed primarily at improving human resource development through technology transfer and training, as well as protecting the environment, in particular in the fields of solar energy, fisheries and marine science.

Ms. Landry said the programs would be managed from the recently opened Canada-ASEAN Centre based in Singapore.

"The agreements just signed will forge new partnerships with individuals and institutions in Canada and the ASEAN nations and will prove to be invaluable assets in our future relations," said Mr. Clark.

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (OCT 6) - Following a military victory in central Afghanistan, the Pakistan-based resistance appeared divided Friday over a possible offensive this month on the Afghan capital Kabul, resistance sources said.

Some rebel leaders, particularly Gulbuddin Hekmatyar, want to move quickly, while Moscow and Washington near agreement on holding elections in Afghanistan and stopping arms shipments to the mujahedeen resistance.

Deputy Defence Minister Mohammad Nabi Azimi acknowledged Friday that resistance fighters had seized the "small garrison" in Tarin Kot, the capital of Uruzgan province, overnight Wednesday.

It is the first provincial capital to fall into the hands of the mujahedeen since Soviet troops completed their withdrawal from Afghanistan in February last year.

Mr. Hekmatyar is trying to galvanize support among his Sunni partners here for a major attack on Kabul before the first winter snow, sources here said.

The resistance leader, involved in a March coup attempt against Soviet-backed President Najibullah, is suspected of continued involvement with the Pakistani Secret Service (ISI). Mujahedeen sources said his Hezb-i-Islami party has sent thousands of weapons, including rockets, to Kabul.

But many resistance commanders oppose a massive bombardment that could cause civilian casualties in Kabul, and they reject any hasty actions taken without their consent.

"Everyone must agree," said resistance commander Amin Wardak, adding that "no single faction is capable of toppling Najibullah alone."

Said commander Abdul Haq: "If we must take Kabul now, it would be a disaster." He added that the issue of "credible" leadership within resistance ranks was still unresolved.

Divisions within the resistance have worsened since the Soviet pullout, with the worst rupture between military leaders influential in central Afghanistan and political leaders based in neighboring Pakistan.

Amin Wardak, Abdul Haq and other military leaders last spring began efforts to coordinate their ground operations and assert independence from the Peshawar-based political parties, which they say lost credibility in the failed Jalalabad offensive after Soviet troops withdrew.

Santiago (OCT. 5) EFE - Chile's postal service has begun issuing stamps with the picture of late leftist president Salvador Allende, in a further move to restore official honors to the former leader who was overthrown in a bloody 1973 military coup.

Monaco (OCT. 5) EFE - Organizers have canceled the Offshore World Championship in respect for Stefano Casiraghi, the late husband of Princess Caroline of Monaco, who was killed during one of the speedboat racing event's heats earlier this week.

The decision to cancel the championship was announced late Thursday, as Caroline, accompanied by her brother Albert, sister Stephanie and father Prince Rainier visited the chapel where the 30-year-old businessman's body had been laid out in mourning.

Hundreds of Monaco residents filed past his corpse earlier in the day to pay their last respects, while crowds of journalists and photographers waited outside to try and catch a glimpse of the principality's royal family and famous friends of the businessman.

Casiraghi's body was later transferred to the principality's presidential palace where it is to lie until official funeral services Saturday in Monaco's cathedral.

Casiraghi, a keen sportsman and world champion of offshore, died after his speedboat hit a wave and overturned off the coast of Monaco on Wednesday.

He had been married to Caroline since 1983. The couple had three small children.

The Italian businessman's co-pilot, Patrice Inocenti, was recovering Friday in hospital from injuries he received in the accident.

"It's very hard to survive an accident like this, in which I have lost my best friend. It would have been better for us to have died together," Inocenti told the daily Nice Matin Friday.

Casiraghi's death comes eight years after Caroline's mother, American film star Grace Kelly, died of a stroke following a car accident.

Taipei (OCT. 5) EFE - Taiwan will no longer serve as a refuge for Chinese plane hijackers who from now on are to be immediately handed over to the authorities in Beijing, Taiwanese officials announced Friday.

The decision marks a major policy change and follows Tuesday's three-plane disaster at Canton Airport in southern China, where 20 Taiwanese were among the 127 people who died during a bungled hijack attempt.

Some witnesses said the hijackers had ordered to pilot to fly to Taiwan or Hong Kong and may have blown the plane up when they realized the pilot, probably under standing orders from the Chinese authorities, was attempting to land in Canton.

The pro-Chinese press in Hong Kong bitterly slammed the Taiwan government as instigators of the tragedy through its policy of imposing token jail sentences and granting political asylum to hijackers claiming they only wanted to escape from mainland China.

In announcing the shift, Immigration Department officials said there would be no change in the government's policy of offering rewards to Chinese Air Force pilots who desert to Taiwan with their aircraft.

In the most recent of these incidents, the Chinese pilot of a Soviet-designed MIG 19 fighter was given dlrs 900,000 in gold ingots and political asylum after he landed his plane in Taiwan.

BANGKOK (OCT 5) EFE - Cambodia's Khmer Rouge guerrillas Friday rejected a proposed final peace accord, saying they would not allow Prime Minister Hun Sen to serve as vice president on the council which is to rule until elections are called.

In a rebel radio broadcast monitored in Bangkok, the Khmer Rouge said accepting Hun Sen as vice president of the 12-seat Supreme National Council (SNC) would mean "legitimizing the Vietnamese aggression against Cambodia."

Vietnam, which invaded Cambodia in 1978 to end three years of brutal Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge rule, backs Hun Sen's government.

Hun Sen and the three-group rebel coalition including the Khmer Rouge have agreed in principle to a United Nations peace plan which calls for a cease-fire in the 11-year-old war and the intervention of a 10,000-strong U.N. force.

Under the plan, the U.N. would rule Cambodia alongside the SNC until free elections could be held, but so far the rebels and the government have been unable to reach a definitive accord on the makeup of the council.

The Khmer Rouge said it had been agreed that Prince Norodom Sihanouk, head of one of the other two rebel groups, would be president of the council, but that there was no agreement on a vice president.

Hun Sen's government has insisted Sihanouk's presidency be counted as one of the 12 seats assigned to the rebels on the SNC because if he became the 13th member the balance of power would be tipped in favor of the rebels.

The government wants a compromise and has proposed the prime minister becomes vice president of the council.

Seoul (OCT. 5) EFE - North and South Korean negotiators ended a second round of talks Friday without reaching agreement on a formula that would allow both their countries to be represented at the United Nations.

A South Korean official said the negotiators made no advances toward a compromise.

South Korea wants each to apply separately for U.N. membership, a move which North Korea claims would perpetuate the political division of the peninsula.

The South Korean delegates accused the other side of clinging to a "rigid and impractical" plan calling for the two governments to field rotating ambassadors and share expenses while the long-time anatagonists work towards reunfication.

Hardline communist North Korea and South Korea, a U.S. ally, both have had non-voting observer status at the United Nations since the countries were divided at the end of World War II.

A first set of talks on UN representation also ended in stalemate on September 18. A third round is to be held before October 16.

Madrid (OCT. 5) EFE - The Spanish government Friday ratified the sale of 60 percent of the state-owned truck company ENASA to the automotive giant FIAT, a government spokeswoman said.

The deal, for 1.2 billion pesetas (dlrs 12 million), was signed last month by INI, the state holding company to which ENASA belongs, and FIAT's truck division IVECO.

IVECO has also guaranteed to keep on ENASA's work force.

The West German administration rejected as contrary to anti-monopoly legislation an 80 percent acquisition deal valued at 2.8 billion pesetas for ENASA lodged last year by the Man-Daimler consortium.

The ENASA sale forms part of a rationalization and restructuring program initiated in the past few years by INI in an effort to put the state-owned giant on a sounder financial and operative footing.

LIMA (OCT 5) EFE - Former Peruvian president Alan Garcia has been called to appear before a congressional commission probing the deaths of 250 suspected leftist rebels killed when security forces were called in to quell mutinies at three Lima jails.

Garcia, who was in office when the prison rebellions took place in June 1986, has been asked to give evidence before the commission next Thursday.

Leftist deputy Julio Castro heads the commission, which has two weeks to present its findings to the Chamber of Deputies, one of the two chambers which make up Peru's Congress.

The center-left president authorized the military to quell the rebellions at the Lurigancho, Fronton and Santa Barbara prisons where hundreds of Maoist "Shining Path" rebels had mutinied.

An estimated 254 rebels were killed in the ensuing violence, many of them after they had allegedly surrendered to security forces.

Conditions at the jails were said to be appalling at the time of the rebellions, with the prisoners complaining of overcrowding and poor sanitary facilities while guards had been protesting that hundreds of rebels had managed to amass weapons and explosives.

Garcia's government, which Congress acquitted of all responsibility for the killings in 1987, ordered an inquiry into the repression of the mutinies.

Two officers were last year found guilty of being responsible for the killing of 124 rebels at the Lurigancho jail. Over 100 guerrillas died at the Fronton prison and three at the Santa Barbara women's jail.

Several other congressional commissions have been formed to probe alleged financial irregularities during Garcia's five-year rule.

The former president, who came to power in 1985 on a wave of popular support, has denied all accusations against him.

Garcia, who ordered a massive clean-up of the security forces and the public sector when he came to office, handed over power to President Alberto Fujimori in July leaving behind a crippled economy and a country wracked by leftist violence.

Some 21,000 people have been killed since Shining Path took up arms in 1980.

NEW DELHI (OCT 5) EFE - Indian troops have repelled a Pakistani Army artillery attack on the Kashmiri border which divides the two countries, the PTI official news agency reported Friday.

Citing a Foreign Ministry spokesman, PTI said Indian troops inflicted substantial losses on the Pakistani forces, who launched the attack at 4 p.m. local time (1030 GMT) Thursday in the Keran area of Kupwara province.

Three Indian soldiers were injured in the four-hour artillery duel, PTI said.

India's high commissioner in the Pakistani capital of Islamabad, J.N. Dixit, has expressed his government's concern about the attack, described as the heaviest in recent months.

When India and Pakistan gained independence from Britain in 1947, Pakistan claimed control of Kashmir, and fighting for control of the border region immediately ensued, with a partition line being established in 1949, ceding control of Kashmir to India.

Since then India and Pakistan have repeatedly accused each other of unprovoked aggression, and in 1965 again went to war over the disputed territory.

BRUSSELS (OCTOBER 5) XINHUA - SPAIN HAD BLOCKED A NATO PLAN OF ALLOWING NAVAL FORCES IN THE MEDITERRANEAN TO VISIT EGYPT AS A SIGN OF SOLIDARITY WITH CAIRO OVER THE GULF CRISIS, SAID NATO SOURCE TODAY.

THE UNITED STATES REQESTED ABOUT A MONTH AGO FOR A FORCE OF EIGHT NATO WARSHIPS TO BE MOVED TO THE EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN AND BRITAIN SUGGESTED THAT THEY VISIT ALEXANDRIA, AN UNUSUAL PORT OF CALL BECAUSE IT IS OUTSIDE NATO TERRITORY.

SPAIN OPPOSED THE MOVE AT A NATO AMBASSADORS' MEETING ON OCTOBER 4 IN BRUSSELS BLOCKING THE REDEPLOYMENT OF WARSHIPS CURRENTLY ON EXERCISE IN THE WESTERN MEDITERRANEAN, SAID THE SOURCES.

"THE SPANISH CLEARLY FEEL THIS WOULD BE MOVING NATO INTO ?OUT OF AREA' OPERATIONS, EVEN IF THE VISIT WOULD OFFICIALLY ONLY BE TO PICK UP SUPPLIES, AND THAT IT MIGHT BE PROVOCATIVE," ACCORDING TO ONE SOURCE.

AMONG NATO MEMBERS, THE ISSUE OF OPERATION OUTSIDE NATO TERRITORY IS CONTROVERSIAL AND EXTREMELY SENSITIVE. SOME NATIONS, SUCH AS BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES, STRONGLY FAVOUR SUCH AN EXPANSION WHILE OTHERS, PARTICULARLY SPAIN AND FRANCE, DO NOT.

AT ANOTHER MEETING ON OCTOBER 4, AMBASSADORS FROM THE 16 NATO STATES HAD AGREED TO CONSIDER A REQUEST FROM AN INTERNATIONAL AID ORGANISATION TO SUPPLY MORE PLANES TO HELP AIRLIFT REFUGEES FROM THE GULF REGION, ADDED THE SOURCES.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 4) KYODO - U.S. AGRICULTURAL EXPORTS TO JAPAN GREW IN THE YEAR ENDING SEPTEMBER 30, MAKING IT CERTAIN THAT JAPAN WAS AGAIN THE LARGEST CUSTOMER FOR U.S. FARM PRODUCTS, A GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL SAID THURSDAY.

ACCORDING TO THE OFFICIAL AT THE AGRICULTURE DEPARTMENT, THE UNITED STATES EXPORTED FARM PRODUCTS VALUED AT SOME 8.3 BILLION DOLLARS TO JAPAN IN FISCAL 1990, UP FROM 8,152 MILLION DOLLARS IN FISCAL 1989.

JAPAN HAS BEEN THE LARGEST IMPORTER OF U.S. AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS SINCE THE EARLY 1960S.

GROWTH WAS STRONG IN ALMOST ALL CATEGORIES OF AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS SHIPPED TO JAPAN, WITH PORK EXPORTS RISING REMARKABLY, SAID THE OFFICIAL, WHO SPOKE ON CONDITION OF ANONYMITY.

BUT OVERALL MEAT EXPORTS ARE BELIEVED TO HAVE FALLEN BELOW YEAR-EARLIER LEVELS BECAUSE OF SLUGGISH EXPORTS OF BEEF AND CHICKEN AMID STIFF COMPETITION FROM SUPPLIERS SUCH AS THAILAND AND BRAZIL, THE OFFICIAL SAID.

AS ANOTHER FACTOR BEHIND THE SLACK BEEF EXPORTS, THE OFFICIAL SINGLED OUT SLOWER-THAN-EXPECTED GROWTH IN BEEF CONSUMPTION IN JAPAN.

AFTER YEARS OF TOUGH NEGOTIATIONS, TOKYO AGREED IN 1988 TO OPEN ITS BEEF MARKET BY PHASING OUT RESTRICTIONS ON BEEF IMPORTS BY 1991.

IN FISCAL 1990, OVERALL US. AGRICULTURAL EXPORTS TO THE REST OF THE WORLD ARE BELIEVED TO HAVE FALLEN BELOW 39.6 BILLION DOLLARS IN THE PREVIOUS YEAR, THE OFFICIAL SAID.

THE MAIN REASON FOR THE EXPORT SLOWDOWN WAS BUMPER GRAIN HARVESTS IN MAJOR IMPORTERS SUCH AS CHINA AND INCREASED SUPPLIES IN MAIN EXPORTING COUNTRIES SUCH AS CANADA, ACCORDING TO THE OFFICIAL.

FALLS CHURCH, VA (OCT 5) MCS -- A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

The LABOR DEPARTMENT reports this morning that unemployment rose to 5.7% in September, up from 5.6% in August. Non-farm payroll tumbled 101,000. The consensus expectation of 17 economists surveyed by the "Dow Jones Capital Markets Report" had been for the unemployment rate to rise 0.1 percent and for non-farm payroll to decline 5,000.

The HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES rejected the budget deficit compromise package early this morning. ... U.S. stocks in London are sharply lower on news of the failed budget deal. ... The EXMI is off nearly 6.50 with IBM and P&G indicated down 1 1/2. ... Bonds are also off, with the long yield up to 8.82%. ... The dollar is weaker against the yen, stronger vs. the mark. ... The FTSE is down sharply, losing 31 points at midday. ... Late news of the budget vote knocks the Nikkei off it's highs, but it still adds 549 points. ... North Sea crude is up 65 cents to $36.80. The index of national help-wanted ads fell 5 points in August, according to the CONFERENCE BOARD. ... MOBIL CORP. says it has agreed to acquire TUCKER HOUSEWARES. ... BLACK & DECKER CORP. has announced agreements to sell four businesses as part of an ongoing effort to reduce debt stemming from its 1989 takeover of EMHART CORP. ... INTEL CORP. has filed a trademark infringement suit against ADVANCED MICRO DEVICES. ... CHARLES KEATING JR. says he has a negative net worth of more than $4 million.

WHAT'S AHEAD:

BASS PLC plans to spend $1 billion in three years to upgrade its HOLIDAY INN chain. ... GENERAL MOTORS announces it will try to keep the base price for its SATURN line being unveiled next week at $10,000 to $12,000. ... ABBY JOSEPH COHEN is moving from BARCLAYS de ZOETE WEDD to GOLDMAN, SACHS & CO. to be one of the firms top two commentators on the markets.

FROM THE BULLS:

GUY COURTNEY at DAVID A. NOYES in Chicago says the stock market has fallen so low that investors can "throw darts" and find values. "The real risk is missing the first part of any move," he says, adding that those who buy now probably will make money later regardless of whether the market slips a little more in the short run. (WSJ, 10/5)

FROM THE BEARS:

"The guys in the trenches say it's still a funeral out there," says SARA CERATO vice president for institutional sales at NOMURA SECURITIES. "They don't know if the recent gains are sustainable." ("USA Today", 10/5)

"When things calm down and everyone thinks the storm is over with [in the Mideast]," says BERNADETTE MURPHY of M. KIMELMAN & CO, "indeed it is really just a pause. Unless there are major changes in the fundamentals of the market I think it is truly the eye of the hurricane and we are still in a bear market." (CNBC "Market Wrap- Up", 10/4)

"We're in a bear market and one of its characteristics is periods of dull drifting and we just have to get used to it," says ROBERT STOVALL, president of STOVALL/TWENTY-FIRST ADVISERS. PETER GRENNAN at SHEARSON LEHMAN BROTHERS says action among what he calls "the better-acting blue chips is camouflaging the selling seeping through the broad list of stocks. It's not very encouraging; the broad list continues to recede under quiet, consistent, steady pressure."

(NYT, 10/5)

"Raise some more cash," says ARNOLD KAUFMAN, editor of "S&P Outlook." He says the market's list of problems is getting longer: oil prices, the risk of war, falling profit estimates, eroding real estate, and the risk of margin calls. "A significant reduction in interest rates has become less likely," says Kaufman. "The underlying trend appears likely to remain downward." He recommends a portfolio of 50% stocks, 30% bonds and 20% cash. (CNBC "World Business", 10/5)

STOCK MARKET:

"The Dow see-sawed all day," says TONY CECIN, head of OTC trading at PIPER, JAFFRAY & HOPWOOD. "The over-the- counter market tends to see -- but not saw. The OTC stocks go down when the market goes down, but they don't go up when the market goes up." (WSJ, 10/5)

"Basically, despite the pullback in the market, we don't see the crashing bargains that you should see with all the uncertainties that there are," says JAMES BRADFORD JR. of J.C. BRADFORD & CO. (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 10/4)

"It was a Chicago-driven affair," says MICHAEL METZ of OPPENHEIMER. He referred to stock futures trading in Chicago yesterday that triggered program trades in New York. (WSJ, 10/5)

"There is no consensus as to what is going to happen and that is reflected in the [low] volume and disparities" between blue chip stocks and over-the-counter stocks, says STEVE BLISS at MABON NUGENT. (WSJ, 10/5)

Look for stocks to open sharply lower this morning on Wall Street, says LEHMAN BROTHERS' MICHAEL BENSON from London. He expects the fifty point collar could come into effect at the opening. "No rout, but I don't think you'll get a recovery either." (CNN "Business Day" 10/5)

"I suspect it's not going to be a good morning in the marketplace," says JERRY GOLD, director of research for BROWN BROTHERS HARRIMAN. The budget failure is only part of a broader pattern of news that's been disturbing to the markets for a while, according to Gold. "It's a cliche, but it's true -- Wall Street abhors uncertainty," says Gold of the lack of a budget deal. The stock market usually bottoms three to four months before a bottom in the economy, says Gold who looks for a bottom in the economy early next year. (CNBC "World Business" 10/5)

"It was a blue-chip rally," says HOWARD WARD of SCUDDER, STEVENS & CLARK, pointing out that advancers trailed decliners for the day. (FNN "Marketwrap", 10/4)

"The action was encouraging," says RAO CHALSANI of PRESCOTT BALL & TURBEN.

"Volume wasn't great but in the initial stages of a rally it usually isn't." Chalsani believes that the resolution to the budget crisis will have a major impact on the stock market. He says, "If it passes, it will be bullish for stocks because there is more 'meat' to it in terms of tax increases and cuts in spending that will reduce the budget." ("Investor's Daily", 10/5)

"Passage [of the budget agreement] does not necessarily guarantee a rally on Monday," says BRIAN FABBRI of MIDLAND MONTAGU. "I think we've seen what we can expect from the market, in a positive sense, from this budget accord." He says lack of an accord can only force the markets down. (CNN "Moneyline", 10/4)

STOCK TIPS:

"There are lots of areas that one could enter at this particular point [such as] the bond market, five- to 10- year bonds," says GEORGE ZIMMERMAN, director of research at GRUNTAL & CO. "SAFEWAY bonds, would be an example of a good junk bond," he says. On stocks, he likes GLAXO HOLDINGS and SMITHKLINE BECKMAM. (CNBC "Market Wrap- Up", 10/4)

"People used to think of the [pollution control] group as completely recession resistant," says RICHARD EASTMAN of BLUNT ELLIS & LOEWI. "But many of the companies are tied into industrial production and regional economies. There have been questions as to how these stocks will hold up." ("USA Today", 10/5)

"Right now, TENNACO is an awfully cheap buy," says DAVID FLEISCHER of PRUDENTIAL-BACHE in response to the stock tumbling 4 3/4 to 45 1/4 yesterday, partly on his reduced earnings projection. "All of its other divisions are doing well and a year from now the stock could be back well into the 60s." ("USA Today", 10/5)

DAN DORFMAN went to FESHBACH BROTHERS to get the renowned short-selling firm's 10 best short ideas in the current market. They are: CENTRAL FIDELITY BANKS, GOLDEN VALLEY MICROWAVE, HEALTHCARE SERVICES GROUP, INTERNATIONAL RECTIFIER, LA GEAR, NORTHROP, NWNL COS., POP RADIO, WELLS FARGO and YORK RESEARCH. ("USA Today", 10/5)

DONALD YACKTMAN of SELECTED AMERICAN SHARES likes RALSTON PURINA in part because of its chairman, WILLIAM STIRITZ. "He sees the shareholder as a partner and not as a nuisance," says Yacktman. Purina has repurchased more than 50 million shares in the last decade. ("Investor's Daily", 10/5)

FALLS CHURCH, VA (OCT 5) MCS -- A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

MONEY & CREDIT:

"Basically the dollar will be on the defensive," says LISA FINSTROM of SHEARSON LEHMAN BROTHERS. She says interest rates will have a large impact on the future of the greenback. (CNN "Moneyline", 10/4)

The failure to pass the budget deal means higher interest rates for longer, says Fed watcher DAVID JONES, chief economist at AUBREY G. LANSTON. "It means the Fed waits longer. It doesn't mean they won't ease -- I think that's in the cards. The question is when and by how much." The longer the Fed is forced to wait, the deeper will be the recession, predicts Jones. "The worst part of the whole thing is the uncertainty." (CNN "Business Morning", 10/5)

The dollar will probably get some initial support from the rejection of the budget deal as traders look for higher U.S. interest rates, says BILL ORSINI of the BANK OF MONTREAL. "Eventually, however, this is not good news for the dollar," says Orsini, because it indicates to world markets that the United States is unable to get its economic house in order. (FNN "World Business Update", 10/5)

"The dollar was set up for this blowout," says DAVID GILMORE at McCARTHY, CRISATI & MAFFEI, noting that the dollar had ended trading Wednesday at levels many traders saw as sending a sell signal. (WSJ, 10/5)

DAVID GILMORE at McCARTHY, CRISANTI & MAFFEI says FED CHAIRMAN ALAN GREENSPAN "really crossed the Chinese wall between Fed monetary policy and fiscal policy" with his implicit pledge to lower interest rates if Congress approves a deficit reduction package. He calls Greenspan's action "a little bit shoddy." ABIGAIL COOK of HONGKONG & SHANGHAI BANKING CORP. in New York says, "Greenspan sold out." (WSJ, 10/5)

"I never thought that in my lifetime I'd see the [bank] bonds go down like this," says LOWELL BRYAN at McKINSEY & CO. "The yields are telling you there is a good chance that some of these banks are going to default," says NEIL CROWDER of IDS FINANCIAL SERVICES. (WSJ, 10/5)

"The bond market is preoccupied with the goings on in Washington, but it continues to grind higher because it's technical condition is still very good " says JOHN COSTAS at FIRST BOSTON CORP. (NYT, 10/5)

"The betting [in the bond market] is that some version of the budget will be passed, perhaps one with more teeth than the original proposal," says STEVE RICCHUITO at BARCLAYS de ZOETE WEDD. He commented before the House voted against the package early this morning. (WSJ, 10/5)

"We've been expecting that over a six month horizon, we'll get ... a lower shift in the trading range" of the dollar, says NICHOLAS SARGEN of SALOMON

BROTHERS. ("Nightly Business Report", 10/4)

"We believe interest rates have peaked both in the U.S. and Japan," says RAO CHALSANI of PRESCOTT BALL & TURBEN. "We turned more bullish last Thursday and advised our aggressive accounts to reduce cash from 30% to 15% and conservative accounts from 30% to 25%." ("Investor's Daily", 10/5)

"Anticipation that a [budget] deal will be accepted ... weaker oil prices today, and prospects for a bad unemployment number" on Friday helped fuel the bond rally, says HOWARD WARD of SCUDDER, STEVENS & CLARK. He says a lower unemployment rate could drive yields back up. (FNN "Marketwrap", 10/4)

THE ECONOMY:

"Everybody but the economists recognize there's a recession going on in the country," says APPLE CHAIRMAN JOHN SCULLEY. ("USA Today", 10/5)

IN WASHINGTON:

BILL WOLMAN, chief economist at "BusinessWeek" and "CNBC," says, "I think we have a budget accord that, in effect, is not a budget accord. We're back to where we were. ... We're back to square one. We're either back to smoke and mirrors or we're not to back to smoke and mirrors when the thing finally passes. As of this moment, it's smoke and mirrors. There's just no doubt about that." He commented before the House rejected the package. (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 10/4)

"I don't think the market looks at this [budget accord] as a long-term solution anyway," says economist JIM WINDER of MERRILL LYNCH. ("The Washington Post", 10/5)

"I think if they actually vote down the deal, that will change the attitudes of [Fed Chairman Alan] Greenspan and the Fed and the markets will react very negatively," says JAMES JONES, chairman of the AMERICAN STOCK EXCHANGE. ("The Washington Post", 10/5)

NYNEX CORP. has settled a FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION complaint that it overcharged its telephone customers.. The company agreed to a $1.4 million fine and will reduce its interstate access charges for one year by $35.5 million. (NYT, 10/5)

ISABEL SWANHILL of the URBAN INSTITUTE says the immediate effect of the budget agreement would be negative. "That means $500 billion of spending power out of the economy - with reduced production, more unemployment, less income, and less money to spend on consumer goods," explains Swanhill. On the plus side "will be lower interest rates because the government isn't borrowing so much," according to Swanhill. She says the dollar would be hurt by the plan. ("The Christian Science Monitor", 10/5)

"They can't sell the details of the budget agreement," says REP. ROBERT WALKER (R. - Penn.). "What they're saying is that the details are subject to change once it gets to the committee." ("Investor's Daily", 10/5)

"Over a hundred of us signed a written pledge in which we said we would not increase taxes or tax rates or the functional equivalent, which is what this budget does," says REP. CHUCK DOUGLAS (R. - New Hamp.). With this type of opposition, some leaders are backing off of the negotiated agreement. "Many of the policies outlined in the budget summit were for illustrative purposes and there would be the possibility of looking at alternative policies to achieve the same savings," says SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE TOM FOLEY (D. - Wash.). (FNN "Marketwrap", 10/4)

"I would quote Lennon ... John, not Nikolai ... that 'Life is what's happening while you're making other plans,'" says REP. FRED GRANDY (R. - Iowa). "When most of us signed that pledge, we didn't know what Operation Desert Shield was ... most of us thought Hussein was the King of Jordan." ("Nightly Business Report", 10/4)

SANTA BARBARA, CA (OCT. 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Mentor Corp. (NASDAQ: MNTR) today announced record sales of approximately $16.7 million for the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990. Mentor's Chairman, Christopher J. Conway, said he anticipates that second quarter's operating profits will be near record levels, and very similar to the results experienced in the first quarter.

The company also announced that it would take a charge of $1.5 million, or approximately $.09 per share for costs of restructuring certain of its manufacturing operations, and the cost of restructuring its sales force in preparation for a major new product introduction.

Mentor recently moved its polymer manufacturing operation from Santa Barbara to Dallas. Over the next two years other operations, including sterilization, distribution and some product assembly will be moved from Santa Barbara to Dallas. $1.3 million of the charge includes amounts estimated for certain start-up costs, the costs of nontransferable equipment, the resolution of pollution control issues and a general reserve for unspecified expenses. "Relocating these manufacturing operations to Texas will make it much easier to expand production, and should also result in significant margin improvements," said Conway.

Also in connection with the manufacturing relocation, the company announced that it has sold its Santa Barbara manufacturing facility for approximately $5.5 million, and has leased it back for an initial period of three years.

The company's surgical sales force is being restructured and expanded into two separate urology, and plastic surgery sales forces. A charge of $200,000 is being reserved against the anticipated restructuring costs. "Our surgical markets will be better served by the focused efforts of specialized sales forces," said Conway. "We especially want to gear up our urology sales force in preparation for the introduction of Urethrin, which is perhaps the most exciting new product we have ever brought to market."

Urinary incontinence can be treated with injections of Urethrin, a physiologically compatible substance which assists the function of the urethral sphincter. On April 5, 1990, Urethrin was recommended for marketing approval by an FDA Advisory Panel. The company hopes to receive final FDA approval to market the product some time during its current fiscal year.

Mentor Corp. develops, manufactures and markets medical and surgical devices for the specialties of urology, plastic & reconstructive surgery, and ophthalmology; and products for hospital and home health care.

COLOGNE, W. GERMANY (OCT. 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Since announcing a pilot program to collect plastics, metals and other photofinishing materials from U.S. photo labs, several of Eastman Kodak Company's (NYSE: EK) European subsidiaries have launched recycling activities of their own.

Since late 1989, film cartridges, plastic film containers, steel film magazines and paper have been recycled by major U.S. photofinishing labs taking part in the program. Other items collected include film spools, plastic cores from rolls of photographic paper, cardboard shipping containers and wooden pallets. To date, nearly 40 more labs have asked to participate joining the 10 photofinishers and several minilab chains already participating.

"Our goal for 1990 is to add 60 to 70 of the largest labs in the U.S. representing about 50 percent of the photofinishing taking place in this country," said Peter M. Palermo, Kodak vice president and general manager of the Consumer Imaging Division. "They could collect about half of the six million pounds of polyethylene film containers Kodak manufactures annually."

By year's end, the recycling effort could annually collect more than: -- 1,700 tons of steel film cassettes; -- 600 tons of polyethylene film containers and lids, and; -- 330 tons of polystyrene film cartridges, housings and cores from paper.

As Kodak's U.S. recycling effort gains momentum, another program managed by Kodak's European region office is expanding in the United Kingdom and other European countries.

When the European Economic Community is formalized in 1992, the strongest environmental rules of each country effectively will apply across Europe, prompting a broader recycling emphasis. Germany, for example, is extremely sensitive to environmental needs. In Stuttgart, Kodak AG is shipping plastics from the photofinishing process to manufacturers of commodity items, such as industrial piping. The subsidiary is also investigating the collection of spent photofinishing solutions for treatment, as well as monitoring existing minilab effluents.

Elsewhere, environmental efforts take different directions. In Sweden, more labs are using ion-exchange equipment to extend the usefulness of their photochemicals. In Austria, Kodak's subsidiary has begun collecting polyethylene film canisters for recycling. In Japan, some 85 percent of plastics and metals are already recycled by the public for economic rather than environmental needs.

SEATTLE (OCT. 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Immunex Corp. (NASDAQ: IMNX) scientists reported in today's issue of the journal "Cell" that they have discovered and cloned the gene encoding mast-cell growth factor (MGF), a protein known to be associated with anemia, sterility and pigmentation defects in mice. Their work could lead to treatments for certain types of anemia, dysplasia (abnormal development of adult cells), bone-marrow failure and the side effects of chemotherapy-induced conditions in humans.

Scientists have been seeking this growth factor in an effort to understand how a single genetic defect could result in several developmental deficiencies. This discovery will help biologists understand processes that affect anemia, fertility and pigmentation.

"This is a tremendous scientific achievement," said Steven Gillis, Ph.D., Immunex executive vice president and director of research. "It provides the last piece in this genetic puzzle because it identifies the specific link between identical but genetically distinct defects in mice. It will also help scientists understand just how defects at a single genetic location can result in deficiencies in otherwise apparently unrelated processes: blood-cell development, fertility and pigmentation."

MGF is one of a group of naturally occurring proteins called colony-stimulating factors. It stimulates the production of a variety of blood cells in the body and may have application in the treatment of conditions such as anemia and bone-marrow failure in which the production of these cells is suppressed.

MGF acts early in the process of blood-cell development before blood cells differentiate and specialize. As a result, MGF affects a wider range of blood cell types than other later-acting growth factors that may affect only a single blood cell type. For this reason, Immunex scientists believe MGF could eliminate the need to administer a number of specifically targeted factors for certain therapeutic applications.

For many years, scientists had suspected the existence of MGF but were unable to isolate the factor itself or to clone the gene encoding it. Defects in the MGF gene were thought to be responsible for defects that are identical to defects caused by an entirely different gene, known as "c-kit." Immunex scientists demonstrated that the relationship between the two genes was one of ligand and receptor: the "c-kit" gene encodes a receptor for MGF -- that is, it has a site specifically designed to bind with a matching site on the MGF molecule.

Immunex is a leading biotechnology firm focused on the research, development, marketing and manufacture of immunological therapeutic products.

EAST MILLSTONE, NJ (OCT. 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Dr. Kenneth H. Harper, president and chief executive officer of Applied Bioscience International Inc. (APBI) (NASDAQ: APBI), today announced the signing of a letter of intent under the terms of which APBI would acquire the assets of the North American bioequivalency testing and clinical research business PharmaKinetics Laboratories, Inc. (PKLB) (NASDAQ: PKLB). The proposed transaction, which does not include PKLB's German subsidiary or its potential product licensing fees, is subject to completion by APBI of its due diligence review and the execution by the parties of a definitive purchase agreement. The transaction would need to be approved by the boards of directors of both companies and by the shareholders of PKLB. The letter of intent envisages that APBI would make an initial cash payment at closing of $4.8 million, with further contingent payments of $2.0 million over a period of up to five years, and would assume certain specified liabilities associated with the acquired assets.

In the year to June 30, 1990, PKLB reported revenues of $27 million, of which $19 million related to the North American business being purchased by APBI. PKLB also reported a net loss of approximately $3.8 million, of which approximately $2.8 million consisted of certain non- recurring legal and restructuring costs. The operating loss of approximately $1 million for the period, following the previous year's operating profit of $2.8 million, was attributed by PKLB to the down- turn in business coming from the troubled generic drug industry, the subject of various governmental investigations over the past year.

APBI is a broadly based scientific research and development company, providing services under contract to the pharmaceutical, agrochemical, general chemical and food industries. Through its Clinical Science Research subsidiary in the United Kingdom, APBI already provides a range of clinical research services to the pharmaceutical and health-care industries in Europe and Japan. Commenting on the transaction, Dr. Harper stated that he viewed the proposed acquisition as a tremendous opportunity for APBI to extend its clinical activities into the world's largest market for such services. He noted that he had long admired the high level of professionalism displayed by PKLB management and staff and considered their state-of-the-art analytical chemistry laboratory to be outstanding in its field. He emphasized that the new owners would strive to maintain the high standards of service that had characterized PKLB's business in the past.

Fisher-Price purchased Kiddicraft -- a U.K. company which manufactures nursery and preschool toys -- at the end of 1989 and is now relocating the company's work to take advantage of Fisher-Price's manufacturing facilities at Peterlee, County Durham, and its sales and marketing division at Wokingham in the U.K.

Adrian Roche, managing director of Kiddicraft, said, "The consolidation of our operations with Fisher-Price at Peterlee makes financial sense for us. MURRAY HILL, NJ (OCT. 5) PR NEWSWIRE - The BOC Group announced today it has developed a systematic approach to safeguarding against contamination throughout the gas delivery system in semiconductor fabrication -- from storage tank all the way to the point of use. Key elements of that approach were detailed last month in Zurich, Switzerland, at the 10th International Symposium on Contamination Control. The symposium was sponsored by the International Committee of Contamination Control Societies.

The paper was presented by Jeffrey Davidson, general manager of the R&D management department at Osaka Sanso Kogyo Ltd. (OSK), The BOC Group's Japanese gases company. Co-authors include James K. Tseng and A. Ellgren, both of The BOC Group Technical Center at Murray Hill, N.J., and Y. Nakahara, of OSK.

Concentrations of particulate and chemical contaminants in a gas can be affected by the materials, surface finish, fabrication techniques, and component designs used in the gas storage and delivery systems, said Davidson in describing the special test facilities BOC has installed in its Group Technical Center in Murray Hill and in laboratories throughout the company's operating divisions in Europe, the United States and Japan.

These test facilities consist of a purifier gas cabinet that delivers ultrahigh-purity gas. The pure gas passes through a test section that may contain various tubing, valves and other components, followed by an instrument cabinet containing particle counters and trace gas analyzers to assess contamination added in the test section. For example, one of BOC's U.S. test facilities has a unique high-pressure capability allowing testing up to 2000 psig. Likewise, a Japanese facility has analytical capabilities enhanced by an atmospheric pressure ionization mass spectrometer (APIMS) with low part-per-billion to part-per-trillion detection capability.

The BOC Group Technical Center at Murray Hill, N.J., performs research and development on behalf of Airco Gases, BOC Ltd., Osaka Sanso Kogyo Ltd., and other members of The BOC Group. The BOC Group operates in over 50 countries worldwide and had sales last year of over $4 billion.

Airco Gases is the U.S. gases business of BOC, and is a leading manufacturer and supplier of industrial gases and gas handling technology in the United States. The company's primary gas products include liquid and gaseous nitrogen, oxygen, argon and carbon dioxide, helium, hydrogen and a variety of medical, rare and special gases.

NEW ORLEANS (OCT. 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Lucas Aerospace announced at the National Business Aircraft Association (NBAA) Trade Show that Lucas Aerospace Power Transmission Corporation, Utica, N.Y., has developed and qualified a new solid-state sequential timer for its pneumatic deicing systems product line.

This improved timer, Lucas Model 42E25-1A will replace currently used electro-mechanical timers that have a limited life span and are far more expensive to manufacture.

The solid-state timer's function is to control pneumatic deicer boot inflation/deflation. Wing leading edge, empennage and/or engine inlet airfoils are deiced by periodic boot inflation. The timer energizes and de-energizes distributor valve solenoids in a predetermined timing sequence, which may be selected to meet the deicing requirements of a particular aircraft type and model.

At .75 lbs., the timer is very lightweight and has an eight load circuit capacity, two more than the Bendix/Lucas units it replaces. All or any number of lead circuits can be utilized.

The design characteristics of the external envelope, mounting provisions and circuit performance have been maintained so the new timer is physically and functionally interchangeable with existing Bendix and Lucas units. This was done to facilitate forward fit in current production aircraft and retrofit in operational aircraft.

CANTON, Ohio (OCT. 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Ashland Oil Inc. (NYSE: ASH) today announced it will continue its commitment of supporting quality education through a new advertising campaign that stresses the importance of business-education partnerships in Ohio.

Mac Zachem, Ashland Oil's senior vice president for external affairs, unveiled the new campaign during an address to the Canton Rotary today. Zachem also announced that Ashland Oil will promote Ohio's Commission on Education Improvement as the resource businesses can contact for assistance in establishing education alliances.

"We were very pleased to learn that the commission met yesterday afternoon to discuss and approve our request that the commission serve as Ohio's central clearinghouse for businesses interested in forming partnerships with schools," Zachem said. "We believe that jointly we can encourage more businesses to become involved with education."

Zachem said companies interested in forming partnerships should contact the commission, which will be highlighted or featured in Ashland Oil's new print advertising.

The commission was established in 1989 as part of the state's education reform legislation, which created programs designed to both inspire public confidence in Ohio schools and promote a spirit of excellence among students and teachers. Its board of directors consists of members of the state House and Senate, Gov. Richard F. Celeste and a representative of the State Board of Education.

With a campaign theme of "Better education is the bottom line," Zachem said the campaign will stress the importance of business involvement in education in Ohio.

"We know that Stark County is a leader in the state when it comes to business-education partnerships. In fact, there are many examples of successful alliances in the Canton-Akron area involving scholarships, apprenticeships and computer science centers," Zachem said. "We applaud these initiatives and hope that our new campaign's message about the importance of business involvement in education will be the catalyst needed for the formation of more such partnerships statewide, which we believe is vital to the future of Ohio."

According to Michael Billirakis, Ohio Education Association (OEA) vice president, "The OEA salutes Ashland Oil for its continuing efforts to support and advance education.

"As a major corporation, Ashland clearly recognizes the need to work in partnership with teachers and other education employees. Business and education partnerships offer a positive means of strengthening and improving education. The 102,000 members of the OEA are proud to work with Ashland Oil and its employees in this important program," Billirakis said.

Ashland Oil's campaign, which begins today, includes television, radio and print advertisements. This is the eighth consecutive year Ashland Oil has focused its corporate regional advertising campaign on quality education.

The campaign will include a number of other education programs sponsored by the corporation. Ashland Oil again will award $25,000 in Teacher Achievement Awards to 10 Ohio teachers for their teaching excellence. The company also intends to add to its "Recipes for Self-Esteem" program distributed statewide last year. "Recipes" is a teaching aid designed to build elementary students' self-esteem.

ELIZABETH, NJ (OCT. 5) PR NEWSWIRE - After operating more than 40 years under its original name, Business Furniture Inc. has completed transition to the name BFI.

"Business Furniture Inc. was the best name in the world, but we have gone far beyond just selling furniture to clients," explained BFI President Paul Gold.

"We also offer many professional services from relocation to project management," adds Executive Vice President Dan Morley.

Along with the new name, the company has adopted a stylized logo featuring the three letters, BFI, in lower case, which Gold said is "consistent with our efforts to project that we are a well-managed, progressive, and fiscally strong company able to satisfy the needs of our clients."

Among the major clients served by BFI, which recorded sales of $45 million in 1989, are the United Nations, the State of New Jersey, the Federal Reserve Bank, Jersey Central Power & Light, SeaLand Services, Johnson & Johnson, Bendix and Guardian Life Insurance Co.

BFI was established in 1947 by Ben Klausner as a school furniture supply company that soon expanded into the business furniture line.

The firm was largely a furniture dealership until 1972, when Gold, who joined the company in 1969, established Euthenics, BFI's professional planning and design service.

"Then we really started growing," Gold said. "We've expanded to five locations and employ 165 people.

In addition to its Elizabeth headquarters at 133 Rahway Ave., BFI maintains a Manhattan office on 26th Street in New York City and a warehouse and distribution center in Hillside.

The company recently opened a new branch at 10 Lanidex Center West in Parsippany and relocated its Central Jersey branch to 1100 Cornwall Road in Monmouth Jct.

"Our employees are very valuable to us," said Morley. "Our branch office system is designed to accommodate our employees as well as our customers. We recognize the need to be close to where our employees live as well as where our customers are located."

Among other benefits, BFI provides its employees with a smokefree environment and an employee assistance program focusing on industrial psychology and interpersonal relationships.

"Since this is a family-owned company, we try to keep some of that sense of family, literally and figuratively, and our employee turnover rate is very low as a result," Morley added.

BFI is the largest dealer of Herman Miller Inc. business furniture in the metropolitan New York area, and is also a dealer for Kimball International Inc., Gunlocke Inc. and Meridian Inc. as well as many other companies.

GREENWICH, CT (OCT. 5) PR NEWSWIRE - LEP Group plc (ADR - NASDAQ: LEPGY) today announced the following unaudited results for the six months ended June 30, 1990:

Chairman's comments:

General Profits before taxation in the first six months of 1990 were 11.291 million pounds sterling (1989: 9.314 million pounds), an increase of 21.2 percent over the results for the same period last year. Earnings per share rose 12.7 percent to 6.2 pence (1989: 5.5p).

The group is a major international service organization mainly in distribution and electronic security services. The distribution activities comprise freight forwarding, specialized distribution and logistics and the distribution of industrial products.

We have continued our successful strategy of enhancing our global distribution capability with major developments in West and East Germany and in Czechoslovakia. In January we acquired the Wohlfarth Group of companies which is a major German domestic transport and distribution group; in June we established our own majority-owned subsidiary in East Germany where we now have over 300 people at 18 locations; and in September we established a subsidiary in Czechoslovakia in which our partners are Ekotrans Moravia, which is a consortium of some 90 companies involved in civil engineering, construction, tunnelling and mining equipment in Czechoslovakia formed to develop the Elbe/Oder Channel.

Notes: (A) -- The results of overseas subsidiaries and associated companies have been translated into sterling at the average rates of exchange for the period in question. This represents a change of accounting policies for the group and the comparative figures have been restated to reflect this change. The effect of this change on the results for the six months ended June 30, 1990, is to increase profit before taxation by 281,000 pounds and earnings per share by 0.2p.

(B) -- The results for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, are not statutory accounts. A copy of the statutory accounts for that year has been delivered to the Registrar of Companies. The auditors' report on those accounts was not qualified.

(C) -- The interim statement will be sent to shareholders on or about Oct. 11, 1990, and will be made available to the public at the registered office of the company, LEP House, 87 East St., Epsom, Surrey KT17 1DT, England.

(D) -- Earnings per ordinary share has been calculated on the weighted average of 136,156,214 shares in issue during the first half of 1990 (1989: 129,632,756).

The geographical spread of the group's interests in best indicated by the numbers of employees. In the distribution field we now have over 9,600 employees of which over 2,800 are in the unified Germany, just over 2,600 in the United Kingdom, approximately 1,500 in the United States, and 1,200 in the Far East. Our electronic security business is wholly based in North America with just under 2,400 people being employed in those operations.

Distribution We have continued to make good progress in the distribution division with operating profits increasing to 7.4 million pounds from 3.3 million pounds in 1989.

In the freight forwarding division, good results were achieved in the U.K., Canada, Portugal and Thailand. All companies suffered to some extent because of the volatility and weakness of the U.S. dollar. This had a particularly adverse impact on our West German results. A substantial part of that company's earnings are determined in U.S. dollars and the shipping lines were unable to file increased tariffs with the U.S. regulatory bodies quickly enough to offset the rapid deterioration in the U.S. dollar. In July this year we acquired the outstanding minority interest in Profit Systems in the United States. This now enables us to make real progress in the profitable development of our freight forwarding operations in the United States free from the constraints imposed because of that minority interest.

The LEP Swift specialized physical distribution and logistics division in both the U.K. and Europe had a successful period. Good progress continues to be made in implementing our strategy for a Pan- European distribution network based on our well-proven Swift operations in the U.K. The acquisition of Wohlfarth in Germany and our new operations in Belgium and Holland are important steps in that development.

Security Services Operating profits have increased to 12.3 million pounds from 11.3 million pounds in 1989. The electronic security business of The National Guardian Corporation continues its profitable expansion and now operates in Canada as well as in the United States.

Property and Other Property activities have been relatively quiet in the first six months of 1990 with operating profits of 0.1 million pounds compared with 2.8 million pounds in 1989.

Dividend The board had decided to increase the interim dividend to 2.0p, an increase of 14.3 percent over last year; this dividend will be paid on Jan. 11 1991, to shareholders on the register at the close of business on Dec. 7, 1990.

Outlook The current performance of the group continues to be satisfactory. Because of the global spread of our activities and the fact that our operations have been strengthened over recent years, in the absence of significant reductions in economic activity in the main countries in which we operate, we are looking to further progress being made in all parts of the group.

ST. LOUIS (OCT. 5) PR NEWSWIRE - A new red listing option in Southwestern Bell Telephone's (SWBT) White Pages directories could mean "green" for business customers.

SWBT today announced it will introduce Red Feature Bold business listings beginning with the 1991-92 telephone books in 22 cities, giving business customers another opportunity to stand out from the crowd.

Those cities include St. Louis, Kansas City and Springfield, Mo.; Fort Smith and Fayetteville, Ark.; Wichita and Topeka, Kan.; Oklahoma City and Tulsa, Okla.; and Abilene, Amarillo, Corpus Christi, Dallas, El Paso, Houston, Victoria, San Antonio, Rio Grande Valley, Odessa, Midland, Lubbock and Fort Worth, Texas.

Red Feature Bold listings, including the name and phone number, will be set in red 14-point type, about a third larger than the regular listings. It is similar to the company's Feature Bold listing, in which only the name is printed in 14-point type. That business listing option became available throughout SWBT's five states in 1989.

"We have received excellent acceptance with Feature Bold," said Mike Hagan, SWBT's area manager of product management for directory services. "Business customers have told us they have seen an increased volume of calls as a direct result of changing to Feature Bold."

Hagan said Red Feature Bold also should be attractive to business customers, particularly professionals and those in the service industry.

Either Red Feature Bold or Feature Bold listings allows a small shop to stand out just as much as a large business, he said. "It's an excellent investment."

SWBT also offers Bold listings, in which listings are printed in bold but in smaller type than Feature Bold and Red Feature Bold listings.

Red Feature Bold prices range from $18 a month in smaller cities such as Victoria, Texas, to $70 a month in larger cities, such as Dallas. Feature Bold ranges from $13 to $52 a month and Bold ranges from $6.25 to $25 a month.

ATLANTA (OCT. 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Turner Program Services (TPS) has announced its marketing plans for off-network syndication of the Emmy Award-winning, critically acclaimed ABC-TV series "The Wonder Years," as revealed today by W. Russell Barry, president of TPS. New World Entertainment, which produces "The Wonder Years," recently selected TPS to syndicate the highly rated series in the United States, Canada and Puerto Rico.

"The agreement was a first for both companies," said Jack Petrik, chairman of TPS. "It represents the first time New World has chosen another company to distribute its programming and the first off- network series acquired by TPS for syndication."

Under terms of the TPS offer, "The Wonder Years" will be available to stations beginning fall, 1992. The cash plus barter deal covers a five-year license arrangement entitling the stations to air up to 260 weeks of "The Wonder Years." License payments will begin fall 1992 and continue on a weekly basis over the five-year period.

Barter will apply to the first three years, 156 weeks, with the remaining 104 weeks barter free and available for scheduling at stations' discretion. TPS will retain one minute of commercial time which will be handled by Turner Broadcasting Sales Inc. (TBSI) through their syndication ad sales division headed by Rich Goldfarb. TPS is guaranteeing no less than five seasons with a maximum of seven seasons. Barter arrangements will be extended for an additional six months if a seventh season is produced.

"In developing our offer to stations, our goals were to make the terms as straightforward as possible with the greatest opportunity for program flexibility and financial rewards," Barry stated. "The performance of off-net sitcoms has outshone new first-run programming, and we are confident that 'The Wonder Years' will provide a significant return on investment to station buyers. The series is a high-quality, family-oriented program, which embraces traditional American values. It's wide demographic appeal is virtually without peer in network television."

"The Wonder Years" debuted on ABC in early 1988 and became an overnight sensation. The comic look at growing up in suburban America in the late '60s placed among Nielsen's 10 highest-rated series of the season and captured the Emmy for Outstanding Comedy Series of 1987-88. Since then, it has ranked among the top-rated shows on network television and has received a Directors Guild Award, the Golden Globe for Best Television Series, a Writers Guild Award to creators Carol Black and Neal Marlens and a Gold Seal from the Parents Choice Awards. "The Wonder Years" also received 1989-90 season Emmys for Outstanding Writing in a Comedy Series (Bob Brush) and Outstanding Directing in a Comedy Series (Michael Dinner). In addition, it was named Best Television Series of 1989 by television critics polled in Electronic Media.

HARTFORD, CT (OCT. 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Travelers Corporation (NYSE: TIC) today announced it is adding $650 million to reserves for its mortgage loan and real estate investments. In addition, the company will reduce the quarterly dividend on its common stock from 60 cents to 40 cents per share.

The company expects operating profits in the third quarter to surpass 1989 levels of $63 million, and operating income for 1990 is expected to be up approximately 25 percent from last year.

Additional reserves will result in a net loss of $500 million for the third quarter vs. net income of $94 million for the comparable 1989 period, and will result in a net loss for the year.

Edward H. Budd, chairman and chief executive officer, said, "Following an intensive review of our mortgage loans and real estate holdings, we determined it appropriate to increase reserves to provide for real estate losses which we expect to emerge over a number of years. Tightening credit, higher long-term interest rates, more aggressive asset disposal efforts by the Resolution Trust Corporation, dramatic energy cost increases, turmoil in the Middle East and a weaker economy have caused the commercial real estate markets to deteriorate sharply."

Budd continued, "The impact of these economic conditions on Travelers is significant because of our concentration in mortgage loans and real estate investments, made primarily in the mid-1980s." With this addition of $650 million, real estate reserves are estimated to total, $1.150 billion at the end of 1990's third quarter. Budd added "This is appropriate in view of the size of our portfolio and the investment we forsee."

Budd said, "With this level of reserves set aside, we also determined it appropriate to take actions to maintain strong capital ratios necessary to pursue the strategies for our core businesses. The one-third reduction in dividend, which will aggregate $100 million by the end of 1991, allows us to retain more earnings to support growth and supplements the actions we have already taken to strengthen our capital base.

Under current accounting rules, Travelers is unable to record tax offsets to the reserve addition. However, these benefits are expected to be realized over time. The company has potential future tax benefits totaling $350 million available to reduce the impact of actual losses on real estate transactions.

EL PASO, TX (OCT. 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Helen of Troy Corporation (NASDAQ: HELE), developer, designer and marketer of personal care products, today reported results for the second quarter and six months ended Aug. 31, 1990.

Second quarter net earnings were $1,557,000 or 30 cents per share on revenues of $30,967,000 compared with net earnings of $3,400,000 or 62 cents per share on sales of $31,977,000 in the prior year's same quarter.

Half-year net earnings were $2,359,000 or 44 cents per share on revenues of $55,697,000 versus net earnings of $5,327,000 or 97 cents per share on sales of $55,265,000 in fiscal 1990's first six months.

Gerald J. Rubin, chairman and chief executive officer, said the company expects revenues and earnings for the third fiscal quarter to be lower than the third quarter of the prior year due to the national slowdown in retail sales.

"The slowdown in retail business caused by cautious consumer spending has made retailers hesitant to build inventories," Rubin explained.

"We do not expect any improvement in that environment for the balance of this year. Helen of Troy's Vidal Sassoon hair care appliances continue to maintain their dominant market share, but increased competitive pressures have forced profit margins down."

Rubin reported that the company recently began repurchasing a portion of its common stock under a buyback program announced March, 1990. Though the total repurchase now approaches 600,000 shares, the positive impact on earnings per share will not be apparent until the last half of the fiscal year because of the required averaging of outstanding shares. The company plans to buy additional shares "from time to time depending on market conditions."

The board of directors authorized the repurchase of up to one million shares.

Helen of Troy's products include hand-held dryers, curling, styling and brush irons, hairsetters, lighted mirrors and combs and brushes under the Vidal Sassoon and Helen of Troy brand names.

MIAMI, (OCT. 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Ted Arison, 66, announced that he will retire as chairman of Carnival Cruise Lines, Inc. (AMEX: CCL) at the close of business today. He will remain on the company's board of directors and act as a consultant, continuing to oversee new ship construction projects for the line and its subsidiaries.

His 41-year-old son, Micky, who has served as president and CEO since 1979, has been named chairman and CEO by the board of directors.

"The reality is that there won't be that much difference in my involvement. I've been concentrating my efforts primarily on the newbuilding program and Micky has been responsible for the day-to-day operations for the last 11 years " Ted Arison said. "The company has flourished under his leadership. During that time we've gone from a three-ship cruise line, to a diversified travel company that includes 15 ships marketed under three different brand names, a tour operation with hotels, motorcoaches and sightseeing vessels, plus a major gaming resort," he explained.

Commenting on his father's retirement, Micky Arison said, "I'm very happy for him. While I've never encouraged him to do it, I think it's great that he'll be able to slow down a little."

But based on the company's new ship order book, the elder Arison won't have a great deal of idle time on his hands -- at least not anytime in the near future. The company has four ships either under construction or on the drawing boards. The 2,600-passenger Ecstasy, under construction in Finland, is scheduled to enter service on June 2, 1991, operating seven-day cruises to the Caribbean from Miami. Carnival also has contracted with an Italian shipyard for construction of three, 1,250-passenger vessels for its Holland America subsidiary. The first of these, the Statendam, is scheduled for delivery in late 1992, with the second and third vessels to be delivered in 1993 and 1994. And, negotiations are underway for construction of another 2,600-passenger vessel for the Carnival fleet.

Carnival is the world's largest cruise line based on number of passengers carried. Together with its subsidiaries Holland America Line - Westours and Windstar Cruises, Carnival currently operates 15 ships in Alaska, the Caribbean, the South Pacific and the Mediterranean. The tour division includes Westours, the largest operator in Alaska and the Yukon Territory and 19 Westmark Hotels. The company also operates Carnival's Crystal Palace & Casino, a 1,550-room hotel and casino complex in Nassau, Bahamas.

BRIDGEPORT, CT. (OCT. 5) PR NEWSWIRE - The Hydraulic Company (THC) (NYSE: THC) and SRK Holding, Inc. jointly announced today an agreement in principle whereby THC would acquire the outstanding shares of SRK.

Terms of the transaction were not disclosed. It is subject to several terms and conditions, including the negotiation of a definitive purchase and sale agreement, and final approval by the boards of both companies.

THC, through its nonutility subsidiary, Hydrocorp, Inc., acquired its initial 25 percent voting equity in SRK in 1988. SRK, a Monroe, Connecticut-based holding company, is the parent of YWC, a diversified environmental consulting firm that offers a wide range of field engineering and laboratory services to government and private industry.

"We plan to retain YWC's three environmental testing laboratory businesses," THC President and Chief Executive Officer Jack E. McGregor said. It is anticipated, he noted, that these three labs, located in Connecticut, New Jersey and Illinois, will be operated in affiliation with IEA (Industrial & Environmental Analysts, Inc.), which is a wholly owned subsidiary of Hydrocorp. IEA has multidisciplinary analytical testing laboratories in North Carolina, Massachusetts and Vermont.

McGregor said that, once the transaction is completed, THC planned to sell those YWC businesses that are engaged in engineering, consulting and various aspects of remediation.

THC's principal subsidiary is Bridgeport Hydraulic Company, an investor-owned utility that provides public water supply to a population of some 500,000 in 18 Connecticut communities. LOWELL, Ark. (OCT. 5) PR NEWSWIRE - In three separate developments, J.B. Hunt Transport Services, Inc. (NASDAQ: JBHT) announced today a driver wage increase the formation of a flatbed division, and the purchase of substantially all of the assets of Bulldog Trucking, Inc.

Responding to pressures from a continuing industry-wide driver shortage and the need to provide higher wages for qualified drivers, J.B. Hunt Transport, Inc., announced it was increasing its driver pay scale to allow a top rate of 33 cents per mile. Drivers with three years of verifiable experience or more will start at 28 cents per mile and will receive 1 cent per mile increments annually to the maximum of 33 cents. In a break from traditional truckload driver pay plans, bonuses are not a part of the base compensation package. With the announcement, Hunt becomes the highest paying truckload carrier in the industry by a substantial margin.

J.B. Hunt, chairman, commenting on the driver pay change, said, "Our drivers know we know how difficult their job is and they expect us to be on the leading edge in everything we do, including pay." Hunt was himself a truck driver for 21 years and empathizes with the long hours and grueling conditions today's driver endures.

Separately, citing mounting demand form customers and the lack of adequate industry capacity, Hunt has indicated its intention to enter the flatbed truckload business. Initially 200 tractors and 300 flatbed trailers will be operated through a separate business unit of J.B. Hunt Transport. William D. Johnson, president and chief executive officer of Poole Truck Line, an operating company of the Landstar System Group, will head the new operation. The equipment is currently being ordered and Hunt expects operations to begin within the next 90 days. Kirk Thompson, president and chief executive officer of Hunt, explained that Johnson was chosen for the position because of his wealth of industry knowledge and experience, his concern for employees, and his dedication to and reputation with customers.

Additional expansion was also announced through an agreement with NCNB and its leasing company, the major secured creditors of Bulldog Trucking, Inc., to acquire substantially all of Bulldog's fleet of tractors and trailers, and certain real and personal property. Bulldog Trucking, Inc. is a regional short-haul carrier in Carnesville, Ga.

The new acquisition will become a division of J.B. Hunt and will operate autonomously from the current J.B. Hunt truckload van fleet.

Thompson stated, "Bulldog, with its impeccable reputation for quality service that has been nurtured by President Ed Brown, represents an attractive window into markets we do not currently serve. We look forward to complementing the quality service which has been offered by Bulldog with the substantial economies of scale and financial stability that can be provided by J.B. Hunt.

"These developments should improve the quality of services being provided by J.B. Hunt and strengthen our domination of the full-load, containerizable transportation business in North America. We are extremely pleased to expand our services to regional short haul and flatbed markets through the capable leadership of Bill Johnson and Ed Brown, both of whom represent professional transportation expertise of the highest order."

PALO ALTO, Calif. (OCT. 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Coherent Inc. (NASDAQ: COHR) announced today that it has received marketing clearance from the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) for use of its Holmium Lasers in a broad range of open, laparoscopic and endoscopic procedures in General Surgery, including the removal of gall bladders. The new surgical technique for removing the gall bladder is called "Endoscopic Laser Cholecystectomy." It is performed through small incisions in the abdomen, and results in reduced hospital stay as well as less trauma and pain for the patient.

Dr. John Semertzides of Deconess Hospital in Cincinnati, who has performed over 100 gall bladder surgeries using a variety of lasers including Argon, Neodymium:YAG, Carbon Dioxide and KTP lasers, noted that "the Coherent Holmium laser supersedes any other laser for this procedure." He added that "the unique cutting and hemostatic properties of the Holmium laser make it the laser of choice for Endoscopic Laser Cholecystectomy."

According to Ted Belleza, director of Marketing for Coherent Medical Group, Coherent is the first company to receive FDA clearance for the use of the Holmium laser in this procedure. Belleza noted that approximately one in twelve persons suffer from gall bladder disease, and over half a million cholecystectomy procedures are performed annually in the United States. Whereas the conventional procedure involves opening the abdominal wall to access the gall bladder through a six-to eight-inch incision, the new procedure is performed through four half-inch puncture incisions. Belleza added that hospital stay is typically reduced from several days to only one or two days. Also, patient recovery is reduced from several weeks to a few days.

Belleza indicated that in addition to Cholecystectomy, a broad range of general surgery procedures are now cleared for use of the Coherent Holmium laser. These include: Lysis of adhesions, appendectomy, biopsy of the liver, pylorostenotomy, benign and malignant lesions, and rectal polyps of sigmoid colon.

Coherent, Inc. is the world leader in the design, manufacture and marketing of lasers for science, medicine and industry.

SHERMAN OAKS, CA (OCT. 5) PR NEWSWIRE - APSB Bancorp, the Sherman Oaks-based parent of American Pacific State Bank, said its third-quarter profits increased 30 percent from a year earlier.

The bank reported that net income for the three-month period that ended Sept. 30, 1990, climbed to $566,000 or 41 cents a share from $436,000 or 31 cents a share a year earlier.

The bank's assets as of Sept. 30 increased 15 percent to $204 million, compared to last year's figure of $177 million. The substantial increase in bank assets is attributed in part to the tremendous success the bank has experienced with the opening of its new Woodland Hills office in Warner Center.

Continued record profitability is attributed to the continuing success of the bank's SBA Loan Division, a strong loan demand coupled with tight controls over expenses and a continued strong net interest margin.

Still one of the leading producers of SBA loans in the United States, American Pacific State Bank recently relocated its Administrative offices to the 16th floor of its Sherman Oaks branch office located at Ventura and Sepulveda Boulevards. The bank has five branches located throughout the San Fernando Valley.

CHICAGO, (OCT. 5) PR NEWSWIRE - United Airlines' new Chicago Regional Reservations Center opens this afternoon with 900 employees equipped with the latest automation to handle more than 7,000 calls per hour. The $25 million, 120,000-square-foot facility is located at 11555 West Touhy Ave., near the north boundary of O'Hare International Airport.

"The new facility, designed to grow with United's expansion, underscores our commitment to continued growth in Chicago, our hometown," said Stephen M. Wolf chairman and president. Wolf emphasized that close cooperation with the city of Chicago enabled United to build the facility on an accelerated schedule just 12 months after the site was selected.

By 8 p.m. tonight, all calls will be switched over from the former reservation facility in suburban Elk Grove Township.

The new facility is more than twice the size of the previous Chicago reservations office, with the ability to accommodate up to 2,000 employees by 1993. The Chicago reservations operation currently handles about 1.2 million calls per month. That number is expected to increase to approximately 3 million calls per month by 1993.

To handle this growth, United plans to hire new employees, including reservations sales representatives, supervisory and training staff. A new class of 75 people will begin their 7-week training program Oct. 15.

United's Chicago Regional Reservation Center not only serves the Chicago metropolitan area, but also handles a large portion of the toll- free calls throughout the U.S. It is one of only two United reservations offices open 24 hours a day.

The office handles domestic and international reservations sales, travel agency services, Premier Mileage Plus calls, and includes a special desk that allows hearing-impaired customers to make reservations via a TTY (tele-typewriter) machine.

Also housed in the building is a ticket office with easy access from Touhy Road.

United currently has nine domestic reservations centers and 15 offices in Europe, the Pacific and Mexico.

Later this month, Stephen Wolf will host more than 100 Illinois and Chicago officials, including Chicago's Mayor Richard M. Daley, at an official dedication ceremony for the new building.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 5) PR NEWSWIRE - The textile and apparel industry lost more than 68,000 jobs last year according to data released today by the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS).

The BLS reported that 45,000 apparel workers and 23,000 textile workers have been laid-off since September of 1989. The September 1990 unemployment rate for the apparel industry was 8.4 percent and 6 percent for the textile industry. The national unemployment average is 5.7 percent.

Daniel K. Frierson, chairman of the Fiber, Fabric and Apparel Coalition for Trade (FFACT), commented: "These figures represent only the tip-of-the-iceberg as to what has been taking place in our industry during the past decade. During the last 10 years over 400,000 hard working American textile, apparel and footwear workers have lost their jobs to foreign competitors. These numbers clearly show the erosion of our nation's second largest manufacturing industry. It is a fact textile and apparel manufacturing plants in this country are shutting their doors and closing down in turn sending hardworking Americans to unemployment lines.

"Our economy cannot stand to lose this cornerstone of American industry. The 1990 Textile, Apparel, and Footwear Trade Act of 1990 passed both the House and Senate by overwhelming margins and is sitting on President Bush's desk awaiting his signature. With the president's approval, this legislation could correct this situation. I urge President Bush to sign this bill and save our industry."

KUPTSOV TOLD THE 17TH CONGRESS OF THE PROGRESSIVE WORKERS' PARTY OF CYPRUS (AKEL). HE DESCRIBED RELATIONS BETWEEN THE SOVIET UNION AND CYPRUS AS FRIENDLY.

"THIS IS CONFIRMED BY THE GROWING UNDERSTANDING AND EXPANDING RELATIONS BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES," HE SAID, "WHICH HAVE FOUND EXPRESSION IN THE MESSAGES EXCHANGED BETWEEN PRESIDENTS MIKHAIL GORBACHEV AND GEORGIOS VASSILIOU VISITS AND MEETINGS AT THE MINISTERIAL LEVEL AND EXCHANGES OF VARIOUS DELEGATIONS."

KUPTSOV SAID THAT SOVIET PERESTROIKA, WHICH IS INALIENABLY LINKED WITH A POLICY THAT IS BASED ON NEW THINKING IN INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS, HAD CONTRIBUTED IN MANY WAYS TO FAVOURABLE CHANGES THROUGHOUT THE WORLD. "THEY INCLUDE SUCH IMPORTANT STEPS AS THE REDUCTION OF TWO TYPES OF NUCLEAR WEAPONS AND THE FIRM RESOLUTION TO CUT CONVENTIONAL FORCES IN EUROPE AND TO BAN AND SCRAP ALL CHEMICAL WEAPONS. "WE WOULD LIKE TO SEE THIS REGION BECOME A ZONE OF PEACE AND COOPERATION, SO THAT THERE WOULD BE NO MORE SEATS OF TENSION OR FOREIGN MILITARY BASES THERE. WARSHIPS CARRYING NUCLEAR WEAPONS MUST BE WITHDRAWN FROM THE REGION. WE HOPE THIS IDEA WILL BE SUPPORTED BY A SPECIAL CONFERENCE HELD DURING THE MEETING ON SECURITY AND COOPERATION IN EUROPE," KUPTSOV STRESSED.

"RELATIONS BETWEEN THE SOVIET COMMUNIST PARTY AND AKEL ASSUME PARTICULAR IMPORTANCE IN THE CURRENT DIFFICULT AND QUICKLY CHANGING SITUATION," KUPTSOV SAID. "SOVIET COMMUNISTS REAFFIRM THEIR SUPPORT OF AKEL'S JUST STRUGGLE FOR THE WORKING PEOPLE'S SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC RIGHTS, IN THE INTERESTS OF ALL THE CYPRUS PEOPLE."

AFTER THE GENEVA ACCORDS WERE SIGNED, PRACTICAL CONDITIONS WERE CREATED FOR A PEACEFUL RESOLUTION OF THE AFGHAN PROBLEM. FOLLOWING THE WITHDRAWAL OF SOVIET TROOPS, VARIOUS PLANS WERE PUT FORWARD FOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF PEACE IN AFGHANISTAN.

THE AFGHAN GOVERNMENT, ONCE AGAIN STATING ITS DESIRE FOR A PEACEFUL SOLUTION TO THE CONFLICT, SEEKS TO ALERT THE UNITED NATIONS TO THE DANGER OF AN ARMED AGGRESSION ON THE PART OF PAKISTAN.

THE AFGHAN GOVERNMENT URGES ISLAMABAD TO REFRAIN FROM FURTHER AGGRAVATING THE SITUATION, WHICH MAY LEAD TO THE OUTBREAK OF A SERIOUS REGIONAL CRISIS. THE AFGHAN ARMED FORCES ARE PREPARED TO ISSUE A CRUSHING REBUFF TO AGGRESSORS IN ANY PLACE AND UNDER ANY CONDITIONS, THE STATEMENT EMPHASISES.

NUKUS, UZBEKISTAN (OCTOBER 5) TASS - AN INTERNATIONAL SYMPOSIUM "THE ARAL CRISIS: ITS CAUSES AND WAYS TO SOLVE IT" HAS ENDED IN NUKUS, CAPITAL OF THE KARA-KALPAK SOVIET AUTONOMOUS REPUBLIC IN THE NORTH OF UZBEKISTAN. PARTICIPANTS HANDED OVER TO THE REPUBLICAN GOVERNMENT A PACKAGE OF PROPOSALS TO SAVE THE ARAL SEA.

THE SYMPOSIUM, WHICH WAS SPONSORED BY THE UNITED NATIONS, THE ARAL SCIENTIFIC-RESEARCH COORDINATING CENTRE AND THE SOVIET ACADEMY OF SCIENCES' GEOGRAPHY INSTITUTE, DREW SCIENTISTS FROM 14 COUNTRIES.

RECOMMENDATIONS TO SAVE THE ARAL SEA WERE DEVELOPED ON THE BASIS OF PROJECTS BY SOVIET AND FOREIGN SCIENTISTS WHO SUMMARISED INTERNATIONAL EXPERIENCE IN SOLVING SIMILAR PROBLEMS. SOVIET CENTRAL ASIAN REPUBLICS WILL USE THESE RECOMMENDATIONS AS A FOUNDATION FOR AN INTER-REGIONAL TREATY ON SALVAGING THE ARAL SEA. SCIENTISTS BELIEVE THAT AN ECOLOGICAL CATASTROPHE, WHICH MAY TRIGGER IRREVERSIBLE PROCESSES IN OTHER COUNTRIES, CAN BE STEMMED ONLY BY JOINT EFFORTS.

THE ARAL IS AN ENCLOSED SALT LAKE LOCATED AT THE JOINT OF THE KARA-KUM AND KYZYL-KUM"DESERTS AND IS AN IMPORTANT NATURAL REGULATOR, DETERMINING CLIMATIC CONDITIONS. ECONOMIC ACTIVITY CAUSED ITS WATERS TO DECREASE ALMOST THREE-FOLD AND THE WATER LEVEL TO DROP BY 14 METERS. WATER SALINITY INCREASED SEVERAL TIMES AND FISH HAVE NOW ALL BUT VANISHED. THE CLIMATE IN THE AREA OF THE ARAL SEA HAS CHANGED DRASTICALLY. INTENSIVE DESERTIFICATION IS UNDER WAY. ALL THIS IS HAVING A KNOCK-ON EFFECT ON PEOPLE'S HEALTH.

"SIXTY PER CENT OF THE KARA-KALPAK REPUBLIC'S POPULATION NEEDS URGENT MEDICAL TREATMENT," ACADEMICIAN SOBYR KAMALOV SAID IN HIS SPEECH. "THE CHILD MORTALITY RATE IN THE AREA OF THE SEA IS ALMOST THREE TIMES AS HIGH AS IN OTHER REGIONS OF THE SOVIET UNION. GENE LINKS WILL BEGIN TO BE MODIFIED IN THE HUMAN ORGANISM ALREADY IN TEN TO FIFTEEN YEARS, WHICH WILL ENTAIL THE BIOLOGICAL DEGENERATION OF PEOPLES. THE SAME ATTENTION SHOULD BE CALLED TO THE PROBLEMS OF ARAL AS TO THE CHERNOBYL ACCIDENT," KAMALOV STRESSED.

HE ANSWERED JOURNALISTS' QUESTIONS ABOUT THE RESULTS OF THE RECENT VISIT OF PRESIDENT ARPAD GONCZ OF HUNGARY TO THE UKRAINE.

HE STRESSED THAT THE UKRAINE AND HUNGARY HAVE TRADITIONALLY MAINTAINED MUTUALLY BENEFICIAL RELATIONS, AND THEIR FURTHER DEVELOPMENT IS FULLY IN LINE WITH PRINCIPLES RECORDED IN THE SOVIET CONSTITUTION. THE SOVIET FOREIGN MINISTRY SPOKESMAN WELCOMED THE READINESS, EXPRESSED IN A JOKNT STATEMENT, TO DEEPEN RELATIONS BETWEEN THE UKRAINE AND HUNGARY IN THE POLITICAL, ECONOMIC AND HUMANITARIAN SPHERES, INCLUDING IN ENSURING THE RIGHTS OF NATIONAL MINORITIES.

NEW YORK, U.N. (OCTOBER 5) TASS - A REGULAR WORKING MEETING BETWEEN SOVIET FOREIGN MINISTER EDUARD SHEVARDNADZE AND U.S. SECRETARY OF STATE JAMES BAKER BEGAN HERE TODAY. THIS IS THEIR FOURTH MEETING IN NEW YORK DURING THE PAST WEEK AND A HALF.

THEY HAD TOLD JOURNALISTS EARLIER THAT AT THE MEETING THEY WOULD TRY TO FIND SOLUTIONS TO A NUMBER OF KEY PROBLEMS DEALING WITH TALKS ON CONCLUDING A TREATY ON STRATEGIC OFFENSIVE ARMAMENTS.

THEY WILL ALSO SETTLE ALL PROBLEMS DEALING WITH THE AGREEMENT ON THE REDUCTION OF CONVENTIONAL ARMAMENTS IN EUROPE AS AN INDISPENSABLE CONDITION FOR HOLDING THE ALL-EUROPEAN SUMMIT IN PARIS THIS NOVEMBER, THEY SAID.

QUESTIONED ON WHETHER IT WILL BE POSSIBLE TO FINISH THIS WORK TODAY, SHEVARDNADZE AND BAKER SUGGESTED THAT THEY WAIT AND SEE. SHEVARDNADZE SAID THAT THEY WERE IN A SERIOUS MOOD. OTHERWISE THEY WOULD NOT HAVE MET FOUR TIMES.

MOSCOW (OCTOBER 5) TASS - A GROUP OF SOVIET PARLIAMENTARIANS HAS VOICED "ALARM AND BEWILDERMENT" IN CONNECTION WITH SOVIET FOREIGN MINISTER EDUARD SHEVARDNADZE'S STATEMENT AT THE UNITED NATIONS ON THE POSSIBILITY OF SENDING A SOVIET MILITARY CONTINGENT TO THE GULF.

THE GROUP, CALLING ITSELF SOYUZ (UNION), UNITES MORE THAN 400 SOVIET PEOPLE'S DEPUTIES. IT FAVOURS THE PRESERVATION OF A STRONG SOVIET UNION AND OPPOSES SECESSIONIST TENDENCIES.

THE GROUP SAID IN A STATEMENT RELEASED IN MOSCOW TODAY THAT ALTHOUGH "THE IRAQI OCCUPATION OF KUWAIT CANNOT BUT CAUSE INDIGNATION AND CONDEMNATION BY ALL HONEST PEOPLE", THE ISSUE SHOULD BE SOLVED "BY POLITICAL MEANS AND NOT BY THE USE OF MILITARY FORCE".

THE GROUP'S COORDINATOR VIKTOR ALKSNIS TOLD TASS THAT THE GROUP'S REACTION HAD BEEN PROMPTED BY THE FACT THAT SOVIET PEOPLE'S DEPUTIES HAD NOT BEEN INFORMED ABOUT THE DECISION BEHIND SHEVARDNADZE'S STATEMENT.

HE POINTED OUT THAT THE DECISION HAD NOT BEEN SUBMITTED FOR THE PRELIMINARY CONSIDERATION AND APPROVAL OF THE USSR SUPREME SOVIET AND SAID THE GROUP HAS DEMANDED AN IMMEDIATE PARLIAMENTARY INVESTIGATION OF THE ISSUE.

MOSCOW (OCTOBER 50 TASS - ON AUGUST 4, PRESIDENT MIKHAIL GORBACHEV ISSUED A DECREE "ON HIGH PRIORITY MEASURES FOR THE TRANSFER TO MARKET RELATIONS", A MOVE THAT PRESIDENTIAL AID FOR ECONOMIC AFFAIRS NIKOLAI PETRAKOV DESCRIBED AS A MOVE FROM MERE WORDS TO ACTION.

HE WAS SPEAKING AT A JOINT NEWS CONFERENCE WITH DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER LEONID ABALKIN DEVOTED TO THE LATEST PRESIDENTIAL DECREE.

ABALKIN NOTED THAT THE DECREE CONCERNED THE MARKET'S KEY PROBLEM, THAT OF PRICING, ABOVE ALL WHOLESALE PRICING. HE SAID THE DECREE MARKED A MAJOR STEP IN WAIVING ADMINISTRATIVE PRICING OF TECHNICAL GOODS AND TOWARDS AGREED, CONTRACT PRICES.

IT IS EXPECTED, ABALKIN SAID, THAT ECONOMIC RELATIONS IN 1991 WILL BE BASED ON RESPECTIVE AGREEMENTS ON TERMS AND VOLUMES OF SUPPLIES AND PRICES FOR PRODUCTS.

ACCORDING TO ABALKIN, A LIST OF PRICES HAS BEEN COMPILED TO PROVIDE INITIAL REFERENCE POINTS FOR SUCH AGREEMENTS. THERE ARE INDUSTRIES, HE POINTED OUT, WHICH CALL FOR PRESERVING PRICES AT THEIR CURRENT LEVEL.

HE SAID ABOUT 70 PER CENT OF ALL PRICES WILL BE ESTABLISHED BY CONTRACT, AND 30 PER CENT WILL BE FIXED CENTRALLY. IN ORDER TO MAINTAIN A BALANCE BETWEEN THE TOWN AND THE COUNTRY, FOR INSTANCE, THE CENTRE WILL DECREE STABLE PRICES FOR SOME MACHINERY, EQUIPMENT AND ENERGY RESOURCES.

PETRAKOV DESCRIBED THE PRESIDENTIAL DECREE AS "A DECISIVE PRACTICAL STEP TOWARDS A MARKET-BASED ECONOMY". HE SAID IT WAS NECESSARY TO CREATE A COMPETITIVE MARKET BECAUSE IN A MARKET- ORIENTED ECONOMY PRICING SHOULD TAKE PLACE UNDER COMPETITION.

RESPONDING TO QUESTIONS FROM JOURNALISTS, PETRAKOV SAID THAT A DRAFT PRESIDENTIAL DECREE HAS BEEN DRAWN UP TO CHANGE THE ROUBLE'S COMMERCIAL EXCHANGE RATE USED BY SOVIET ENTERPRISES. THE DRAFT DECREE, HE SAID, IS NOW BEING CONSIDERED BY THE LEADERSHIPS OF SOVIET REPUBLICS PRIOR TO ITS SIGNING BY THE PRESIDENT.

ABALKIN SAID THE MOST DELICATE QUESTION WAS THAT OF RETAIL PRICES. SPEAKING ABOUT THE TERMS FOR THE SOLUTION OF THIS PROBLEM, HE NOTED THAT TWO WAYS WERE BEING CONSIDERED -- RETAIL PRICE RISES BY ADMINISTRATIVE ORDINANCES AND THE GRADUAL RELAXATION OF CONTROLS ON THEM.

"THE DECISION HAS NOT YET BEEN MADE," HE SAID AND NOTED THAT THIS "VERY RESPONSIBLE STEP" COULD NOT BE PUT OFF INDEFINITELY, DESPITE ITS COMPLEXITY AND UNPOPULARITY.

COMMENTING ON THE PREPARATION OF A SINGLE PLAN FOR THE TRANSITION TO A MARKET-BASED ECONOMY, ABALKIN CALLED UPON THE MEDIA NOT TO PRESENT THE ISSUE AS A GLADIATOR BATTLE.

"WE ARE ALL EQUALLY CONCERNED ABOUT THE FATE OF THE COUNTRY AND THE PEOPLE AND ARE LOOKING FOR SOLUTIONS THAT WOULD BE MOST EFFECTIVE AND LEAST PAINFUL FOR THE POPULATION," HE SAID.

ABALKIN TOLD THE NEWS CONFERENCE THAT AN ANTI-MONOPOLY COMMITTEE WOULD BE SET UP WITHIN THE FRAMEWORK OF THE TRANSITION TO THE MARKET AND THE CREATION OF RESPECTIVE NEW STRUCTURES IN THE SOVIET UNION.

TALLINN (OCTOBER 5) ETA-TASS - ESTONIAN NEWSPAPERS PUBLISHED ON FRIDAY THE DOCUMENT DRAFTED BY ESTONIAN GOVERNMENT ABOUT THE GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF PRIVATIZATION WHICH SHOULD BECOME PART OF COMPREHENSIVE STAGE-BY-STAGE REFORM OF PROPERTY IN ESTONIA.

THE DOCUMENT SAYS THAT CHIEF PURPOSES OF THE REFORM ARE THE WIDENING OF THE PRIVATE SECTOR AND OF THE RIGHTS OF ENTREPRENEURS, AS WELL AS THE LIMITATION OF THE STATES' ROLE IN ECONOMIC MANAGEMENT.

URGENT ECONOMIC MEASURES TO BE IMPLEMENTED IN THREE STAGES INCLUDE THE RETURN OF NATIONALIZED AND FORCIBLY SOCIALISED PROPERTY, THE REALISATION OF THE UNUSED PROPERTY OF STATE ENTERPRISES, INSTITUTIONS AND ORGANIZATIONS, AS WELL AS OF COMPLETE PROPERTY OF BASIC BRANCHES OF THE INDUSTRY, CONSTRUCTION, AGRICULTURE, SERVICING AND TRADE, THE SOCIAL AREA AND HOUSING. THERE ARE PLANS FOR WIDE USE OF CREDITING AND FOR LEASING PROPERTY WITH FIXING THE TERMS ON WHICH IT CAN BE BOUGHT OUT.

THE DOCUMENT SAYS THAT AT PRESENT THERE IS NO NEED TO LINK RESTRICTIONS ON THE SUBJECTS OF PRIVATIZATION WITH ESTONIAN CITIZENSHIP. HOWEVER, ONE SHOULD BE REGISTERED AS AN ESTONIAN RESIDENT WITH A CERTAIN MINIMAL DURATION OF RESIDENCY, FOR INSTANCE, TEN YEARS.

THE ESTONIAN GOVERNMENT WILL SET UP A DEPARTMENT OF STATE PROPERTY TO ORGANIZE THE PROCESS OF PRIVATIZATION. IT WILL INCLUDE REPRESENTATIVES OF VARIOUS AGENCIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

THE PRIVATIZATION IS TO BE IMPLEMENTED PUBLICLY, SPECIFICALLY THROUGH SALES OR A COMPETITION. STATE ENTERPRISES CAN OFFER ALTERNATIVE PROGRAMMES OF THEIR DEVELOPMENT.

THE FIRST STAGE OF PRIVATIZATION IS PLANNED TO BE STARTED THIS YEAR. FOR THE SECOND STAGE, THE ESTONIAN PARLIAMENT MUST ADOPT THE MAIN LEGISLATIVE DOCUMENTS ON PRIVATIZATION. INDIVIDUALS AND ORGANIZATIONS CAN ALSO PARTICIPATE IN EDITING THE PROPOSED CONCEPT, ADDRESSING THEIR REMARKS AND SUPPLEMENTS TO THE ESTONIAN MINISTRY OF ECONOMICS TILL OCTOBER 20, 1990.

JURMALA (OCTOBER 5) TASS - PRIME MINISTERS OF THE THREE BALTIC REPUBLICS MET TODAY IN JURMALA, LATVIA, TO DISCUSS TOPICAL ECONOMIC PROBLEMS. HEADS OF VARIOUS MINISTRIES ARE PARTICIPATING IN THE CONFERENCE.

AT A RECENT MEETING OF THE PRESIDIUM OF THE LATVIAN PARLIAMENT, DEPUTIES CRITICISED THE GOVERNMENT FOR DELAYS IN WORKING OUT LAWS THAT HAVE ALREADY BEEN ADOPTED IN THE TWO OTHER BALTIC REPUBICS. THUS, ESTONIA HAS ALREADY ADOPTED LAWS ON PROPERTY AND ON TAXES. LATVIA HAS NOT BEGUN TO ANALYSE ITS OWN PLANS AS YET. LATVIAN PREMIER IVARS GODMANIS ADMITTED THAT THIS CRITICISM IS DESERVED. HIS STATEMENT THAT, ACCORDING TO PRELIMINARY ESTIMATES, THE BUDGET FOR THE NEXT YEAR WILL RUN A DEFICIT OF 1,5 BILLION ROUBLES CAUSED THE DEPUTIES' CONCERN.

DEPUTIES WERE ALSO CONCERNED ABOUT THE GROWTH OF STATE PRICES IN NEIGHBOURING REPUBLICS. IT WILL BE MORE PROFITABLE FOR LATVIAN PEASANTS TO TAKE THEIR PRODUCE TO ESTONIA, THAN TO SUPPLY LOCAL RESIDENTS WITH IT. AS CUSTOMS POSTS ARE LACKING, THIS PROCESS WILL BE IMPOSSIBLE TO ARREST (CUSTOMS POSTS HAVE BEEN ESTABLISHED ONLY ON BORDERS WITH BYELORUSSIA AND RUSSIA).

IN THESE CONDITIONS THE LATVIAN GOVERNMENT WILL FIND IT DIFFICULT TO FULFIL THE PROMISE THAT THERE WILL BE NO PRICE INCREASES IN LATVIA.

THE PROBLEMS WITH FUEL, STORING VEGETABLES AND POTATOES AND THE SUPPLY OF THE REPUBLICS WITH RAW MATERIALS FOR INDUSTRIAL ENTERPRISES HAVE BECOME MORE ACUTE AS WINTER DRAWS NEAR. OBSERVERS BELIEVE THAT THESE AND OTHER QUESTIONS WILL BE RAISED AT THE MEETING IN JURMALA TODAY.

PRAGUE (OCT. 5) TASS - "IN THE FIRST HALF OF THE CURRENT YEAR SOVIET OIL DELIVERIES TO CZECHOSLOVAKIA WERE ON A SUFFICIENT LEVEL. THEY WERE CARRIED OUT IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE PROTOCOL ON TRADE TURNOVER FOR 1990, SIGNED BY THE USSR AND CZECHOSLOVAKIA, WHICH ENVISAGES THE DELIVERY OF 16.6 MILLION TONNES OF OIL," SOVIET COMMERCIAL REPRESENTATIVE IN CZECHOSLOVAKIA IVAN PANTELEEV TOLD TASS.

HE SAID THAT THE TREND TOWARDS THE REDUCTION OF OIL EXPORTS EMERGED LAST JULY BECAUSE OF THE WORSENING ECONOMIC SITUATION IN THE USSR AND, IN THE FIRST PLACE, IN OIL-PRODUCING REGIONS".

DESCRIBING THE SITUATION WITH SOVIET OIL EXPORTS, PANTELEEV SAID THAT THE REDUCTION OF OIL DELIVERIES AFFECTED NOT ONLY CZECHOSLOVAKIA, BUT ALSO OTHER EAST AND CENTRAL EUROPEAN COUNTRIES. "IT IS NOT THAT THERE IS SOME DISCRIMINATION AGAINST CZECHOSLOVAKIA", PANTELEEV POINTED OUT. HE EXPRESSED HIS EMPHATIC DISAGREEMENT WITH THE VIEW, VOICED IN SOME CASES, THAT THE SOVIET UNION REDUCED ITS OIL EXPORTS FOR POLITICAL REASONS.

CINCINNATI (OCT. 4) UPI - Andy Van Slyke bounced a ground-rule double to snap a tie in the seventh inning and Sid Bream smashed a two-run homer Thursday night, powering the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 4-3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds in the opening game of the National League playoffs.

Game 2 of the best-of-seven series is scheduled for Friday afternoon at Riverfront Stadium.

With the score tied 3-3 in the seventh, Gary Redus pinch hit for Pirates' starter Bob Walk and blooped a single to shallow right off loser Norm Charlton. Redus stole second and Jay Bell walked. Van Slyke ripped a drive that went over the head of left fielder Eric Davis and bounded over the wall to produce the game-winning run.

Walk survived a shaky first inning and lasted six to get the win. He surrendered three runs and four hits, with five strikeouts and two walks. Stan Belinda pitched a perfect seventh and eighth, but the Reds nearly rallied to tie it in the ninth.

Todd Benzinger singled off reliever Bob Patterson in the inning and Eric Davis followed with a walk. Pinch hitter Ron Oester bunted, but Patterson fired to third to nail Benzinger, with Davis advancing to second.

Ted Power relieved and Billy Bates pinch ran for Oester. Bates was nailed at second on a double steal, but lead runner Davis advanced to third. Power then struck out Chris Sabo swinging to record the save.

Cincinnati starter Jose Rijo lasted 5 1-3 innings, giving up three runs and four hits. The fireballing right-hander struck out eight, but hurt himself with three walks.

Cincinnati jumped to a 3-0 first-inning lead, thanks mainly to back- to-back doubles by Davis and Paul O'Neill. But the Pirates battled back and tied it 3-3 in the fourth on Bream's towering two-run homer.

The Reds tore into Walk right off the bat, turning three hits, a walk and an error into three runs in the first inning.

Barry Larkin led off with a walk, moved to second on a sacrifice by Billy Hatcher and scored on a Hal Morris line-drive single between third and short.

Davis then blasted a double to right and Morris raced home from first when right fielder Bobby Bonilla bobbled the ball for an error. Davis took third on the miscue. O'Neill followed with a double to right-center to score Davis and give Cincinnati a 3-0 advantage.

The Pirates, after going down in order the first two innings, finally reached Rijo in the third to pull to within 3-1. But, the Pirates should have scored more in the inning, stranding a runner on third with no outs.

Mike LaValliere opened the third by drawing a walk and the husky catcher made it home from first on Jose Lind's triple that hugged the first-base line and skipped all the way to the right field corner. Right fielder O'Neill made it easier for the slow-running LaValliere to score by falling down as he fielded the ball against the wall.

That left the Pirates with a runner on third and no outs, but Rijo avoided further trouble by striking out Walk and Backman and getting Jay Bell to pop up. Rijo struck out the pesky Backman with a blazing fastball that handcuffed the usually adept ledadoff hitter.

But Rijo hurt himself the next inning when he issued a two-out walk to Barry Bonds. Bream followed with a mammoth two-run homer to right. His shot came off a high Rijo fastball on a 1-1 count and tied the score 3-3.

Pittsburgh blew a chance in the sixth. With one out, Bonilla and Bonds cracked back-to-back singles to chase Rijo. Charlton came on to walk Bream and load the bases, but got LaValliere to bounce into a double play to get out of the jam.

(OCT. 5) UPI - A showdown vote in the House is expected soon on the 500-BILLION- dollar deficit reduction budget plan announced last weekend by President Bush and congressional leaders. Earlier in the evening, the agreement survived a procedural test vote. If the plan itself is approved, the Senate will take it up Friday. That's the deadline Bush and the leadership of both parties have set for completing action on the package.

The State Department says it plans to charter another Iraqi Airways jetliner next Wednesday to airlift American women and children out of Iraq and occupied Kuwait. It would be the 10th major U-S evacuation flight. There are an estimated 350 Americans still in Kuwait and a similar number in Iraq. At least another 101 U-S citizens are being held hostage by the Baghdad government.

The leader of the Phillipine rebel solders who have proclaimed an independent federal state in Mindanao says he welcomes talks with government officials. But a military spokesman in Manila ruled out negotiations Friday and said troops are being airlifted to the southern island to launch an attack on renegade army Colonel Alexander Noble. He once was President Aquino's deputy chief of presidential guards.

CINCINNATI (OCT. 5) UPI - What looked like a questionable decision by Pittsburgh Manager Jim Leyland to go with his fourth-best pitcher in Game 1 of the Pirates' National League playoffs against Cincinnati turned out to be a brilliant move with positive ramifications beyond the series opener.

Thanks to the gutsy six innings of hard-luck journeyman Bob Walk Thursday night, the Pirates now have a one-game-to-none lead with 22- game winner Doug Drabek and brilliant late-season acquisition Zane Smith still waiting their turns in the best-of-seven series with the Reds.

Walk, an oft-injured right-hander sidelined twice with groin injuries during his 7-5 1990 season, got off to a rocky start, giving up three first-inning runs on a walk and three hits. But the 33-year-old veteran regrouped after giving up the third one-out RBI, a double by Paul O'Neill, and retired the next nine batters. He gave up just one more hit and one more walk through the sixth inning.

Inspired, his teammates rallied, scoring one run in the third, two in the fourth and one in the seventh to give Walk a 4-3 triumph.

''It encouraged us to really battle back and get some runs,'' third baseman Wally Backman said of Walk's performance. ''He pitched his butt off, and it really inspired us.

''It pumps you up. You don't want one bad inning to dictate what happens. The way he regrouped, we really wanted to score him some runs.''

There was nothing coy about Leyland's decision to go with Walk, which he announced more than a week in advance. Conventional post-season strategy calls for a team to go with its best pitcher immediately, but Leyland already had juggled his rotation a bit to get three left-handers ready to face the second-place Mets in the last three games of the season.

The manager saw no reason to juggle it further.

''It's his turn to pitch. He's the veteran guy in the rotation, and he has the experience of the post-season,'' Leyland said of Walk, who as a rookie started and won the first game of the Philadelphia Phillies' 1980 World Series with the Kansas City Royals. ''He may be hyper, but he won't be scared. I don't think it's that big a deal.''

His players agreed.

''It's not that big of a gamble,'' said shortstop Jay Bell. ''And it worked out great. Now we have Dougie coming in tomorrow, and if all goes well, we'll go into Pittsburgh with a three-game lead.''

Leyland's late-inning pitching strategy appeared less sound. Stan Belinda was awesome when he came in for Walk to start the seventh. He retired six straight men - three via strikeouts, and it is difficult to understand why he didn't stick with the rookie right-hander, instead of pinch-hitting for him with one out in the ninth.

Bob Patterson looked nervous when he took the mound in the bottom of the inning, and the Reds immediately took advantage with a pinch-hit single by Todd Benzinger and a walk by Eric Davis.

But then the Pirates got two breaks that made up for the abandonment of Belinda: Patterson got the nod from umpire Paul Runge on a close fielder's choice play on Benzinger at third after Ron Oester's attempted sacrifice bunt. Then, after Ted Power came in for Patterson, Reds rookie pinch-runner Billy Bates got a late jump trying to steal second after Davis stole third and catcher Mike LaValliere threw him out.

Deflated, the Reds then went down to defeat on Chris Sabo's strikeout.

(OCT. 5) UPI - The debate apparently is still going on in the House over the bipartisan deficit reduction agreement reached last weekend between the White House and congressional leaders. A vote on the budget blueprint had been scheduled for around midnight. The 500-BILLION-dollar, five-year package includes steep tax hikes and deep spending cuts. If passed by the House, the Senate is expected to take up the matter Friday.

NASA officials say they are confident the shuttle Discovery will blast off as scheduled Saturday. The goal of the flight is deployment of the nuclear-powered Ulysses solar probe on a five-year mission to boldly go where NO one has gone before- the UNcharted poles of the sun. But activists are seeking to ground the orbiter and the atomic-powered probe. They went to court Thursday in Washington, and a decision is expected Friday. .

Also at Cape Canaveral, officials say the Atlantis appears to have been damaged somewhat when a 70-pound, nine-foot-long metal beam mistakenly left in the ship's engine room fell as the orbiter was being hoisted into the launch position. But it's too early to say if the accident will delay the ship's launch next month on a secret military mission.

MOSCOW (OCT. 5) UPI - President Mikhail Gorbachev used his new economic powers to permit enterprises to negotiate wholesale prices as a first step toward a market system, but it was unclear how free the price structure would be.

A move to freely negotiated wholesale prices would be a major departure from the existing centrally planned economy, under which nearly all wholesale and retail prices are set by the government.

The decree issued Thursday calls for the ''extensive use of negotiated wholesale prices in the national economy,'' but it included a number of key restrictions and called for a limit on profits.

''Negotiated prices'' for 1991 contracts are to be based on wholesale prices established during a 1988 price reform, the decree said without further explanation.

It also says wholesale prices would be fixed on ''raw and structural materials and other producer goods'' on a list to be established by the central and republican governments.

Finance Minister Valentin Pavlov said in an interview on the official ''Vremya'' television news program the decree on wholesale prices would not immediately affect retail prices.

''At this stage all subsidies, all differences between the wholesale and (state-set) retail prices will be preserved,'' Pavlov said. ''We have not even approached this issue.''

He said the decree on wholesale prices was necessary before the adoption of a full plan for a transition to a market economy because enterprises had to negotiate new contracts soon for 1991.

''Enterprises cannot conclude contracts today, because until now the question had not been resolved on what prices they can agree to,'' Pavlov said.

The finance minister said the ability to negotiate wholesale prices should help alleviate shortages plaguing the Soviet Union.

''To give one example, now it is not profitable for an enterprise to produce children's goods, while there are no children's goods on sale,'' he said. ''If the price can be negotiated this problem is eliminated.''

But the decree says that to prevent ''unwarranted overall growth of prices of producer goods,'' limits would be introduced on profits, with any profits beyond the limit to be paid to the government.

The decree was Gorbachev's second on the transition to a market economy since he was granted new economic powers by the Supreme Soviet last week. The first decree, on Sept. 27, ordered local governments and enterprises to honor current contractual obligations through 1991.

Gorbachev was reported Thursday to be considering a decree on devaluation of the ruble, but details were not available and the report could not be confirmed.

The independent Interfax news service said Ivan Ivanov, deputy chairman of the Foreign Economic Commission of the Council of Ministers, told a group of parliament deputies Thursday the decree was prepared by the Finance Ministry and the Foreign Economic Commission and was given to Gorbachev Wednesday.

Interfax said Ivanov gave no details about the decree.

DETROIT (OCT. 5) UPI - A sportscaster who alleged that Detroit Piston Isiah Thomas threw him against a car and choked him said Thursday night he will drop assault charges against the all-star guard.

Virg Jacques of WJBK-TV filed an assault complaint Tuesday against Thomas following the alleged incident that took place after a practice at Oakland University.

The sportscaster and Thomas met Thursday during the Pistons' media day at the University of Windsor.

''We went outside the locker room and had our private meeting,'' Jacques said. ''The very first thing he said to me was, 'As a man, I'd like to apologize to you for what happened.' And he repeated those same words a couple times during the course of our conversation, which was approximately 20 minutes or so.''

Jacques said he accepted Thomas' apology and would ask authorities Friday to drop charges.

''I'm going to tell the authorities that Isiah has apologized to me,'' Jacques said. ''He did acknowledge there was physical contact, he told me the reason why and I'm going to let them (authorities) know that that's satisfactory to me.''

Following the meeting with Jacques, Thomas eluded reporters and ran out the door.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 5) UPI - The House, in a stinging rebuke of President Bush and top congressional leaders of both parties, rejected early Friday a $500 billion budget plan hammered out during four months of hard bargaining.

The 1:20 a.m. EDT vote was 254-179 against the package that had proposed tax increases on gasoline, alcohol, cigarettes, airline tickets and other items and spending cuts for defense, agriculture and social programs such as Medicare.

It represented a major legislative defeat for both Bush and congressional leaders of both parties, who produced the defict-reduction plan but failed to quell 11th-hour rank-and-file rebellions over the most controversial tax and spending cut provisions.

''This is a sad night for this House, for our political system and for America '' House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., said in a statement. ''Our president has asked us to pull together. Too many of my colleagues have instead given him the back of their hands.''

There was no immediate reaction from the White House.

In all, 105 of the 176 House Republicans opposed the plan, as did 149 of the 256 House Democrats.

Leaders had decided that a majority of each party in each house had to support the plan to prevent one party for blaming the other, a month before the November elections, for the politically painful taxes and spending cuts the package contained.

''I was personally deeply disappointed with the results that we achieved,'' said House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri, one of eight congressional leaders and administration officials who negotiated the final plan. ''I wanted a tax situaiton that was at least as fair as the tax situation that we have today. I don't think we achieved that.''

When Republicans failed to produce their majority, Democrats were off the hook and many who were prepared to vote for it probably switched and voted against it.

With the defeat of the plan, the next step in the budget process was in doubt.

Assistant House Democratic leader William Gray of Pennsylvania said after the vote that he was not surprised by the outcome, but he could not say when an alternative proposal would be prepared.

Following up on a strong viewpoint of many Democrats, Gray said, ''It is my view that you must change two components'' citing unhappiness with the defeated proposal's tax plan and Medicare cuts.

House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., said he will seek a stop-gap spending measure to replace one that is set to expire at midnight Friday. Failure to pass a new funding measure, called a continuing resolution, would trigger up to $105.7 billion in automatic spending cuts required by the Gramm-Rudman law.

Bush threatened to veto any attempt to pass another temporary spending bill to fund government operations or to delay imposition of the Gramm-Rudman cuts unless a budget plan was approved.

The budget proposal was defeated even though Bush had assured Foley over lunch Thursday that the Democratic-controlled Congress could make some changes to the budget in the implementation stage, which was to have begun next week.

Bush's assurance, coupled with frantic lobbying by the president, Foley and other House leaders, apparently were not enough to convince reluctant lawmakers to overcome their distaste for the proposal.

Bush spent the day twisting arms, cajoling and pleading with undecided or wavering GOP members, meeting with about 50 of them at the White House and phoning others.

The five-year plan had proposed $134 billion in new gasoline, cigarette, alcohol, airline and other taxes and fees, $67 billion in defense cuts over three years, limiting domestic spending increases to the rate of inflation, a $60 billion cut in Medicare and new tax breaks for investing in small companies.

Rep. Dennis Eckart, D-Ohio, said the two biggest Democratic concerns about the package were the proposed $60 billion cut in Medicare over five years and the new two-week waiting period for unemployment benefits to begin, instead of the current one-week wait.

Other Democrats were concerned about the tax equity issue because they feel the wealthiest Americans got off too cheaply, not having to pay their fair share of deficit reduction and getting a tax break for investments in small businesses to boot.

In a rare floor speech before the vote, Foley said in support of the plan: ''I ask you to consider that this is one of the most important evenings in your congressional career. This is one of the most important decisions.''

(OCT. 5) UPI - Brett Hull, Chris Chelios and Dale Hawerchuck made their respective clubs' management look very good on the opening night of the NHL season.

St. Louis Blues GM Ron Caron opened the vaults to sign Hull to a five-year deal at $1.2 million per season and Hull responded by scoring two goals to lead the Blues to a 3-2 victory over the Minnesota North Stars.

Chicago Blackhawks GM Mike Keenan sent high-scoring center Denis Savard to the Montreal Canadiens in exchange for defenseman Chris Chelios, and Chelios responded with a key goal and two assists in Chicago's 4-3 victory over the New York Rangers.

Buffalo Sabres GM Gerry Meehan swapped three players, including his best defenseman, for Winnipeg Jets center Dale Hawerchuk, who paid an immediate dividend to his new team by scoring a goal in a 3-3 tie with the Canadiens.

''The money and all that contract stuff is all history,'' said Hull, who scored 72 goals last season, the most ever by an NHL right wing. ''I don't feel any more pressure to produce now than I did last season. In this league you do your job or you are out regardless of how much they are paying you. My job is to score goals.''

Hull's first came at 16:23 of the second period and broke a 1-1 tie. His second gave Minnesota a 3-1 lead at 11:40 of the third period when he intercepted an errant pass from Minnesota's Dave Gagne and buried a 35-footer.

Gagne gave Minnesota a 1-0 lead with a first-period power-play goal. The Blues tied it 1-1 on a Herb Raglan goal at 9:31 of the second period before Hull's two put St. Louis ahead 3-1.

Minnesota's Brian Bellows, who tied a club record with 55 goals last year, beat Blues goalie Vince Riendeau on a breakaway at 13:03 of the final period to cut the St. Louis lead to one.

At Chicago, Chelios responded to the hero's welcome the crowd gave him by dominating the game against the Rangers, setting up two goals by team captain Dirk Graham before scoring the winning goal 19 seconds into the final period.

''I guess I got the hometown bounces tonight,'' said the Chicago native.

''Chris Chelios is a great defenseman, and I think he showed it tonight,'' said Blackhawks goaltender Ed Belfour, who also provided some stellar defense until the Rangers scored twice in the final 46 seconds to close within a goal.

Trent Yawney scored Chicago's other goal, snapping a 1-1 tie with a power-play tally early in the second period.

New York, which went 0 for 8 on the power play, got a pair of goals and an assist from Bernie Nicholls. Nicholls scored his second goal with 46 seconds to play, and Ray Sheppard made it 4-3 with six seconds left.

At Buffalo, Hawerchuk gave the Sabres a 3-2 lead at 6:32 of the third period when he burst past the defense and beat Patrick Roy with a wrist shot, but Stephane Richer pulled Montreal into a 3-3 tie with only 3:43 left in regulation time.

''I was happy to get the goal. It took the pressure off,'' admitted Hawerchuk.

Dave Andreychuk gave Buffalo a 1-0 lead 52 seconds into the second period. Brian Skrudland tied the score at 12:16.

Alexander Mogilny gave the Sabres a 2-1 edge with 1:42 remaining in the second period, and Russ Courtnall tied the score 2-2 with a goal at 3:47 of the third.

In other games, Detroit and New Jersey skated to a 3-3 tie; Boston bopped Philadelphia 4-1; Los Angeles topped the New York Islanders 4-1; Quebec and Hartford tied at 3-3; Winnipeg blasted Toronto 7-1; and Calgary edged Vancouver 3-2.

-- AROUND THE NHL --

Devils 3, Red Wings 3, OT

At New Jersey, Brendan Shanahan scored the tying goal with 15 seconds remaining in the third period, and Claude Lemieux scored the other two goals in his first game with the Devils. Soviet Sergei Fedorov scored his first NHL goal and Marc Habscheid and Brent Fedyk also scored for the Red Wings.

Boston 4, Philadelphia 1

At Boston, Dave Poulin and Cam Neely scored first-period goals, Craig Janney added a third-period goal and Ray Bourque scored into an empty net with 57 seconds remaining. Boston goalie Andy Moog stopped 26 shots, but yielded a score to Rick Tocchet at 15:51 of the third period when the Flyers had a 5-on-3 power play.

Kings 4, Islanders 1

At Inglewood, Calif., Wayne Gretzky opened defense of his scoring title with two power-play goals and assisted on a goal by Tony Granato. Los Angeles goalie Kelly Hrudey inadvertently knocked in the lone New York goal, which was credited to Derek King, and Scott Bjugtad also scored for Los Angeles.

Whalers 3, Nordiques 3, OT

At Hartford, Todd Krygier scored on a two-man advantage at 11:13 of the second period to lift the Whalers. Kevin Dineen and Pat Verbeek also scored for the Whalers. Hall-of-Famer Guy Lafleur scored a goal and assisted on another by Joe Sakic, and Swedish star Mats Sundin scored his first NHL goal.

Jets 7, Maple Leafs 1

At Winnipeg, defenseman Dave Ellett scored twice and assisted on scores by Moe Mantha and Tomas Steen. Paul McDermid, Dave McLlwain and Kris Draper also scored for the Jets, and Dave Reid scored the lone Toronto goal.

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (OCT. 5) UPI - An earthquake measuring 3.2 on the Richter scale rattled the Santa Cruz area Thursday night but there were no reports of damage or injuries, authorities said.

The quake shook the area at 11:04 p.m. Thursday, said Lu Page, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park.

The epicenter was six miles north of Sana Cruz, near the aftershock zone for the Oct. 17, 1989, Loma Prieta quake that devastated portions of northern California. Thursday's quake, however, was not consided an aftershock to the 7.1 magnitude Loma Prieta quake, Page said.

The Santa Cruz Police Department received no reports of damage or injuries from Thursday night's temblor.

''It just shook for a few seconds and then it was over,'' said police dispatcher Nickie Hernandez. ''It wasn't that big of a deal.''

(OCT. 5) UPI - A cold front carrying high winds, rain and snow moved into the Northwest Friday while summer-like weather covered the Great Plains and scattered showers doused the Northeast and South.

Flood warnings were posted throughout western Washington state after heavy rains soaked the region as the cold front moved east.

The Nooksack River in the northwestern part of the state crested during the night near flood stage but began receding as the rains subsided. In the nearby North Cascades Mountains, the snow level dropped to 3,500 feet.

The Great Plains enjoyed warm weather and clear skies Friday with temperatures in Chicago approaching the low 80s and the warm temperatures were expected to continue.

Showers and thunderstorms carrying winds that reached 50 mph hit New York state late Thursday and early Friday, dropping in strength as they moved eastward from the Finger Lakes region.

Mostly clear skies covered the Midwest and Middle Atlantic states as temperatures in Cleveland, Ohio, dipped down to 51 degrees with light winds. The National Weather Service said 0.32 inches of rain fell on Atlantic City International Airport in New Jersey Thursday, breaking a record for the date set in 1956.

Thick fog covered much of east Tennessee, cutting visibility to less than a quarter mile in some places during the morning hours.

The South was hit by turbulent weather following several reported tornadoes in Mississippi and Alabama Thursday. A tornado whipped through Verona, Miss., damaging two mobile homes and north Mississippi was hit by up to 4 inches of rain. No injuries were reported as a result of the storms.

Although temperatures dropped in much of the South, Jacksonville, Fla. recorded 94 degrees, breaking the record of 92 degrees set in 1986

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (OCT. 5) UPI - Black leader Nelson Mandela has postponed his first visit to the Soviet Union, planned for next week, because the African National Congress and Moscow found the timing ''unsuitable,'' the ANC said Friday.

Mandela was due to leave Oct. 8 for a 26-day eight-nation foreign tour, including a four-day stop in the Soviet Union, for years the ANC's major sponsor in its fight against white minority rule.

But the ANC, responding to reports from Moscow that the visit was off, said, ''the dates proposed for the visit to Moscow have turned out to be unsuitable to both parties. We look forward to fixing a date in the near future that is mutually acceptable.''

A two-day visit to France, due to kick off the foreign tour, has also fallen away ''for certain practical reasons and is also postponed,'' an ANC official said, adding, ''there is nothing sinister in any of this.''

The rest of Mandela's schedule remained unaffected, and he departs Oct. 14 for India, and then goes to Malaysia on Oct. 19; Brunei on Oct. 21; Australia on Oct. 22; Indonesia on Oct. 26; and Japan on Oct. 27 before returning Nov. 2.

India and Australia have been leading proponents of world sanctions to force an end to white minority rule.

But Moscow bankrolled the ANC's 29-year armed struggle against Pretoria until the movement suspended the tactic on Aug. 6 in exchange for promises of further racial reform. Moscow also has hosted thousands ANC of exiles at universities, technical colleges and in military training bases over the past three decades.

Since the beginning of President Frederik de Klerk's racial reform program in February - including Mandela's release from prison and the ANC's legalization after 30 years - and the rejection of communism in Eastern Europe, the Soviet Union has simultaneously decreased its aid to the ANC and begun tentative diplomatic contact with Pretoria.

While still vigorously supporting the ANC's fight against apartheid, Moscow has openly encouraged preliminary talks between the movement and the government. It also has raised the possibility of restoring diplomatic links with Pretoria, broken off in 1956, when white rule is abolished.

MOSCOW (OCT. 5) UPI - A presidential decree will be issued within the next several days to devalue the Soviet ruble in January 1991 as a step toward a convertible currency, officials said Friday.

Details of the devaluation plan and the new rates were not released, but the officials said the move was designed to eliminate multiple artificial exchange rates that affect Soviet enterprises that now deal with hard currency.

''Without changing our (currency exchange) system, we cannot fit in the world process,'' Deputy Finance Minister Vladimir Raevsky said.

Raevsky and Stanislav Assekritov, deputy chairman of the government's Commission on Economic Reform, confirmed a report by the independent Interfax news agency that President Mikhail Gorbachev was preparing to issue a decree on ruble devaluation.

Both officials said they expected a presidential decree in the next several days, with the devaluation taking effect in January.

''Our strategy is to have a civilized rate for the ruble,'' said Stanislav Assekritov, deputy chairman of the Commission on Economic Reform.

Assekritov added all of the rival economic reform programs being discussed in the Soviet Parliament ''provide for (eventually) exchanging any foreign currency at a floating rate, like they do everywhere in the world.''

The devaluation would be an initial step toward a freely convertible currency. The Soviet Union also expects to set up currency auctions early next year for enterprises that need hard currency.

Assekritov said the initial devaluation would seek to establish a single rate for Soviet enterprises to exchange money for dealings with other enterprises and foreign firms, eliminating a bewildering array of coefficients currently in use for Soviet businesses that need hard currency.

In addition to the coefficients, there are two separate official exchange rates for foreigners who spend money in the Soviet Union - a ''commercial rate'' of about .56 rubles to the dollar for official business transactions through a bank or credit cards, and a ''tourist rate'' for cash of 6 rubles to the dollar. It was not clear how the devaluation would affect those rates.

The black market exchange rate in Moscow varies from about 16 to 21 rubles for the dollar.

The confirmation of the planned devaluation came a day after a presidential decree allowing enterprises to negotiate wholesale prices as a first step toward a market system, but there were significant restrictions and it was unclear how free the price structure would be.

A move to freely negotiated wholesale prices would be a major departure from the existing centrally planned economy, under which nearly all wholesale and retail prices are set by the government.

The decree issued Thursday calls for the ''extensive use of negotiated wholesale prices in the national economy'' as a way to give enterprises independence and incentive to increase production.

However, the decree calls for a limit on profits and also says wholesale prices would remain fixed on ''raw and structural materials and other producer goods'' on a list to be established by the central and republican governments.

Finance Minister Valentin Pavlov said in an interview on the official ''Vremya'' television news program the decree on wholesale prices would not immediately affect retail prices.

''At this stage all subsidies, all differences between the wholesale and (state-set) retail prices will be preserved,'' Pavlov said. ''We have not even approached this issue.''

The decree was Gorbachev's second on the transition to a market economy since he was granted new economic powers by the Supreme Soviet last week. The first decree, on Sept. 27, ordered local governments and enterprises to honor current contractual obligations through 1991.

(OCT. 5) UPI - Stock prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange rallied Friday despite the failure of the U.S. House of Representatives to pass the budget deficit-reduction plan.

The key Nikkei Average of 225 selected issues, which dropped 571.20 points Thursday, rebounded 549.46 points to 22,827.65.

The broader-based Tokyo Stock Exchange Price Index of all major issues, which lost 20.53 points Thursday, jumped 31.15 points to 1, 680.67.

Trading volume remained light but above Thursday level as an estiemated 450 million shares changed hands, up from 301 million shares Thursday.

Advances outpaced declines 871 to 131, while 92 issues remained unchanged.

''The rejection of the deficit-cutting plan led to some selloffs, but did not cause a dramatic plunge,'' said Makano Mitsuhiro, a strategist at Daiwa Securities.

Japanese analysts interpreted the news as a sign that U.S. interest rates may not drop as had been expected.

The news reached the market 40 minutes before the close, cooling a rally that had started in the morning and continued into the afternoon session.

Stock prices were bought after two straight losing sessions in reaction to the Japanese yen's strength against the U.S. dollar and some strength in blue chip issues on the New York Stock Exchange, analysts said.

Blue-ship stocks, such as Sony, climbed sharply.

Steels and constructions surged. NKK and Kobe Steel ended broadly higher.

Elsewhere in Asia, investors in Hong Kong returned to the marketplace after taking a break from the action and sent prices sharply lower in moderate trading on news of the U.S. congressional defeat of President Bush's budget proposal.

Markets in Hong Kong were closed Thursday for the Chinese Mid-Autumn Festival holiday.

The Hong Kong Stock Exchnage's Hang Seng Index, which fell 42.93 points Wednesday, dropped 12.10 points to 2,850.45.

Among the narrower-based indexes, properties shed 1.99 points, utilities dropped 5.89, financials lost 15.72 and industrials fell 17.95 points.

Volume was moderate as an estimated 810 million shares changed hands, compared with 864 million shares Wednesday.

Analysts said prices opened higher but ''when we were up about 30 points in the morning, we expected to be up at least that much on the day,'' said Herman Lam of First Pacific Securities.

''But after news came about the defeat of the Bush budget proposal, stocks dropped throughout the afternoon. Everyone is expecting the New York market to drop. If that happens, we will sustain another loss Monday.''

In Singapore, stocks closed lower in light trading on the Singapore Stock Exchange as a late round of profit taking shortly before the close pushed prices lower.

The Straits Times Industrial Index, which eased 2.67 points Thursday, slipped another 3.67 points to 1,113.93. The broader-based All Singapore Index dipped 0.36 point to 312.36.

An estimated 32.7 million shares changed hands, compared with only 16.9 million shares Thursday.

Analysts said investors took profits after the market started to push higher.

Brokers commented that market was still very weak due to stalemate in the Gulf tension.

Selling pressure in the afternoon plus overseas bourses weaker performances caused the market to sink, analysts said.

On the trading floor, Kian Joo Canning paced the declining issues followed by Singapore Airlines foreign shares and Far East Shipping.

Asia Pacific Brewery led the advancing stocks followed by Polytek and Development Bank of Singapore foreign shares.

In Australia, stocks closed lower on the Sydney Sharemarket amid disappointment the Australian government would not immediately lower interest rates.

The All Ordinaries Index, which lost 16.8 points Thursday, lost another 11.7 points to 1,356.8. The All Industrial Index fell 11.3 points to 2,017.3 and the All Resources Index fell 11.1 points to 841.8.

An estimated 80.7 million shares changed hands, compared with 94.3 million shares Thursday.

Analysts said sellers dominated the market in the wake of a statement from Australian Treasurer Paul Keating that the recession was ''not full scale'' and monetary easing was not warranted.

On the trading floor, BHP and News Corp were again the big losers. BHP lost 30 cents to $10.05 and News fell 28 cents to $6.40.

BHP lost ground on recession fears and News Corp. came under pressure following the announcement that Moody Investors Service intends to review its credit rating, analysts said.

Elsewhere, Coles Myers lost 4 cents to $7.42, Brambles lost 10 cents to $12.50 and TNT eased 4 cents to $1.74.

LONDON (OCT. 5) UPI - Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd again linked a resolution of the Persian Gulf crisis to the Arab-Israeli conflict, saying once Iraq has been driven out of Kuwait an international conference should be convened to discuss a homeland for the Palestinians.

''New initiatives over Palestine can only take place once Saddam Hussein has been driven out of Kuwait. I can see no hope of progress until that has happened,'' Hurd said Thursday night at a Diplomatic and Commonwealth Writers' Association dinner.

Hurd also said he is to visit Israel and Egypt later this month and appealed to Israel to accept an international conference on peace in the Middle East.

''Anyone with a sense of humanity must sympathize with the Palestinians. Their lands are occupied, they have no political rights and they are daily victims of a misguided policy which believes that the security of Israel must rest on closed universities, illegitimate settlements and even collective punishments.''

Hurd's speech was broadly in line with the U.S. position outlined by President Bush Monday when he said he believed there ''may be opportunites'' after an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait for settling regional problems, including ''the conflict that divides the Arabs from Israel.''

It was the second time Hurd tied the Persian Gulf conflict with the Arab-Israeli dispute. At the U.N. General Assembly, he said any attempt to resolve the complex disputes of the Middle East would require a new security structure, which he said might borrow certain concepts from the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

''With Iraq out of Kuwait, moderate Arab opinion will have triumphed and will be in the ascendancy over the extremists. It may be (Israel's) best chance to secure the acceptance of the state of Israel behind secure borders,'' Hurd said Thursday.

He foresaw a role for the new-found cooperation formed between the five permanent U.N. Security Council members in promoting a comprehensive peace, similar to the cooperation in opposing Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait. The ending of the regional rivalries of the Cold War was also a factor favorable for peace in the Middle East.

''Consultations among the five and a positive approach in Israel and the Arab countries most closely involved are preparatory steps ... (that) should aim at and end in, an international conference,'' Hurd said.

(OCT. 5) UPI - The U.S. dollar was mostly higher Friday on major foreign currency markets in the wake of the U.S. House of Representatives' rejection of a budget accord and the lessened prospects of lower U.S. interest rates. Gold was mixed.

The House decision gave investors, who thought they oversold dollars, an excuse to buy back the dollar, analysts said.

However, the dollar fell earlier in Tokyo before the budget news was announced to its lowest level since April, 1989.

In Europe, the dollar began the day higher in Frankfurt at 1.5375 German marks up from 1.5355 marks late Thursday.

In Zurich, the dollar opened higher at 1.2860 Swiss francs, up from 1.2785.

In London, the British pound gained slightly against the dollar, opening at $1.9125 compared with $1.9110 at the close Thursday.

Elsewhere in Europe, the dollar was higher in Paris, Brussels and Milan.

In Paris, the dollar opened at 5.1485 French francs, up from 5.1365, in Brussels at 31.69 Belgian francs, up from 31.63, and in Milan at 1, 150.50 Italian lire, up from 1,149.00.

In earlier trading in Asia, the dollar plummeted against the Japanese yen in hectic trading on expectations of a drop in U.S. interest rates, but the fall came to an end when news of the U.S. House rejecting a budget deficit cutting plan reached the market shortly before the close.

The Bank of Japan reported the dollar fell to 133.72 yen, down 2.18 yen from 135.90 yen on Thursday.

It was the dollar's lowest closing rate against the Japanese yen since April 28, 1989, when the dollar closed at the 132.49 yen level.

In the morning, Tokyo investors sold dollars following the trend in overseas markets. Institutional investors, such as life insurance firms and Japanese securities houses, joined the dollar selling in the afternoon, sending the dollar to a low of 132.75 yen.

''Everybody joined in selling (of the dollar),'' said Tetsuya Taura, a currency manager at Sumitomo Bank, ''but the rejection of the deficit- cutting plan will reverse that trend for time being.''

''The U.S. interest rate will ease anyway, but not soon,'' said Taura.

Elsewhere in Asia, the dollar closed lower in Singapore at 1.7495 Singapore dollars, down from 1.7585.

In Hong Kong, the dollar slipped to 7.7555 Hong Kong dollars, down from Wednesday's close of 7.7595. Hong Kong markets were closed Thursday for a one-day harvest holiday.

In early New York trading, the dollar was mixed against key foreign currencies in moderate trading shortly after the Labor Department reported the U.S. unemployment rate jumped to 5.7 percent in September - the highest in more than two years, but in line with market expecations.

Traders quoted the dollar at 1.5358 German marks, up from 1.5340 Thursday, and at 133.14 Japanese yen, down from 133.83.

On the bullion markets, gold opened $3.50 an ounce lower in Zurich at $393.50 and opened $3.75 lower in London at $393.25.

The London morning gold fixing was $393, off $4 from Thursday's close.

In earlier trading in Asia, gold closed at $393.25 on the Hong Kong Bullion Exchange, up $4.05 from Wednesday's close.

Silver opened 5 cents lower in Zurich at $4.70 an ounce but opened unchanged in London at the same $4.70 an ounce.

In early trading on New York's Comex, a 100-troy-ounce gold futures contract for Oct. delivery opened at $394.80 bid, up $2.50 from Thursday's close. A 5,000-troy-ounce silver futures contract opened at $4.658 bid, off 1 cent an ounce.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 5) UPI - America's civilian unemployment rate jumped to 5.7

percent in September - the highest in more than two years - as factories laid off more workers, the government said Friday.

The job picture in the services industry also failed to improve.

The Labor Department said there were an additional 101,000 people out of work last month, including about 42,000 temporary census workers dismissed as the government's 10-year population count neared completion.

The latest data were in line with economists' predictions.

September's unemployment rate - the highest since 5.7 percent in March 1988 - follows a 5.6 percent rate in August and a 5.5 percent rate in July, according to the report compiled by the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Counting military personnel, the nation's total jobless rate stood at 5.6 percent in September.

The number of jobs lost last month was the most since 104,000 in June 1986, a Labor Department spokesman said.

The number of U.S. factory jobs has been slashed by 520,000 positions since peaking in January 1989 - and that severe trend continued last month.

''The number of factory jobs fell by 65,000 in September, after seasonal adjustment,'' the Labor Department said. ''Durable goods industries continued to account for most of the declines, as transportation equipment, electronic equipment, and industrial machinery each near lost 15,000 jobs in September.

''Smaller but still significant losses occurred in fabricated metals, furniture, and stone, clay and glass products,'' the department said.

Over the last two months, 115,000 factory jobs have been eliminated.

In the services field, meanwhile, which has been a pillar of strength for the domestic economy ''only a few industries provided evidence of employment growth in September,'' the Labor Department said.

Health led the way followed by hiring in local government and transportation, mainly on September increases of teachers and school bus drivers as schools re-opened, the department said.

But these were offset by losses in the financial industry, reflecting hard times in banking and real estate.

OSLO, Norway (OCT. 5) UPI - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and Czechoslovak leader Vaclav Havel lead among likely candidates for this year's Nobel Peace Prize, say veteran Nobel observers.

Other likely contenders as the 1990 Nobel season begins this weekend are Nelson Mandela, the South African activist freed after 27 years imprisonment, and Chai Ling, a leader of the 1989 student movement in China.

With the start of the 1990 season, Norway's Peace Prize Committee prepares to announce its laureate for the honor, which in the past has gone to leaders such as Martin Luther King Jr., Desmond Tutu, Mother Thersea and Henry Kissinger.

The 1990 decision will be made public by the Committee's new chairman, Gidske Andersson, at 11 a.m. local time Oct. 15. This year's prize is worth $670,000 and includes a gold medal and a diploma to be presented to the winner at a ceremony in Oslo on Dec. 10, the anniversary of Alfred Nobel's death.

As the world emerges from the Cold War and hectic diplomatic activity seeks to settle the Persian Gulf crisis, speculation is rampant as to whom will be honored in the Oct. 15 announcement.

In the tipping game, seasoned Nobel watchers find Gorbachev and Havel just ahead of Mandela. Chai was a close-running fourth.

Ten days before the winner is announced, the independent Nobel Committee, appointed by the Norweign Parliament to scrutinize candidates and award the prize, as usual remains silent about its intentions.

''We have received about 100 nominations. Sixty-five are individual candidates. Some 20 are organisations or institutions, and the rest are two or more people named together as candidates,'' Sigrid Langbrekke of the Nobel Committee's office told United Press International.

But Langbrekke refused to speculate on favorites or on rumors that the committee might choose not to award a prize this year.

The nominations must be made by Feb. 1.

Most of Oslo's experienced observers think the prize will go to either Gorbachev, Havel, Mandela or Chai. But in the Nobel guessing-game tipsters more often than not get it wrong.

Havel was also a favorite for last year's prize, awarded before the ''velvet revolution'' toppled Czechoslovakia's communist dictatorship last November. Subsequent events, which saw the former dissident writer elected his country's president, can only have strenghtened Havel's candidacy.

If the prize were likely to go to an Eastern European leader, Gorbachev would seem to be Havel's only serious rival. The Soviet president is credited with preventing ousted regimes in countries such as Czechoslovakia and East Germany from using armed force to suppress the peaceful revolutions.

But some observers think Gorbachev's refusal to grant the Soviet Baltic republics independence and his use of economic sanctions against Lithuania make him a less likely candidate.

Mandela was also seen as a strong candidate. It would be his sixth successive candidacy for the prize. But that nomination may be hampered because the anti-apartheid movement was honored six years ago, when the prize went to Tutu the South African Anglican archbishop.

Similar considerations may make Chai's candidacy questionable. The 1989 award was made to the Dalai Lama for his peaceful struggle against China's occupation of Tibet.

There has also been speculation that the Nobel Committee may choose to reserve the prize this year as the Persian Gulf crisis deepens.

Under the Nobel charter, awarding committees are not bound to make an award each year. The committee has reserved the peace prize on 19 occasions - mainly because of world wars, but also in peacetime.

BEIRUT, LEBANON (OCT. 5) UPI - Three British hostages held by Moslem extremists in Lebanon will be freed shortly after the restoration of Syrian-British diplomatic ties, the Lebanese Ad-Diyar newspaper reported Friday.

The newspaper, quoting ''well-informed sources'' in Damascus, said it expected the Syrian-British relations to be restored by next Monday.

In London, the Britain Foreign Office denied plans for an immediate resumption of diplomatic relations with Syria.

''There is absolutely no foundation in the rumor whatsoever. We would repeat that we would obviously like to get back to normal relations, but there are obstacles,'' said Penny Russel-Smith, a Foreign Office spokeswoman.

''We don't comment on any possible contacts between the two governments,'' she said. ''It is speculation to say there will be a resumption of ties.''

The sources said the plight of 13 Western hostages will be the main topic of upcoming talks between Syrian officials and Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati.

Velayati was due to arrive in Damascus later Friday or Saturday.

Ad-Diyar quoted the sources as saying better ties between Damascus and Tehran will result in the release of three British hostages as an initial group.

Syria is a main power broker in Lebanon, with 35,000 troops on two thirds of the country's territory, while Iran maintains wide influence among the country's Shiite Moslem fundamentalists.

The remaining captives, including six U.S. citizens, will be freed later, the sources told the newspaper.

Britain's hostages in Lebanon are Anglican church envoy Terry Waite, John McCarthy, Jack Mann and Alec Collett.

Collett was kidnapped in Lebanon March 25, 1985. A shadowy group called the Revolutionary Organization of Socialist Moslems produced a videotape April 23, 1986, allegedly showed the captive's hanging.

Waite was kidnapped Jan. 20, 1987, McCarthy became a hostage April 17, 1986, and Mann disappeared May 12, 1989.

Diplomatic ties between Syria and Britain were severed four years ago following a bombing attempt against an Israeli El Al airliner at London's Heathrow airport in which Damascus was implicated.

A ranking Moslem fundamentalist figure in Beirut backed the Ad-Diyar report, saying Syrian President Hafez Assad during his visit to Tehran last month asked the Iranians to refrain from making efforts to release British hostages until London reestablishes ties with his country.

Recent reports in Beirut suggested Iran would use its authority on the captors to free the British captives.

Hopes for an imminent hostage release were boosted after Britain made diplomatic gestures to Iran over the controversial issue of Salman Rushdie, the author of the ''Satanic Verses.''

The late Iranian spiritual leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini had urged Moslems worldwide to track down Rushdie and kill him for writing the book, which Moslems considered blasphemous to Islam.

British officials defended Rushdie's right to publish the book in accordance with Western democratic freedoms.

LONDON (OCT. 5) UPI - Polly Peck International PLC, the embattled fruit and electronics conglomerate, met Friday with creditors amid tight security and high-level government contacts between Britain and Turkey to save the company.

Trading in shares of the company owned by Turkish Cypriot Asil Nadir was suspended and their value dropped by half in a single day last month after news of a Serious Fraud Office investigation of alleged insider- trading hit the markets.

The company, in a statement earlier this week, admitted serious liquidity problems, and creditors, about 50 banks, were expected to decide between calling in an impartial administrator to straighten out the company's finances or lending Polly Peck additional funds to meet its short-term obligations.

The company - owners of Sansui Electric Co., of Japan, and Del Monte Tropical Fruit Co., based in Coral Gables, Fla. - is expected to ask banks for a rollover of about $222 million in short-term credits, and a 90-day moratorium on payments.

Polly Peck's market value on the London International Stock Exchange sank from $720 million to about $180 million in suspended shares last month. The shares lost 55 percent of their value Sept. 20 alone. The conglomerate's real assets were also believed to have been hurt by a global slump in trading.

Polly Peck will undergo an audit during the 90-day moratorium, Nadir said in a statement.

But he was expected to tell some 300 bankers, accountants and stockholders assembled in London's financial district that his high- level contacts with the government of Turkey will save the comapny's fortunes.

Turkey's president Turgut Ozal has exchanged letters with the British government promising Turkey's support to prop up the company, with extensive operations in Turkey and Cyprus.

Nadir met last week in New York with Ozal, according to company spokesmen.

Meanwhile, the Serious Fraud Office investigation into alleged insider trading involving a Nadir family trust and Polly Peck shares, is ''ongoing,'' a police spokesman said.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 5) UPI - President Bush has had extensive consultations with members of Congress on all aspects of the Persian Gulf crisis, including the military option, a spokesman said Friday.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater was asked to respond to a Washington Post report that Bush has initiated discussions with members of Congress on the possible use of military force to oust Iraq from Kuwait.

The Post said that Bush hoped to head off any congressional objections that could arise if U.S. troops are sent into battle.

''We've had extensive consultations with Congress on every aspect of the Persian Gulf situation,'' Fitzwater said.

Fitzwater denied there was a meeting solely to discuss military action.

''We've had meeting after meeting in which there has been included talk of the possibility of a military conflict,'' he said. ''There's been no meeting just to talk about that aspect.''

Fitzwater added there were no meetings under way on escalating participation in the crisis, which started Aug. 2 when Iraq invaded Kuwait and annexed the country, making it a province of Iraq against a world uproar of opposition.

The Post said that with Congress planning to adjourn for the year on Oct. 19 and the likelihood that there would be no specific congressional authorization for military action, Bush wanted to sound out the leadership before he commits U.S. forces into a military operation.

Aides acknowledged that during the president's round of activities at the United Nations last weekend, officials began consulting with the Soviet Union and the Western allies on support for the military option but no resolution has been drafted.

MOSCOW (OCT. 5) UPI - Conservative stalwart Yegor Ligachev, who has been deluged with offers for his memoirs, said Friday the country faces ''the danger of a social explosion'' as it moves to some sort of market economy.

Ligachev, once the No. 2 man in the then-ruling Politburo but demoted in July to simply a Communist Party member, spoke of his fears in an interview with the official Tass news agency, saying tension in the country was near the breaking point.

''The situation in the Soviet Union is complex, contradictory, and in a number of areas critical,'' Ligachev said. ''You could compare it to a string stretched taut.

''The focus of all the complexities is the economy,'' he said. ''Economic ties are beginning to unravel. The market for consumer goods is completely out of balance. There is danger of a social explosion.''

It was the latest in a series of warnings about the pent-up dissatisfaction in society as Parliament is wavering on a new economic program while store shelves are growing increasingly bare.

Ligachev, 69, who is pecking out his memoirs on a typewriter himself with offers pouring in, has become a familiar figure in the visitors and press section of the Supreme Soviet where he watches debates and talks with journalists.

Ligachev, a bear-like figure who recently compared the debates on the market economy to ''better than Shakespeare,'' said he opposes an all- out push to a market economy under a 500-day plan advocated by Stanislav Shatalin. Shatalin is a key adviser to both Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and Boris Yeltsin.

Rather, the white-haired, barrel-chested Ligachev said, the gradual plan of Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov should be adopted by the Suprme Soviet, which is now working on mating the Shatalin and Ryzhkov formulas. The hybrid version will go before Parliament in the next two months.

Never far from controversy, Ligachev said it was an ''illusion'' that the country could switch over to a market economy in such a short time as the 500 days envisioned by the radical Shatalin blueprint, ''especially when there is such political instability in society.''

Ligachev implied Gorbachev was wrong in not enlisting the full support of the Communist Party in trying to effect his market reform even though the party was forced to give up its monopoly on power last February.

''We are making a mistake in not using the full potential of the Communist Party, which is the ruling party and is still the only organized force which can penetrate all the cells of society,'' he said.

Ligachev again thundered against the danger of introducing private property. In the past, he has said that private property would mean one peasant would have 99 acres, and another one acre, whereas under socialism the land belongs to everyone in theory but in practice the state owns it all.

Ligachev softened a bit on the question of imports and learning from the West in the transition to some sort of market system, but he reiterated his strong Russian nationalist views against slavish imitation.

''I think that at this difficult time we must take from the West all that is both useful, both technologically and socially, but go our own way.''

A strong supporter of Gorbachev when the Soviet president was elected general secretary of the party in March 1985, he later reminded Gorbachev at a televised June 1987 party conference that the vote on making him the country's leader could have gone another way. Gorbachev's face tightened.

MIAMI (OCT. 5) UPI - Hurricane Klaus, upgraded from tropical storm strength, swirled in place Friday with 80-mph winds and spilled heavy rains onto the islands of Barbuda and Antigua, while Hurricane Josephine drifted in the Atlantic.

Forecasters at the National Hurricane Center expected Klaus, which grew into the sixth hurricane of the year Friday, to continue strengthening over the next 24 hours and to resume drifting to the northwest.

''It's just building up out there,'' said Miles Lawrence, a forecaster at the National Hurricane Center. ''It's just not moving.... Our expectation is its going to start moving to the northwest but that hasn't happened yet.''

In the northeast Caribbean, hurricane warnings remained in effect for islands from St. Martin eastward, including the British Virgin Islands, Nevis, Barbuda Montserrat, Antigua and surrounding islands.

Tropical storm warnings were in place for Guadeloupe and the neighboring French islands.

Forecasters warned boaters in the northeast Caribbean from Puerto Rico eastward to stay near port. Klaus dumped heavy rains on Martinique Thursday, producing flash flooding that triggered mud slides.

At 6 a.m. EDT Friday, Klaus was centered near latitude 17.2 north, longitude 61.3 west, or about 30 miles east-northeast of Antigua.

Maximum sustained winds were near 80 mph, 6 mph above the hurricane threshold of 74 mph.

Hurricane force winds extended outward up to 30 miles, while tropical storm-force winds extended up to 115 miles east of the center and 40 miles west of the center.

Probability charts from the hurricane center said there was a 14 percent to 17 percent chance the storm's eye would pass within 65 miles of St. Croix and St. Thomas in the U.S. Virgin Islands and San Juan and Ponce, Puerto Rico, by 2 a.m. Monday.

Klaus is the 11th named storm of the 1990 Atlantic-Caribbean hurricane season, which runs from June 1 to Nov. 30. It sprang from a tropical depression that rapidly strengthened Wednesday.

The 10th named storm, Hurricane Josephine, achieved winds of 75 mph Friday as it meandered through the north Atlantic toward the Azores.

Josephine formed off the African coast Sept. 16 and has waxed and waned as it followed an erratic northward course through the Atlantic.

At 6 a.m. EDT, Josephine was centered near latitude 30.4 north, longitude 40.0 west, or about 920 miles southwest of Terceira in the Azores. Hurricance force winds extended outward up to 30 miles from the center with tropical storm force winds extending 145 miles.

Josephine was moving north at near 10 mph and was expected to continue that motion for the next 12 hours with a gradual turn to the north late Friday.

The system was considered a threat only to marine interests.

BONN, Germany (OCT. 5) UPI - German deputies overwhelmingly adopted an agreement Friday between the two former German states and the four victorious World War II Allies that will grant full sovereignty to unified Germany.

Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher called the agreement the ''most important treaty of the postwar period.''

He said the treaty, which was signed Sept. 12 by the foreign ministers of East and West Germany, Britain, France, the United States and the Soviet Union, opened the path to German unification.

Genscher told parliamentarians in a speech preceding the vote that united Germany will not abuse its independence to regain power, but to work responsibly for peace and security in Europe.

The foreign ministers of the four World War II Allies and their two German counterparts held meetings in Bonn, Paris and Moscow - dubbed the two-plus-four talks - to work out the external aspects of unification.

Since the end of the war, defeated Germany was occupied by the four allied forces.

When the cold war erupted shortly after the war, both German states eventually became close allies of their respective blocs. But the allied forces still held certain rights over the German governments, diminishing their sovereignty.

The treaty reinstalls full sovereignty to unified Germany. The four World War II victors have already announced they will withdraw part of their forces from German territory.

The treaty has to be ratified by the parliaments of all four Allies before it goes into effect.

BONN, Germany (OCT. 5) UPI - East German politicians now in the united Parliament and Chancellor Helmut Kohl's Cabinet will be earning salaries undreamed of under communism.

There are 144 former East German deputies in Parliament - which began real work in Bonn Friday after the ceremonial opening in Berlin - and five Cabinet members.

Parliament members get basic pay of 14,938 Deutschmarks a month, which at current exchange rates is equivalent to $9,763.

Former East German premier Lother de Maiziere and four others became ministers without portfolio, meaning the basic parliamentary deputy's allowance plus 20,134 Deutschmarks, or $13,160, a month in ministerial salary.

That amounts to 35,072 marks, or $22,932 a month, plus home, personal aide, secretary and chauffeured limousine.

BUENOS AIRES (OCT. 5) UPI - The Bell Atlantic consortium withdrew its winning bid to buy 60 percent of the northern half of the Argentine telephone monopoly Entel, it was announced at a news conference.

The spokesman of the public works ministry told media reporters Thursday night a consortium led by the Italian telephone company Stet would take over the northern half of the company instead.

The new owner of northern Entel was a group composed of Stet, France Cables et Radio, Perez Companc and the Morgan Bank.

Oct. 4 was the deadline for representatives of the two consortiums that won the June bidding to close the deal with the Argentine government.

In June, Bell Atlantic, the Philadelphia-based regional telecommunications company, and Manufacturers Hanover Trust were awarded the bid for the controlling interest in the northern half of the company by offering$100 million in up-front cash, $176.57 million to be spread over three years and agreeing to buy $2.309 billion in Argentine debt securities.

However, the group was unable to close the deal on Oct. 4, when the money and debt paper was to be turned over to the Argentine government.

Spain's Telefonica de Espana and Citicorp won the bid to buy the controlling interest in the southern half of Entel by offering $114 million in cash upfront, $204.43 million over three years and $2.72 billion in debt.

Officials have said that transfer of the ownership of the southern half of the company was running smoothely.

The sale of Entel is part of a larger plan by Argentine President Carlos Menem to privatize money-losing state-owned business. Among the public businesses up for sale or in the process of being bought are the state airline, Aerolineas Argentinas; secondary oil fields, some railroad lines, the state natural gas company and the Buenos Aires subway system.

LONDON (OCT. 5) UPI - Baghdad has asked foreign companies to provide lists of their employees who are older than 55 and trapped in Iraq or Kuwait, but British officials expressed skepticism Friday that the request meant they would be freed.

It is impossible to know whether Iraqi President Saddam Hussein intends to release the Westerners or use the lists to round up more hostages to use as a shield against attack, a Foreign Office spokesman said.

Iraqi government asked businesses still operating in Iraq or Kuwait to furnish Iraq with the names of their employees over the age of 55.

''We've seen the reports made by the British and Irish embassies about the request,'' a spokesman said.

''But the embassies themselves have not received such a request. The requests were made directly to the companies themselves. The British Embassy is seeking further clarification to see what it means.''

''We cannot let this news detract us from the central issue, which is the unjustified and illegal seizure of Kuwait by Iraq,'' he said.

Saddam has refused to grant exit visas to foreign men who were in Iraq or Kuwait when his troops invaded Kuwait Aug. 2.

Many have been rounded up by Iraqi soldiers and were being held as hostages in strategic installations to guard against a military strike. But others were still believed to be in hiding.

PHILADELPHIA (OCT. 5) UPI - Helping to water the free market seed now planted in socialist soil, the Philadelphia Stock Exchange is set next week to host a prestigious gathering of international economic policy makers.

The idea is to expose business and politcal leaders emerging from behind the Iron Curtain to the practical world of capitalism, while giving Westerners a chance to spot opportunities on untrodden turf in newly opened markets.

''It's about helping folks from both sides of the equation find linkages they otherwise wouldn't know were there,'' said Crocker Snow, editor-in-chief of World Times, a Boston-based publishing company specializing in global information exchange. World Times developed the theme and program of the symposium for the stock exchange.

The Oct. 7-9 meeting caps a year-long 200th anniversary celebration for the Philadelphia bourse. More importantly, it represents an opportunity for the exchange, an innovator of foreign currency options trading, to pinpoint business opportunities and expand its market, said Senior Vice President Joseph Rizzello.

''We think by hosting this conference we're being out in front,'' Rizzello said. ''A lot of people say the opportunities in Eastern Europe are five to 10 years down the road, but the Philadelphia Stock Exchange wants to take the lead.''

The Philadelphia exchange has suffered along with the rest of the financial industry as recessionary jitters have caused its revenues to slump. In its 200th year, the exchange expects to report a loss of between $1 million and $1.5 million.

But exchange officials are undaunted by the current climate.

''It's exactly in these kinds of times that great opportunities present themselves,'' said Rizzello.

About 140 economists, corporate officers and senior foreign exchange reresentatives have paid $1,000 to attend the summit, which is expected to attract media coverage by such disparate news outlets as USA Today and Tass.

On the program are notables from the Near East including Silviu Brucan, a Communist father from Romania who has disavowed the party and now sits on the executive committee of his country's National Salvation Front, and Mieczyslaw Wilczek, a former Polish Minister of Industry who is widely considered to be his nation's most successful businessman.

''We didn't want yet another meeting of primarily Western experts discussing the changes in Eastern Europe,'' said Snow. ''We have an eclectic mix of some of the key people who have fostered these changes or are implementing them and they will speak for themselves.''

Scheduled to a give a report from an exploratory committee for capital markets formation is U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission Chairman Richard Breeden. The committee is set to meet privately for five hours on the first day of the symposium.

Richard Erb, Deputy Managing Director of the International Monetary Fund, is slated to give a keynote address on the need for quick and comprehesive reform in the Eastern Europe.

Despite the tendency to view Eastern Europe as a bloc where conditions are roughly similar, Snow said he believes participants will come away with a sense of how conditions differ from country to country.

''It's a mistake to think of the Eastern bloc as homogeneous,'' he said. ''Conditions are as different, country to country, as the United States and Mexico.''

Hungary has gone the farthest in adopting free market practices, Snow said, followed by Poland. But Czechoslovakia is barely beginning to open its markets and Romania lags way behind in terms of actual change.

Furthermore, he said, it's important for Westerners to understand that the financial future of all Eastern bloc nations may rely on happy economic relations with the Soviet Union, and specifically the Russian republic.

''There are very great opportunities for Western businesses,'' he said. ''But they must be culturally sensitive and patient about the circumstances in Eastern Europe.

''One of the hidden agendas of the symposium is to expose the circumstances as honestly as possible.''

BONN, GERMANY (OCT. 5) UPI - Two days after German unification, Parliament adopted a new electoral law for the Dec. 2 national elections that again split the country into east and west voting regions.

In their first regular session in Bonn after an inaugural meeting Thursday in Berlin, a large majority of deputies swiftly approved the new law. Last week, the German supreme court rejected an earlier proposal as unconstitutional.

Under the new law, a hurdle allowing only parties that receive at least 5 percent of the vote to enter Parliament will be imposed separately in the two parts of the country.

The previous proposal was for a 5 percent minimum vote in all of Germany - rejected by the supreme court on grounds that it should have given small East German parties little chance of representation in Parliament.

It said East German groups without West German sister parties could not have made themselves known in all of Germany by Dec. 2 and thus never be able to pass the 5-percent barrier.

In its announcement last week, the court recommended either splitting the country into two voting regions or lowering the 5 percent hurdle to 3 percent.

The three strongest parties - Chancellor Helmut Kohl's Christian Democratic Union, its coalition partner Free Democratic Party and the opposition Social Democratic Party - voted Friday in favor of the new law based on the first recommendation.

But the environmentalist Green party and the Party for Democratic Socialism - the renamed East German Communist party - vehemently opposed the bill, saying it does not offer equal opportunities to all parties.

PDS Chairman Gregor Gysi said any kind of percent hurdle forces ''voters to become election strategists,'' because they will try to vote for a party that is likely to pass the 5-percent barrier.

Gysi claimed the big parties were trying to keep smaller and splinter parties out of Parliament by passing unfair voting laws.

Political observers confirmed that the SPD wants to keep the left- wing PDS out of Parliament, while the conservative CDU hopes to avoid a parliamentary debut by the right-wing Republican party.

Green party and PDS deputies threatened to bring the new law before the constitutional court again.

DETROIT (OCT. 5) UPI - A fire possibly set by an arsonist raged through an apartment building for senior citizens, leaving five people dead and about 15 injured as panicked residents jumped from windows to escape the smoke and flames.

Fire officials said the four-story Majestic Manor had no fire escape or sprinkler system. Glass littered the lawn and sidewalks below shattered windows Friday morning as chilled and fatigued residents huddled in the lobby.

Police said a 50-year-old man was in custody Friday for investigation of arson. Thursday night's three-alarm fire started in the west wing in the stairwell between the second and third floors, an investigator said.

Fire and thick smoke swept up the stairwell, choking hallways and preventing many from fleeing their apartments.

Firefighters arrived to find many residents had already jumped from windows to escape the flames and smoke and many others were trying to jump.

''We tried to stop them from jumping,'' Fire Chief Harold Watkins said. ''We told them ladders would be there. But the smoke was just too much for them. They just couldn't stand it.''

Three of the dead were later identified as Elmer Slater, 68, who lived in the building, a friend, LaVergie Jones, 32, and Eugene Bell, 80. The other two victims were not identified. One was dead on arrival at Henry Ford Hospital and the other at Detroit Receiving Hospital.

Diamond Steward, 58, said Slater and Jones were visiting him in his apartment when the fire broke out. Jones, he said, was pregnant. Steward scrambled out his fourth-floor window onto a fire ladder, thinking they were behind him.

''As soon as they put the ladder up there, I got on it,'' Steward said. ''I thought Vergie was right behind me. But I never saw her. I said, 'Vergie, Vergie,' but I never heard her. I never saw her. When I got down I told them there were two people still up there. They're at the morgue now.''

The brick structure has two wings extending from a courtyard and sits in a once-aflluent neighborhood of stately mansions.

Watkins confirmed that the building, built in the 1920s, has no fire escapes or sprinkler system.

Jenkins Taylor, 55, said he and his nephew, Charles Burrell, jumped about 10 feet from his first floor apartment facing the street.

''It was just a terrible tragedy,'' said Taylor as he left to see a doctor about a minor injury from his jump. ''It happened so quick. People were running around and screaming and the smoke was so thick you couldn't see. It was all confusion.

''I came in about 10:30 (p.m.) and turned on the TV and about 11 I heard the screaming. My apartment was not burned and we were able to escape out the window.''

The fire started about 11 p.m. Thursday and was out by about 1:30 a.m.

About 15 people in the 79-unit building were taken to three hospitals for treatment, mostly from injuries suffered jumping from windows.

Two residents, a woman and a man, were listed in serious condition in Detroit Receiving Hospital with smoke-inhalation injuries. The man also broke a leg while jumping, a hospital spokesman said.

One Emergency Medical Service technician was slightly injured by falling debris. Two firefighters were taken to Grace Hospital but were released a short time later.

Building manager Geraldine Larkins said the victims were burned beyond recognition.

''They were old people I could not recognize,'' she said. ''The skin was burned off their bodies. Their clothing was burned off them.''

''The fire marshal said the people who died would not have died if they kept their doors shut,'' she said. ''I almost panicked. I started to go out the window.''

Asked if the fire was deliberately set, Larkins said, ''I don't know about that.''

Later, five residents were taken to a Salvation Army emergency shelter and some were allowed to return to their apartments. It was not immediately known how many tenants were left homeless.

Richard Roberts spent most of the night in a hospital where he was treated for smoke inhalation.

''I ran out with my shorts. I didn't have nothing on, barefoot and everything '' he said. ''When I opened my (apartment) door, I knew it was time to get out.''

He said the hallway was ''black as the devil'' from smoke.

(OCT. 5) UPI - House Speaker Thomas Foley plans to push today for an emergency measure to continue federal spending levels past midnight and avoid automatic budget cuts. A stop-gap spending bill is needed following this morning's House vote to reject the bipartisan budget agreement. If Congress doesN'T take some action by midnight... cuts will cause one- Million federal workers to be furloughed and public services to be disrupted nationwide.

The unemployment rate in September hit its highest level in more than two years. The government says factory layoffs caused much of the one- tenth of one percent increase in the jobless rate... which hit five- point-seven percent in September. The Labor Department says 101-thousand people lost jobs last month. 42-thousand of those were temporary census laborers whose work is done.

Iraq says it has hope for the Middle East peace plan offered by France. Iraq's deputy minister said in a news conference yesterday in Amman, Jordan, that he belives France ''has good intentions.'' The French plan calls for complete withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Kuwait... free elections for the emirate... a general arms reduction in the region... and a comprehensive attempt to solve the Palestinian problem.

British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd says an international conference should be convened to discuss a homeland for the Palestinians... but only after Iraq pulls out of Kuwati. In London last night... Hurd said Palestinians deserve sympathy because- quote- ''their lands are occupied, they have NO political rights and they are daily victims of a misguided policy.'' Hurd also linked Iraq with the Arab- Israeli dispute in a speech to the U-N.

Elderly residents leaped out of a burning Detroit apartment building to escape a fire that killed five people and injured about 15 others . Investigators believe they have traced the fire to careless use of a cooking stove by a first-floor tenant. Flames and thick smoke swept up a stairwell, filling hallways and preventing many from fleeing their apartments.

DAYTON, Ohio (OCT. 5) UPI - A Montgomery County Common Pleas Court jury must determine who was responsible for a 1986 train derailment in suburban Miamisburg that caused the largest community evacuation in U.S. history.

Opening statements were delivered Thursday in the trial of a class- action lawsuit against the CSX Transporation Inc., the Union Tank Car Co. and Albright and Wilson Inc.

Stanley Chesley, a Cincinnati lawyer representing potential plaintiffs, said the derailment was caused by a series of incidents beginning several years before the accident.

Chesley said those incidents included improper maintenance and repair of the track, speeding by the train, and failure to make necessary changes to a tank car.

The lawyer estimated there are 50,000 potential plaintiffs who were affected. Claims for damages filed by 13,900 people already have been settled.

On July 8, 1986, a CSX train derailed near Miamisburg. A tank car containing about 180,000 pounds of phosphorus ruputured, and a huge fire and vapor cloud forced about 40,000 people from their homes.

Chesley said a CSX crew worked three hours on the day of the accident to level the track. That crew should have posted an order reducing the speed limit to 10 mph, he said. The train was traveling 45 mph when it went off the track about 2 1/2 hours after the repair work was completed.

Displaying the tank car's brake suspension bracket, which punctured the bottom of the car, the attorney claimed Chicago-based Union Tank Car and Albright and Wilson were negligent for not making design changes required after 1971.

UTC made and owned the tank car, and A&W leased it to carry the phosphorus.

Roger Fry, a lawyer for A&W, said his company is ''very safety conscious'' and took two other tank cars out of service after the accident.

UTC laywer William Johnston said the design changes required on tank cars in 1971 were never made retroactive to cars built before then. He said the derailed car was built in 1966.

James O'Connell, a laywer representing CSX, said the repair crew did not make the kind of repairs that required ordering trains to slow down. Another train, he said, passed after the repairs and before the accident with no problems.

He said experts retained by CSX found no basis to Chesley's claim that the track was kinked. He said that because of the extensive damage, CSX's experts could not identify the cause of the derailment.

O'Connell also claimed that Miamisburg firefighters ''made matters worse'' by spraying water, rather than fog, on the fire. The water undermined the ground under the car, causing it to overturn and spill more phosphorus, he said.

CSX Transportation Inc., based in Jacksonville, Fla., is a subsidiary of CSX Corp., of Richmond, Va.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 5) UPI - First lady Barbara Bush will stand in for President Bush Friday night at a fund-raiser in Kennebunkport, Maine, for Republican Gov. John McKernan, her office announced.

The president earlier this week postponed a two-day New England campaign swing on behalf of McKernan and GOP candidates in Boston, Waterbury and Stamford, Conn., Burlington, Vt., and Manchester, N.H., so he could stay in Washington to promote the deficit-cutting budget deal that was defeated by the House early Friday.

A spokeswoman said the first lady also planned to close the family's summer compound in the Maine resort community for the winter before returning to the Washington area Sunday to join the president at the Camp David presidential retreat.

HELSINKI, FINLAND (OCT. 5) UPI - An unarmed Soviet hijacker gave himself up to Finnish police at Helsinki airport Friday after forcing a civilian Soviet airliner to Finland, police said.

The aircraft, a 28-seat YAK-40 jet of the Aeroflot airline, was on a domestic flight from Novgorod, 300 miles northwest of Moscow, to Petrozadovsk near the Fenno-Soviet border when it was hijacked.

Police spokesmen said Friday there had been 22 passengers and four crew members aboard the aircraft.

Police refused to identify the hijacker and would not disclose what method he had used to hijack the aircraft, other than saying they found ''incriminating material'' in the aircraft.

They said he was a Soviet citizen, was born in 1949 and had wanted to be taken to Sweden. When told the aircraft did not have enough fuel, he agreed to let the plane land in Finland.

The hijacking continued a spate of air piracy in 1990, in which five young Soviet men have hijacked domestic civilian airliners from the Soviet Union to Finland and Sweden.

All of the hijackers have asked for asylum in the Nordic region. None have been given such asylum. Four have been returned to face trial in the Soviet Union.

The Swedish government deemed one hijacker unfit to face trial in the Soviet Union and put him on trial in Sweden, where he is now serving his sentence. Upon release, he is to be extradited back to the Soviet Union.

CAGAYAN DE ORO, Philippines (OCT. 5) UPI - A rebel leader offered Friday to surrender a garrison on the southern island of Mindanao after government warplanes blasted his soliders out of one garrison and prepared to recapture the other.

As President Corazon Aquino ordered her army to quash the day-old rebellion in Mindanao, rebel leader Col. Alexander Noble said his intentions were misunderstood and that he merely wanted to talk to military officials about reforms and genuine reconciliation.

Armed forces chief Gen. Renato de Villa told reporters in Manila that two T-28 Tora Tora planes bombed the brigade headquarters in Butuan city, 500 miles south of Manila, sending rebels scampering away.

De Villa said troops were poised to strike in Cagayan de Oro city, where Noble and opposition politician Reuben Canoy, were holding out in Camp Evangelista.

''For all intents and purposes, the rebellion of Noble and Canoy is finished '' de Villa said, pointing out rebel hopes other government forces in the area would defect to them have not materialized.

''At first I was overwhelmed by the spontaneous crowd which expressed support for my cause, but now those people who promised to be by my side have left me '' Noble told the Most Rev. Ray Monsanto, the vicar general of Cagayan de Oro.

De Villa, however, confirmed news reports that a platoon of soldiers in Iligan city near Cagayan de Oro had apparently defected to Noble.

Noble told the priest that he never intended to occupy the Cagayan de Oro garrison. He just found it ''abandoned.''

Noble told Monsanto that if the military asked him, ''I am willing to leave this camp peacefully.'' He said he was willing to return to the armed forces if Aquino granted him amnesty.

Noble and his force of some 600 soldiers and militiamen began the uprising Thursday by taking Butuan and Cagayan de Oro.

Defense Secretary Fidel Ramos flew to Mindanao and inspected the cities of Zamboanga, Cotabato and Davao, where a simultaneous uprising had earlier been expected.

Ramos said the situation in Mindanao was serious and should not be downplayed, but said he did not think the rebels will succeed because they did not have support of the people.

Noble, who declared Mindanao an independent federal state on Thursday, at a news conference Friday offered to negotiate and said he wanted reforms in the military and genuine reconciliation. He denied he took control of the camp, saying it was ''abandoned'' when he came Thursday.

''My sole purpose in coming over here is to initiate a dialogue and start a crusade or a movement for peace and unity among the military here in Mindanao and our people in general,'' said Noble, Aquino's former deputy chief of presidential security.

Asked about Noble's offer to negotiate, a grim-faced de Villa said, ''No, never.'' He said it was good military dependents and civilians were evacuating Camp Evangelista. ''We always worry about civilian casualties,'' he said.

Aquino had placed the 159,000-member armed forces on red alert - the maximum state of readiness - after Noble seized the garrisons and vowed to end the crisis swiftly.

''We will crush these pretenders, as we did before, for our people will never support their naked attempt to grab power,'' she said in a speech Friday to the annual Philippine Business Conference.

Aquino has survived six coup attempts. The worst challenge to her four-year rule in December left 119 people dead and more than 500 wounded.

The businessmen have expressed fears of a recession in the cash- strapped country following a particularly difficult year. It was hit by a major earthquake, typhoons, bombings and finally the Persian Gulf crisis, which has forced Aquino to raise petroleum prices and triggered worker unrest.

Air and sea services to the area have been suspended since Thursday and schools and offices have remained closed.

Ramos has directed the filing of rebellion charges against Noble after he fired off letters to diplomatic missions in Manila seeking recognition. Officials reported embassies said they were ignoring the letters.

Brig. Gen. Miguel Sol, the Cagayan de Oro commander, who was sacked early Friday after he failed to report to headquarters in Manila, surfaced inside the camp in the evening.

Mindanao, the country's second largest island rich in minerals and timber and inhabited by a quarter of the 60 million Filipinos, has been wracked by a Moslem separatist insurgency for the past two decades. More than 50,000 people have died in the fighting.

Communist guerrillas battling Manila for 21 years also operate in northeastern Mindanao.

SOWETO, SOUTH AFRICA (OCT. 5) UPI - African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela said Friday the ANC and the government will meet Monday to discuss a wave of violence that has killed at least 800 people.

''The government has indicated that there will be a meeting ... on the violence and police responses. We will be meeting on Monday, probably in Cape Town,'' Mandela told reporters.

He did not say who would represent the sides.

A spokesman for President Frederik de Klerk declined to confirm a meeting was scheduled.

The ANC has since late September been requesting a special meeting to discuss more than six weeks of the destructive conflict, which raged in the townships around Johannesburg until being quelled in mid-September by military-style measures codenamed Iron Fist.

ANC officials said they were not seeking a full-scale summit, similar to the two rounds of discussions in May and August that cleared the way to power-sharing negotiations, but wanted a meeting focusing on the violence that they said threatens the peace process.

Government officials have responded that Pretoria sees no need for urgent top-level talks, in light of other forms of contact between the parties, including private meetings between Mandela and de Klerk, and the effectiveness of Iron Fist.

Authorities Friday lifted the most controversial measure, a nightly curfew, in most parts of the nation's largest township of Soweto, citing an end to factional strife.

But Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok said the curfew would be maintained in three other townships. He also said other Iron Fist measures, including heavily armed police and army patrols and roadblocks, would remain in effect in all areas.

Mandela has charged that a shadowy ''third force'' orchestrated the violence, which was characterized by clashes between the multi-tribal supporters of the ANC and followers of Mangosuthu Buthelezi's exclusively Zulu Inkatha movement.

He repeated the charge Friday after a meeting at his home with representatives of five of South Africa's six nominally self-governing tribal territories.

''We've agreed that there is a third force that is orchestrating this violence. The violence is not ... a conflict between Xhosas and Zulus,'' he said.

De Klerk has said a third force may be responsible for some of the conflict, but said its roots lay in tribal differences.

Buthelezi, who is also leader of the KwaZulu territory, had declined to attend the meeting at Mandela's home after being invited only in his capacity as territorial chief, an action he said would preclude any meaningful talks on the strife regarding his national Inkatha movement.

ANC officials have accused Buthelezi of fomenting the fighting to undercut the more popular ANC in power-sharing talks with Pretoria.

But Mandela noted, ''We regret that Buthelezi did not attend.'' And he added that ''there is always the possibility'' of a meeting between him and the Zulu leader.

BEIJING (OCT. 5) UPI - China on Friday launched a scientific experiment satellite carrying animals and plants into space to assess their response to weightlessness, the official Xinhua news agency reported.

The craft was launched from the Chinese space center at Jiuquan, in northwest Gansu Province, at 2:15 p.m. Beijing time and carried into orbit by a Long March-2 rocket, the report said.

''The satellite is carrying animals and plants so that their reactions under conditions of weightlessness can be observed,'' Xinhua said. The report did not specify the types of animals involved.

The spacecraft is scheduled to return in eight days. Xinhua said ground trackers reported the satellite's instruments were ''working well.''

In a separate dispatch, Xinhua also said researchers from the Chinese Academy of Sciences recently launched a space probe to study the depletion of the ozone layer up to 19 miles above the Earth.

The report said the launch was successful but did not give details.

NEW DELHI, India (OCT. 5) UPI - India charged Friday that Pakistan has intensified its shelling of northern border posts in an attempt to provide cover for armed Moslem militants crossing into Indian territory before winter snows block the high mountain passes.

''The shelling taking place is an attempt to create a diversion and to pin down some of our forces while heavy infiltration of armed militants has been attempted in other areas,'' said a spokesman for the Foreign Ministry.

The spokesman said a ''pattern of unprovoked and heavy shelling'' by Pakistani armed forces was emerging in at least three areas along the disputed border between India and Pakistan in northern Jammu and Kashmir state.

Official complaints have been lodged with Pakistani authorities in Islamabad and New Delhi, he said.

Pakistaini officials in New Delhi and Islamabad could not be reached for comment.

India claims that Pakistan is arming and training Kashmiri Moslem militants who are waging a bloody separatist movement in the Kashmir Valley, home to 4 million Moslems.

''The intensity of the shelling as well as the range of weapons employed, such as mortars and artillery, is more than normal,'' the spokesman said. ''There is no intention on our part to give them an excuse for escalation.''

The spokesman said that the Indian armed forces were ''obliged to dismantle'' certain unspecified structures on the Pakistani side of the border, but he declined to be more specific. The Indian army apparently has dismantled the structures by shelling them.

The increase in shelling began in mid-August and the step-up in military activity coincided with an ''intensified spurt in infiltration of highly armed militants trained in camps'' in Pakistan.

The spokesman said the increase in infiltration was reflected in the number of militants and weapons captured. While 147 militants were captured in Indian territory for the entire month of September, authorities nabbed 107 militants during the first four days of October, he said.

In September, 114 AK-47 automatic rifles were confiscated. But in the first four days of October, 150 of the weapons were recovered, he said.

Rebels apparently were increasing their efforts to cross the border from Pakistan before snows seal the high mountain passes between the two countries.

Moslem militants have been waging a bloody separatist movement since 1988, but the drive received widespread support from the region's Moslem population after security forces opened fire on demonstrators last January, killing at least 35 people.

Since then at least 800 people have been killed in the near-daily violence. Tens of thousands of Indian army troops and paramilitary forces deployed to the area have failed to crush the uprising.

India has repeatedly charged neighboring Islamic Pakistan with fomenting violence in Kashmir, an allegation that Islamabad denies. The crisis led to a bitter exchange of rhetoric between the two countries earlier this year, and many political observers and diplomats from numerous countries feared that a fourth Indo-Pakistan war could erupt.

Diplomats from the Soviet Union, the United States and several other nations urged the two nations to settle the dispute without going to war. The measures as well as diplomatic efforts by India and Pakistan, helped to lower tension and reduce the risk of war.

CHICAGO (OCT. 5) UPI - Trading was choppy and grain and soybean futures were mixed at midmorning Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Corn and soybeans were moderately higher on steady buying activity and firm basis levels, but gains were tempered by harvest activity and the weakness in the stock market.

The defeat of a federal budget compromise by the House of Representatives was somewhat depressing for the market because of the implications on farm programs.

The strength in soybeans was somewhat of a surprise. Traders had expected lower prices, but he market was higher on professional buying during the first hour.

Weekend weather conditions are expected to permit farmers to make good progress with the corn and soybean harvest.

Widespread selling limited the gains in corn.

Wheat prices were lower, but losses were tempered by the prospect of near-term export business.

The midmorning prices:

BONN, Germany (OCT. 5) UPI - Former President Ronald Reagan was named recipient of the German-American Unity Foundation medallion for his ''outstanding contributions'' to U.S.-German relations, the foundation said Friday.

Spokeswoman Mary-Michaele Brooks said she did not know if Reagan would attend the Oct. 28 gala celebration to receive the honor. Reagan is currently campaigning for Republican candidates in upcoming U.S. elections.

Reagan, who was told of the honor Sept. 12 while visiting Berlin, was ''thrilled'' about the award, Brooks said.

The foundation, established in 1981, annually presents the medallions to one American and one German for their activities in German-American affairs. Stuttgart Mayor Manfred Rommel was named the other medallion recipient.

The foundation acknowledged Reagan for opening a German-American garden in Washington and for declaring Oct. 6 as German-American Day in the United States.

''Because of his strong relationship with German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, Reagan took an active interest in German-American affairs,'' Brooks said.

She said more than 400 German and American soldiers and their spouses will attend this year's gala, which is of ''particular importance'' because thousands of American servicemen stationed in Germany will be returning to the United States.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney announced last month that 86 military bases in Germany will be closed and at least 95,000 soldiers sent back to the United States within the next two years.

''We're trying to give a lasting good impression of Germany,'' Brooks said. ''We want the American soldiers to remember Germany fondly.''

Past medallion recipients include Henry Kissinger, former secretary of state, Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, NATO Secretary-General Manfred Woerner and John Galvin, supreme allied commander in Europe.

AMRITSAR, INDIA (OCT. 5) UPI - Sikh separatist violence in northern Punjab state has left at least 19 people dead, including eight security personnel and seven militants, police said Friday.

The worst incident occurred Thursday night when a group of militants entered a police post in Nagkalan, a village north of the Sikh holy city of Amritsar, killing six security personnel in a burst of automatic weapons fire. Police blamed the slaying on the newly established Khalistan National Army, whose members were allowed into the post by a Sikh official manning the gate. The guard allegedly denied the attack was taking place when police from another post contected him by radio about the sound of gunfire, police said. Singh fled along with the gunmen. Police said security forces scored a notable victory Friday against the extremists when they shot dead Jaswinder Singh, a hard-core militant accused of more than 100 slayings. The state government had announced a reward of $27,800 for his capture, dead or alive. The Singh and an accomplice were shot dead when they tried to flee after killing a bank guard in Amritsar. They were intercepted and killed by a police patrol, police said.

In another incident, a militant was killed and 12 civilians injured when a bomb exploded at a market in Batala, a town 30 miles northeast of Amritsar, police said.

The bomb exploded as a militant tried to throw it at a group of people who spotted him carrying the device, police said. They said the bomb slipped from his hand and exploded, killing him and wounding 12 civilians nearby.

At least nine other people, including four militants and two security officials, were killed in other incidents across the state, police said.

Since 1983, Sikh separatists have been waging a bloody campaign to create the theocratic state of ''Khalistan,'' or the ''Land of Pure,'' in Punjab.

More than 10,000 people have died in the separatist violence.

Sikh militants claim that members of their faith need a separate state to escape alleged discrimination against them by the Hindu- dominated central government.

Sikhs make up 2 percent of India's 830 million people, most of whom are Hindus.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (OCT. 5) UPI - NASA managers and a federal judge cleared the shuttle Discovery for fueling Friday and takeoff Saturday to launch the nuclear-powered Ulysses probe on a voyage over the uncharted poles of the sun.

''We're ready to go,'' said William Lenoir, chief of NASA's manned space program. ''Discovery is ready. I just left the crew and they're ready and anxious to go. From where we sit right now, the one remaining question ... is will the weather cooperate? But we're ready to go.''

About 20 anti-nuclear activists demonstrated Friday at the Kennedy Space Center to protest the launch and two were arrested for trespassing. But a federal judge in Washington refused to block the launch, clearing Discovery for takeoff at 7:35 a.m. Saturday to end a five-month hiatus in shuttle flights.

The goal of the 36th shuttle mission, only the fourth so far this year, is the deployment of the European-built Ulysses solar probe on a five-year, $750 million voyage over the uncharted poles of the sun. A 60 percent chance of good weather was expected at launch time Saturday.

Anti-nuclear activists, concerned about the safety of a Ulysses's atomic power pack, asked U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch last week to cancel the countdown claiming NASA underestimated the odds of a radiation release in the event of a launch accident. But Gasch ruled Friday NASA could proceed with Discovery's launch.

At a 50-minute hearing Thursday in Washington, the Foundation for Economic Trends, the Florida Coalition for Peace and Justice and the Christic Institute argued that recent fuel leaks that grounded the shuttles Atlantis and Columbia have raised serious questions about the safety of NASA's launch program.

''It's been mishap after mishap,'' said Jeremy Rifkin of the Foundation for Economic Trends. ''It's irresponsible for NASA to send up Discovery when the other two shuttles are grounded.''

Yet another such mishap occurred Wednesday when a 9-foot metal beam mistakenly left in Atlantis's engine compartment fell as the ship was being lifted into its launch position. It is not yet clear whether Atlantis was damaged or whether the ship can still meet its Nov. 7 launch target.

As for Discovery, efforts to ground NASA's nuclear-powered Galileo Jupiter probe failed last October and NASA managers were confident the Ulysses mission would be cleared for blastoff as well.

Getting Discovery into orbit is crucial for the European Space Agency and for NASA, which has endured intense criticism in recent months because of problems with the Hubble Space Telescope and elusive hydrogen fuel leaks that grounded the shuttles Columbia and Atlantis in May, July and September.

''I think it will be very important to the morale of all of us in this business to see the shuttle flying again,'' said Willis Meeks, U.S. project manager of the Ulysses program.

''Our feeling about Discovery is, we haven't had any leaks and we've seen no evidence that we have leaks and we are very confident that this machine will work. We're ready to go on Saturday morning.''

Discovery skipper Richard ''Dick'' Richards, 44, co-pilot Robert Cabana, 41, flight engineer William Shepherd, 41, Bruce Melnick, 40, and Thomas Akers, 39, plan to spend four days in orbit before gliding to a landing Wednesday morning at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

NASA and the European Space Agency originally intended to launch Ulysses in 1986, but the flight was grounded by the Challenger disaster. For many of the men and women involved with the project, launch marks the end of more than a decade of preparation.

''We're all very excited, after a long wait, to be now at the eve of launch,'' said Peter Wenzel, Ulysses project scientist for the European Space Agency. ''The sun is the only star that we can observe directly and its environment is the only large scale astrophysical laboratory where we can make direct measurements.

''So besides learning about our star, its environment and it's influence on the Earth, we will also learn quite a deal about other astrophysical settings. So we're very excited.''

Ulysses cannot be launched directly to the sun because no available rocket has enough power to cancel out the speed of Earth's rotation around the sun's equator, some 48 miles per second.

Instead, the 850-pound probe will be fired in to Jupiter by a unigue $87 million three-stage booster so the giant planet's gravity can fling it down, out of the equatorial plane of the solar system and back toward the south pole of the sun.

LONDON (OCT. 5) UPI - Britain stunned the world financial community Friday by saying it will move its pound sterling into the European Community's Exchange Rate Mechanism as of Monday and drop its prime lending rate 1 percent.

It was seen as a significant step towards the creation of a single European currency and of a European central banking system.

Chancellor of the Exchequer John Major, noting that the British economy had slowed, said the time had come for the pound to join the ERM, a currency grid locking the relative values of European currencies in narrow ranges.

''We have decided that the U.K. should now join the Exchange Rate Mechanism of the European Monetary System,'' Major said.

''We have proposed therefore, to our European Community partners that as part of our common procedure we should join the ERM on Monday morning,'' he said at 4 p.m. London time, just before financial markets closed.

Britain will peg its currency to the German mark at a central exchange rate of 2.95 marks to the pound, Major said. Significantly, the move came just two days after Germany became one political and economic unit.

The Bank of England's minimum lending rate will be lowered to 14 percent from 15 percent, he said.

The London Stock Exchange staged a late rally on the announcements, sending the Financial Times 100 share index 60 points higher to 2110.

HOUSTON (OCT. 5) UPI - Continental Airlines' insurance company agreed to an out-of-court settlement in a lawsuit filed by relatives of a man killed in a 1987 flight from Denver that crashed, an airline spokesman said Friday.

Twenty-eight people were killed and 54 injured when the Continental DC-9 bound for Boise, Idaho, crashed in a snowstorm moments after taking off from Denver's Stapleton International Airport on Nov. 15, 1987.

Although he would not discuss the settlement amount, Continental spokesman Art Kent said the settlement was negotiated and would be paid by the airline's insurance company, United States Aviation Insurance Group of New York.

Attorney Michael Sydow said Thursday his client, Mary K. Cook of Boise, and her daughter, Kay Gosse, of Seattle, will receive $4.5 million. Mary's husband Richard Cook, died in the crash.

The case against the Houston-based airline had been slated for trial last Monday, but it was settled a few hours before it reached the courtroom.

Sydow also represented relatives in other lawsuits on the crash. He claims Continental failed to hire properly trained and experienced pilots.

The National Transportation Safety Board ruled the crash was caused by a combination of weather factors and pilot errors.

Sydow identified his other clients involved with previous settlements with the insurance company as Helen Hidoshima of Denver, who will receive $2.5 million for the death of her husband, Mako Hideshima; Bryon Owens of Nyssa, Wash., $750,000 for the death of his wife Terry; and David Daniel of Nampta, Idaho, $2.2 million for the loss of his wife, Tamara.

Sydow has two remaining cases filed on behalf of families of crash victims pending against Continental.

The NTSB noted First Officer Lee Bruecher, 26, who was at the controls, had little flight time on DC-9s. Bruecher, of Houston, was killed in the crash.

Investigators also found 27 minutes passed between the time the DC-9 was de-iced and the time it took off. Continental's operations manual reportedly requires pilots to check for possible icing on the wings if there is a delay of 20 minutes or more.

''Continental's Number-one prority has always been and will always be safety. Our standards meet and in many ways exceed the industry and government criteria,'' Continental spokesman Ned Walker said.

United States Aviation already has paid more than $20 million to settle 36 other crash-related cases, most of which were filed in Colorado federal court, attorneys said.

Continental has admitted partial responsibility for the crash but said it also believed the Federal Aviation Administration was to blame because of the takeoff delay.

(OCT. 5) UPI - President Bush walked into the Oval Office before dawn this morning and got down to the job of trying to salvage a budget. The House handed leaders of both parties a stunning defeat yesterday by rejecting the compromise they had crafted after four months of talks. That leaves the nation with a deadline of midnight tonight, after which 105-BILLION dollars worth of automatic spending cuts are to begin. They threaten to send federal workers home on furlough, disrupting public services nation-wide.

Civilian unemployment is up to its highest level in two years. The Labor Department reports that 101-thousand more workers had NO job to go to last month. That pushes overall unemployment to five-point-seven perent of the work force, up one-tenth of one percent from August. The figures are in line with what economists had expected.

Troops loyal to Philippine President Corazon Aquino are moving against rebel soldiers holding positions on the island of Mindanao, south of Manila. Government warplanes forced the rebels out of one occupied garrison and are prepared to recapture another. And the army colonel who just yesterday proclaimed Mindanao an independent federal state now says he's willing to negotiate.

Iraq allowed four Germans to leave the country today. The official Iraqi news agency says President Saddam Hussein ordered the release. The release came after talks in Baghdad between a former high-ranking East German official and the Iraqi government. About 300 other Germans remain in Iraq.

BEIRUT, LEBANON (OCT. 5) UPI - Defense Minister Albert Mansour ruled out a military thrust into Gen. Michel Aoun's turf to end his 2-year-old mutiny, saying a blockade imposed against the rebel leader will force him to surrender soon.

''We will bring Aoun down without firing a single bullet. I am 90 percent sure that the blockade will force him surrender soon,'' Mansour told United Press International at his temporary office in the seaside Carlton Hotel in Moslem west Beirut.

The pro-Syrian Government of President Elias Hrawi blocked all passageways last week around a 100-square-mile region commanded by Aoun, barring entry of foodstuffs, flour, gasoline and other essential materials.

Aoun has refused to recognize Hrawi's leadership and vacate the Presidential Palace in Baabda, east of Beirut.

''These measures will continue and we will increase the pressure until Aoun's fall,'' Mansour said. ''Our strong wish is to avoid using force. We will not use it and we will not give Aoun a chance to use it since we believe that these measures will bear fruits.''

Mansour described the government blockade as ''a humanitarian move'' that might spare the country another round of violence.

''Our choice has been made. We want to move Lebanon from a state of war and put it on the path of peace,'' he said.

Mansour said Hrawi's government never wanted a military confrontation with Aoun, who controls a mainly Christian 15,000-strong army.

''But it is our duty and responsibility to end Aoun's mutiny in order to reunite the war-torn country and restore peace,'' he said.

He added that if the economic and political siege imposed on Aoun's region failed to bring him down, the government was left with the last option, that to launch a military operation to oust him.

Mansour lashed out at the 55-year-old general accusing him of ''adopting a suicidal, stupid and destructive policy.'' He said Aoun no longer has a political program since he dropped his idea to liberate the country from the Syrians.

Since January, Aoun has engaged his army in a futile war to disband the 10,000-strong Christian Lebanese Forces militia of Samir Geagea after failing to force Syria pull its 35,000 troops in a ''war of liberation'' last year.

Two rounds of violence killed more than 2,500 people and forced 200,000 residents of the 310-sq-mile Christian enclave to flee the country or seek refuge in safer Lebanese areas.

Mansour also accused the rebel general of ''inciting a few people and soldiers'' against Hrawi's legitimate authority by staging anti-siege demonstrations. Twenty-five demonstrators were killed and 82 others were wounded Monday when gunmen opened fire on the protestors in east Beirut.

He said Aoun's fall will help implement an internationally-backed peace treaty that was worked out in the Saudi resort town of Taif last October by the Lebanese Parliament to end the country's 15-year-old civil war.

Aoun has rebuffed the agreement, that gave the Moslems a larger share in powers, ending more than 40 years of Maronite Christian dominance. He has argued that it failed to ensure a speedy and complete withdrawal of Syria's troops.

(OCT. 5) UPI - World oil prices were up in early trading Friday as markets once again focused on the possibility of war in the Middle East.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the U.S. benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for November delivery was up 52 cents at midday over Thursday's close to $37.50 a barrel after opening at $37.70 a barrel.

A United Nations speech by Iraqi Ambassador Abdul Amir al-Ambari scheduled for Thursday night was postponed until late Friday. Oil traders were looking to the speech as Iraq's response to President Bush's conciliatory remarks made at the U.N. earlier this week.

But, the London Times was reported as saying the speech was not conciliatory and only listed Iraqi complaints.

''His delaying of the speech was perceived by the market as bullish on prices '' said Tom Blakeslee of the Pegasus Econometrics Group in Hoboken, N.J. He said the market may ''be grasping for straws.''

Blakeslee said, ''The market is cautious ... but the probability of war is up again.''

Last Thursday, WTI traded at a 10-year high of $40.10 a barrel. Blakeslee looked for the market to again test this high on the technical axiom ''that we usually have 'double tops' - we're looking for that.''

Based on past trading patterns, this outlook is strengthened by the fact that crude prices fell twice this week, on Tuesday and Thursday. Before again testing a high, ''you usually have a double leg down,'' the trader said.

On the Merc, unleaded gasoline for November delivery had risen 0.94 cent to 91.80 cents a gallon, while November home heating oil had gained 2.28 cents by midday to $1.022 a gallon.

On the European spot market, where crude is bought and sold for cash, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent was up 65 cents over Thursday to $38.15 a barrel at midday.

The United Arab Emirates' Dubai Light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East - had edged up 20 cents to $32.10 a barrel.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, prompt-delivery WTI was up 45 cents to $37.35 a barrel.

NEW DELHI, India (OCT. 5) UPI - Prison guards at the maximum-security Tihar Central Jail shot dead at least nine inmates and injured 200 others Friday after prisoners revolted and attempted to escape, jail officials said.

H.P. Kumar, the inspector-general of Tihar Central Jail told reporters that trouble erupted first at the main kitchen of the facility, and over the next six hours about 1,500 inmates rampaged through the jail, setting fires and attacking jail officials.

Inmates wrapped cylinders of cooking gas in blankets and set them ablaze, blasting holes in barracks walls and iron gates, and causing explosions inside the prison, said the official.

He said inmates attempted to escape from the prison.

The number of inmates revolting against jail officials increased as they broke barracks walls and moved toward the outer gate.

The official said prisoners poured fuel on several jail officials in an attempt to set them ablaze. At least 20 police officials were injured.

Guards at first tried to hold off the inmates and fired tear gas shells, but finding they were losing control, opened fire about noon.

Another official said at lease nine prisoners were killed and more than 200 others were injured in the incident. The exact number of casualties among the inmates was not immediately known, but the official said several prisoners were in critical condition.

The revolt in the maximum security prison erupted after the death of an inmate Thursday night.

The Tihar Central Jail, a massive complex in the western part of New Delhi, was where former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's assassins were held and later hanged. The prime minister was assassinated in 1984.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (OCT. 5) UPI - The government lifted a controversial nightly curfew Friday in the nation's largest black township of Soweto that was imposed 10 days ago to restore peace and quell a wave of factional violence, police said.

The curfew, part of a security clampdown intended to quash the fighting, came into effect in the township of 2 million and three other hard-hit townships around Johannesburg on Sept. 25.

The African National Congress, a party to the more than six weeks of conflict that killed up to 800 people, had strongly criticized the measures. ANC leader Nelson Mandela said the curfew was ''a license to kill our people.''

Law enforcement officials, however, said Operation Iron Fist had effectively brought the killing to an end.

Mandela welcomed the lifting of the curfew as ''a victory for the people'' and said the government had ''backed down after pressure from the people.''

But police spokesman Capt. Craig Kotze said Minister of Law and Order Adriaan Vlok had decided to lift the 9 p.m. to 4 a.m. curfew ''after incidents of unrest and also crime in Soweto dropped dramatically ... this measure took only 10 days to bring back order and the minister feels it's now time to lift it.''

Vlok had announced in a statement early Friday the curfew had been lifted in three of Soweto's four districts, but Kotze later corrected the statement and said, ''A curfew no longer exists anywhere in Soweto.''

Kotze said the curfew remained in effect in the three other townships - Thokoza, Vosloorus, and Katlehong - as ''there is still potential for violence there.''

He added the other Iron Fist measures, including heavily armed police and army patrols, roadblocks, and barbed-wire barricades at flashpoint areas remained in effect in all the townships.

Mandela accused the government of overreacting in imposing Iron Fist and said the measures did not address the root causes of the conflict.

PAINESVILLE, OH (OCT. 5) UPI - The 19-year-old son of religious cult leader Jeffrey Don Lundgren was sentenced Friday to life in prison for his part in the killing of a family belonging to the cult.

Damon Lundgren, 18 when the five-member Dennis Avery family was shot to death by Jeffrey Lundgren in April 1989, had sought a concurrent sentence for his conviction of four counts each of aggravated murder and kidnapping.

A concurrent sentence would have made him eligible for parole in 20 years.

Lake County Common Pleas Judge Paul Mitrovich, however, sentenced him to consecutive terms of life in prison with no parole for 20 years for each of the aggravated murder charges and 10 to 25 years in prison for each of the kidnapping charges.

Prosecutors said Damon Lundgren will not be eligible for parole for 105 years.

Jeffrey Lundgren was sentenced earlier to death for five charges of aggravated murder.

Alice Lundgren, Jeffrey's wife and Damon's mother, was convicted of 15 lesser charges and sentenced to five life prison sentences.

Damon Lundgren testified how he was abused by his father and how he was always forced to follow his father's orders. He said he was in the Kirtland barn the night of the killings but did not help.

The jury found him guilty last month but recommended life in prison with parole after 20 years, thus preventing the judge from issuing the death sentence.

Damon Lundgren did not speak during Friday's hearing.

Judge Mitrovich said age is not an excuse and that although Damon apologized for his father's actions, he never apologized for his own actions.

''Jeffrey Lundgren could not have done anything without the help of you and the other followers,'' the judge said.

The bodies of the Avery family were uncovered in the barn Jan. 3-4 after authorities received a call from a tipster who once belonged to the cult. Thirteen cult members were indicted Jan. 5 and arrests were made near San Diego, Independence, Mo., and Bay City, Mich.

Jeffrey Lundgren, a one-time lay minister in the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, led the followers away from the church. After killing the Avery family in April 1985, the group moved to near Davis, W.Va., and then to Chilhowee, Mo., before breaking up in December.

The three Lundgrens were convicted in the only three trials completed. Ronald Luff is now on trial facing aggravated murder charges and Daniel Kraft is yet to go on trial on the same charges.

Seven members of the former cult have pleaded guilty to lesser charges and murder charges against one person were dropped.

BUENOS AIRES (OCT. 5) UPI - Two consortia of European phone companies, backed by U.S. banks, will take over Argentina's telephone system Entel on Oct. 8, President Carlos Menem said Friday.

One consortium is led by Telefonica of Spain and Citicorp; the second is led by Stet of Italy, France Cables and Radio and Morgan Guarantee Trust.

Between them, they are pledged to pay a down payment of $214 million. They will also pay another $381 million over three years, and $5 billion in Argentine debt paper, which is now selling on the secondary market for about 13 cents on the dollar.

According to financial sources involved in the sale, the consortia must make the down payment and sign documents for the transfer on Oct. 8.

The groups will be given several more weeks to provide the debt paper, the sources told United Press International.

A third consortium, led by Bell Atlantic and Manufacturers Hanover Trust, won a bid to run the northern half of the telephone company last June, but they failed to ratify the pledge Thursday with a verbal guarantee that the government required by 6 p.m. local time that day.

Within hours of the deadline, President Menem signed documents allowing the Franco-Italian group to take the place of Bell Atlantic and Manufacturers Hanover, saying ''the deadlines have to be met.''

Menem said, ''We are going to work today, tomorrow, and even Sunday, so that Monday we will hand it (the telephone company) over definitively.''

He also pointed out that the transfer will take place Monday on what would have been the 95th birthday of the late President Peron, who led Argentina in nationalizing the phone company and later the railroads and other large companies.

Menem has argued that the Peronist Party must change with the times and now lead the privatization of money-losing state companies.

A last-minute dispute between the proposed operators and Economy Minister Erman Gonzalez almost disrupted the deal.

Gonzalez angered the groups Thursday when he opposed a 42 percent hike in telephone rates that had been assured the new operators as a condition for their taking over Entel, but later that night the Public Works Ministry announced the hike would go into effect as planned.

Entel is so badly strapped for cash that on Thursday it needed a $13 million loan from the Municipal Bank of Buenos Aires to meet its payroll.

SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA (OCT. 5) UPI - Boris Becker swept into the semifinals of the $1 million Australian Indoor Championships Friday with a 6-4, 6-4 victory over Richey Reneberg.

Becker lost his first service game to the Texan, then the No. 2 seed regrouped to win in 67 minutes.

In Saturday's semifinal, Becker will play Australian teenager Todd Woodbridge, a 7-6 (7-2), 2-6, 6-1 quarterfinal winner over Grant Connell of Canada.

''I didn't see Woodbridge's game today,'' the 22-year-old German said. ''I have won and I'll just relax now and then we'll talk about the match in the morning. I have difficulty in playing someone I do not know.''

In the other semifinal, Wimbledon champion Stefan Edberg will play Ivan Lendl.

Edberg, the top seed, dropped No. 9 David Wheaton of Excelsior, Minn., 6-2, 7-6 (7-2), and No. 3 Ivan Lendl beat Sweden's Peter Lundgren 6-2, 7-6 (7-3).

''It will be tough for both of us,'' Edberg said. ''I will have to serve very well to beat him. We both like to play on this (Plexipave) surface and it suits both our games.''

Lendl said he is using this tournament to gauge his game against Edberg's and Becker's.

''I'm looking forward to it because I need to play Stefan and Boris as much as I can to keep up with them so I am ready for the Grand Slam championships,'' he said. ''If we both play our best it is going to be a tremendous match.''

NEWARK, N.J. (OCT. 5) UPI - First Fidelity Bank has accused a former senior executive of engineering an embezzlement scheme that bilked the company of at least $6.2 million, a published report said Friday.

The bank alleged that the scheme to funnel bank funds to two shell companies the executive set up went undiscovered for 11 years, The Newark Star-Ledger reported.

Robert Venezia was a senior vice president of First Fidelity's Information Systems and Technology Division until he was fired Aug. 31 after the alleged embezzlement was discovered.

First Fidelity, of Newark, filed suit against Venezia, his wife Lois, and two shell companies, Universal Business Supplies and American Leasing Co. in Superior Court in Somerset County, N.J. on Sept. 11.

The newspaper cited sources who said at least two other First Fidelity employees are suspected of having played a role in the embezzlement scheme.

First Fidelity said in court papers the scheme was launched in 1979, when Venezia approved payments of $85,000 to UBS. In 1982, ALC received $46,000.

The complaint said the payments continued until they totaled $4.9 million to UBS and $1.37 million to ALC. The payments were supposed to cover office supplies and equipment purchased or leased by the bank. No office supplies or equipment were ever delivered by either firm, the bank said, charging that the firms served as fronts for Venezia and his wife.

''Their sole purpose seems to have been to facilitate the bilking of First Fidelity by the Venenzias,'' the bank said in court papers unsealed Thursday.

The bank last week obtained a court order authorizing it to seize up to $6.2 million of Venezia's assets in Somerset, Middlesex and Ocean counties.

Somerset County sheriff's deputies executed the order by putting a lien on Venezia's $1.85 million home in Warren and seizing his 1989 Jaguar and 1985 BMW. The bank also is seeking to seize the couple's other assets, including bank accounts and real estate.

When asked to comment, a spokesman for First Fidelity would say only, ''We have no investigations here which will have any negative effect on the bank's current or future earnings.''

Citing sources, the newspaper said the FBI is investigating the case. The FBI declined to comment, but a spokeswoman noted that federal law requires all banks insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. to report to the FBI any wrongdoing uncovered through internal bank investigations.

No criminal charges have been filed.

In applying for the court order, the bank said the Venezias also have property in New York and Florida. The bank also said it did not believe the couple's New Jersey assets would be enough to cover the $6.2 million it said was bilked.

The bank's holding company, First Fidelity Bancorporation, has some 500 banking offices in New Jersey, including four First Fidelity Banks and Morris Savings Bank. It also has offices in eastern Pennsylvania.

As of June 30, the company listed assets of $29.8 billion.

INDIANAPOLIS (OCT. 5) UPI - A 9 1/2-inch largemouth bass that fell a few inches shy of the size Indiana law says you can keep has netted nothing but trouble for the great-grandmother who caught it.

Beatrice B. Thomas, 64, already has made two trips to court and now has a criminal record, a police mug shot and at least $130 to pay in fines and costs.

''I think it's absurd a person would have to go through all this for having an itty-bitty fish,'' Thomas said.

Thomas said she has fished for 20 years and it is her first brush with the law in her life.

''Even the judge appeared to be stunned by this,'' she said.

The trouble began June 23 when a conservation officer caught Thomas with the undersize fish at Eagle Creek Park. She appeared on a summons at Marion Municipal Court July 27 but was told no one had a record of her case.

She then complied with another summons to appear Sept. 26 and told officials she just wanted to clear up the case.

''All these people had been there before and after me for drunken driving, disorderly conduct, bad checks, you name it,'' she said. ''I told the judge, 'I'm not denying I had the fish. I just want to pay the fine.'''

But Court Commissioner Steven Jacobs said it was illegal for him to accept a guilty plea because a deputy prosecutor was not in court. He then scheduled her for yet another hearing on Oct. 17, advised her of her legal rights and recommended she hire a lawyer.

''I remember it real well,'' Jacobs said. ''She looked at me and said, 'For catching a fish?'''

After that hearing, Thomas was booked - photographed, fingerprinted, the works.

The Indiana Department of Natural Resources takes about 50 people to court in Marion County every year for fishing and wildlife laws violations, said Mick Jensen, supervisor of cases in Municipal Court for the prosecutor.

Jensen said he was not sure he wanted to comment on whether it was reasonable to give a great-grandmother a criminal record for keeping a too-small fish.

''The legislature has decided its a misdemeanor,'' he said. ''We treat all misdemeanors the same. I understand the practicalities of her situation. It's not our position to pick and choose what crimes to prosecute.

''I personally feel sorry for her,'' Jensen added. ''It seems like a lot to do for a fish that's 6 inches too small.''

All for a fish that was 4 1/2 inches shy of the legal limit.

''I had nothing to measure it with,'' she said. ''I never gave it a second thought. I always keep the first fish. It's my luck piece.''

COLLEGE STATION, TX (OCT. 5) UPI - While marriages may last only until death do you part, some Aggie loyalties run even deeper - six feet under.

The chairman of the Texas A&M Board of Regents wants the school to set aside 100 acres surrounding a tiny campus graveyard for an ''Aggie Field of Honor.''

The college has a little-known cemetery on its west campus. Only 10 people have been buried in the .04-acre graveyard since former Texas A&M President L.L. Foster was laid to rest there in 1901.

Regent Chairman William McKenzie proposed Thursday an expansion of the graveyard. McKenzie, 67, said he would be willing to be buried there.

The graveyard expansion ''would be enthusiastically endorsed by our former students,'' McKenzie predicted. Other board members were more skeptical.

The board decided against setting aside any more land until a study is done on how many former students, faculty, employees and their relatives would consider being buried in an Aggie cemetery.

''I don't want to be buried anywhere,'' Regent Raul Fernandez quipped.

Some Texas A&M officials said they envision an Aggie cemetery similar to ones now operated by the U.S. Military Academy at West Point and the Air Force and Naval academies.

The initial idea for the Aggie cemetery came from Foster, who appointed a committee in 1900 to look into it. The committee never made its report.

Foster died in 1901 after three years as president and he was buried in a sheep pasture on the main campus.

School officials later designated that site for a dining hall and Foster's grave was moved in 1939 to the current cemetery. The last burial at the cemetery was an infant laid to rest in 1942. The other nine bodies buried there are faculty members, school employees or their relatives.

McKenzie, a 1944 A&M graduate, drew muffled laughter when he told other board members that the cemetery could be used as ''a tool to bring people back to campus.''

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (OCT. 5) UPI - A second federal government effort to head off a conflict between Yugoslavia's two main ethnic groups opened Friday amid defiant demands by Serbian extremists supporting autonomy from the republic.

Yugoslav Deputy Prime Minister Alexander Mitrovic, accompanied by a delegation of senior federal police officials, held talks on the crisis with Croatian Interior Minister Josip Boljkovac in the republic's capital of Zagreb, 250 miles west of Belgrade, state-run radio reported.

Mitrovic, a close associate of moderate Yugoslav Prime Minister Ante Markovic, later travelled to the nearby Serbian-dominated town of Petrinja for discussions with municipal officials, the radio said.

There was no immediate word on the outcome of the talks held by Mitrovic, who was directed by Markovic to assess Serbian-Croatian tensions and help evolve steps to resolve the crisis. A similar effort was launched Thursday by Vasil Tupurkovski, the Macedonian member of Yugoslavia's eight-man collective federal presidency.

Petrinja was the first of five Serbian-dominated towns in which three days of clashes began Sept. 28 between Serbs and Croatian police, igniting long-simmering frictions between the republic and neighboring Serbia that have been fanned by politicians seeking to fill a power vacuum created by the demise of communist rule in Yugoslavia.

Many experts fear frictions between the 4.6 million Roman Catholic Croats, most of whom live in Croatia, and the 8.5 million majority Serbs, the bulk of whom reside in Serbia, could lead to civil war.

The radio quoted authorities in Petrinja as saying that still in custody were a police officer, a municipal official and an executive of a food-processing plant who were among dozens of people arrested in the disturbances, during which Serbs broke into police stations and stole hundreds of weapons.

The Croatian government of President Franjo Tudjman had said earlier in the week that it was freeing all Serbs taken into custody and granting an amnesty to those who surrendered stolen weapons. It withdrew from Serbian towns units of a feared paramilitary police force, whose presense had enflammed the situation

Meanwhile, a Serbian militant organization said it would refuse to dismantle road and rail barricades manned by armed vigilantes around the Serbian-dominated town of Knin, 310 miles southwest of Belgrade, unless Tudjman released all Serbian ''hostages'' under arrest.

The Serbian National Resistance Committee said in a statement it also wanted the government to return police reservist weapons, the transfer of which from armories in Serbian-dominated towns sparked the clashes with Croatian police.

Other demands included the creation of an autonomous police force for Knin, the hub of the largest Serbian enclave in Croatia, and the inclusion of Serbian Vice President Miroslav Djordjevic in Tupurkovski's peace-making effort.

The committee is allied with the Serbian National Council, which represents Croatia's Serbs and on Monday declared it was assuming political control of their enclaves because of alleged ''state terror.''

Croatia's Serbs claim discrimination under Tudjman's Croatian Democratic Union a fiercely nationalist party that ousted communists in April in the republic's first multi-party assembly elections since the end of World War II in 1945.

Tudjman charges that Serbs are being instigated by the communist regime in Serbia as part of a plot to topple his government and dominate Yugoslavia.

Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic has been fanning Serbian nationalist sentiments in a bid to retain power in Dec. 9 multi-party assembly polls, the first scheduled for the republic since 1945.

LONDON (OCT. 5) UPI - A British bookmaker offered $475,000 Friday for conclusive proof that the Loch Ness monster truly lurks in the deep waters of a Scottish Highlands lake.

Four teams are competing for the prize, including the Natural History Museum, according to William Hill betting house, which posted the $475,000 in prize money.

Oceanscan, an Aberdeen firm specializing in sonar equipment, Lay and Partners Ltd., and Screaming Lord Sutch, a politician on the fringes of society and power, also are aboard boats on the 23-mile-long Loch Ness to look for the beast nicknamed Nessie.

They have until Sunday to come up with proof-positive that they have seen one of the world's most mysterious monsters, who is said to make her home among the underwater caves of the lake, which has depths of up to 720 feet.

A clear photograph is the evidence William Hill is seeking.

''It is probably almost impossible to win,'' said Violet Nelson, who has seen many monster hunters pass through the Drumnadrochic Hotel, where she works.

Nonetheless, William Hill's offer has rekindled enthusiasm in the search, she said.

''It has been very, very busy,'' Nelson said. ''Mostly TV people, newspaper people and photograhers who are actually going along to record the event.''

Every year or so someone claims to have seen Nessie. Occasionally, a fuzzy photograph is offered as evidence.

The most recent report of a sighting came last summer. ''A woman came into hotel and said she saw it, but after we talked to her for a while she wasn't too sure. But then, who would be, mind you.''

A high-tech hunt for Nessie conducted in October 1987 yielded no answers.

In the intensive Anglo-American project, Operation Deepscan, 25 cruisers made sonar sweeps of the lake at a cost of $1.9 million.

Adrian Shine, who lead the investigation, said there were some ''strong sonar contacts'' in Loch Ness but none in the shape of the classic, dinosaur-like Nessie.

The creature has variously been described and depicted in photographs as humpbacked, serpent-like or flippered.

The legend of the monster goes back to the 6th century when St. Columba was preaching Christianity. A chronicler of the time wrote ''the monster, perceiving the surface of the water disturbed ... suddenly comes up and moving toward the man, rushed up with a great roar and open mouth.''

Nessie lures about 500,000 tourists a year to the Scottish Highlands, where they spend up to $80 million in the hope of catching a glimpse of her.

OTAY MESA, CA (OCT. 5) UPI - Nearly four tons of cocaine worth more than $262 million and found ''stacked to the gills'' inside a propane tanker truck returning from Mexico was the largest-ever cocaine seizure along the U.S.-Mexico border, officials said Friday.

U.S. Customs and Drug Enforcement Administration agents spent Thursday night unloading the drugs after waiting a day to bleed propane from the tanker truck which was held at the Otay Mesa border crossing 10 miles east of San Diego when it weighed in at about 7,400 pounds more than it should have, Customs spokeswoman Bobbie Cassidy said.

A total of about 7,700 pounds of cocaine, wrapped in roughly 2-pound plastic packets, were pulled out of the cylindrical tank.

''It was stacked to the gills,'' Cassidy said.

The truck, labeled Hidro Gas and owned by a company in Juarez, Mexico, was stopped Wednesday, but the driver was allowed to leave before agents and drug-sniffing dogs determined why the truck was overweight. Cassidy said Friday the driver had not been arrested, but Customs agents knew who he was. His name was not released.

Federal drug agents estimated his illegal cargo's wholesale value at $87.5 million and its street value at $262.5 million.

Cassidy said Customs agents determined the 3.85-ton shipment was the largest ever seized along the U.S.-Mexico border. The previous record was a 1988 bust in Hidalgo, Texas, when agents uncovered 2,735 pounds of cocaine, she said.

The previous biggest seizure along the California-Mexico border was just under 1 ton in 1988.

TORONTO (OCT. 5) UPI - General Motors of Canada Ltd. tabled Friday an offer that meets the pattern settlement reached in earlier talks with the Canadian Auto Workers union, and could pave the way for an early deal.

The union has set midnight Oct. 10 as its deadline for a new three- year deal with GM Canada.

CAW President Bob White said, ''GM Canada and the CAW are not going to have a major fight about whether or not we are going to reach the pattern settlement on the basic economics.''

GM Canada's top negotiator Rick Curd said the offer essentially parallels the Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd.-CAW settlement and there is no reason a settlement shouldn't be reached before the union's strike deadline.

''It's a substantial economic offer that provides excellent wages and benefits for our employees as well as a worker security program,'' Curd said.

The CAW reached the pattern settlement with Ford Canada in late September after a nine-day walkout. Ford Canada's nearly 13,000 workers accepted a deal that will give them raises of 3 percent in the first year and 2 percent in each of the second and third years, plus improved cost-of-living allowances.

Curd said the talks now would focus on implementing aspects of the pattern, specifically the worker security program, complicated by the fact that GM Canada has a work force almost triple the size of Ford Canada.

GM Canada employs 36,500 CAW workers at 12 assembly, fabrication, trim and engine plants and a parts warehouse in Ontario and Quebec.

White said although basic economics were set, a lot of discussion was needed on the worker security program and mountains of work required on local issues including seniority, transfer, and health and safety concerns.

White also said the contracting out of work at the company's Windsor, Ontario trim plant, which could result in 700 jobs being lost, remained a major issue.

''We have to find a solution to (outsourcing at the trim plant) or that problem alone could take these negotiations into the ditch,'' White said.

White said the gradual loss of work at the plant increases the number of people facing layoffs, drives up costs and could result in the plant eventually being closed. There are 2,500 workers at the trim plant.

The worker security program in the Ford Canada settlement requires the company to give one year's notice on any plant closing, and six months notice on any job lost due to technological change or contracting work out.

Ford Canada also agreed to set up an $85 million fund to deal with related job losses, with provisions for early retirement, salary supplements for up to 36 months and severance pay ranging from $21,250 to $55,250.

Also as part of the Ford Canada settlement, workers will receive an annual $425 vacation bonus and more time off the job, with three additional holidays a year.

The CAW also represents 11,300 workers at Chrysler Corp.'s Canadian subsidiary.

BEIJING (OCT. 5) UPI - China enjoyed another bountiful haul of gold medals Friday on the next to last day of the Asian Games.

The Chinese national anthem rang out repeatedly, carrying the message of 15 more successes for the host nation in the 25 events at stake. South Korea captured seven gold medals for the day.

At the 1986 Asian Games in Seoul, China won the final event, the men's 4 x 100-meters track relay, to edge South Korea 94-93 in the gold- medal standings. Don't expect such excitement this time.

Entering Saturday's final day, with 11 gold medals still to be won, China had a massive stockpile of 175, dwarfing nearest rivals South Korea (52) and Japan (38).

China swept 10 of the 13 canoeing and kayak golds Friday, and went on to add the men's singles tennis title, the men's and women's team volleyball and a surprising two diving team golds.

Not that China's diving supremacy has been in question. The surprise sprang from the fact the team event wasn't even on the official schedule. But after the competitors completed preliminaries in the individual 3-meter springboard event, China was declared winner of the men's and women's team titles.

''Team events are listed for the first time in the history of the Asian Games '' the state-run Xinhua news agency reported.

China, which had won the four individual diving golds to date, scored runaway successes in both team competitions, decided on each nation's top-scoring six dives.

South Korea continued its gold-medal monopoly in archery, with the men's team twice improving the world mark of 999 points set by the Soviets last year. The South Korean women managed to equal their own world best of 1,010 points in the semis, but slipped back in the final round to score 1,003, still 24 points ahead of silver medalist Taiwan.

Elsewhere, Dhanraj Pillay scored with five minutes left to give unbeaten Pakistan a 3-2 victory over arch-rival India for its seventh Asian Games men's field hockey title.

Japan used Akiko Kijimuta's 6-3, 6-3 victory over China's Chen Li to win the women's singles tennis final.

''I was nervous at the beginning because I haven't played a southpaw for a long time,'' Kijimuta said.

Kijimuta turned pro in 1984 and reached the third round of the 1988 Australian Open, where she won a set off Martina Navratilova.

In the all-Chinese men's singles final, Pan Bing saved double match in the second set and defeated national champion Zhang Jiuhua 1-6, 7-6 (7-4), 6-1.

WELLINGTON (OCT. 5) UPI - A moderate earthquake shook the southern region of New Zealand's North Island Friday, but there were no reports of major damage or injury, officials said.

The quake, measuring 5.3 on the Richter scale, struck at 11:48 a.m. and lasted about 30 seconds, the Department of Scientific and Industrial Research in Wellington said.

The epicenter was near Cape Palliser, 30 miles southeast of Wellington, and was located about 8 miles below the earth's surface, the department said.

The quake was felt as far north as New Plymouth, 180 miles northwest of Wellington, officials said.

Several shops reported goods falling from shelves in downtown Wellington, but police said there were no reports of major damage or injuries.

The U.S. National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colorado, said it measured the quake at 5.2 on the Richter scale and also said no damage or injuries were reported.

A spokesman at the U.S. center, geophysist John Minsch, called the quake ''moderate,'' although he said it was ''felt strongly'' in Wellington and nearby Lower Hutt.

SEOUL, SOUTH KOREA (OCT. 5) UPI - Political parties voiced protests Friday against alleged surveillance by military security agents over more than 1,300 civilians including ranking politicians, civic leaders and dissidents.

The protests came after an Army deserter alleged that the Defense Security Command, in charge of both criminal investigations and intelligence for the armed forces, was monitoring activities of noted civilians.

Pvt. Yoon Suk-yang, 24, came to the National Council of Churches Building in downtown Seoul late Thursday and made the allegations in a ''declaration of conscience,'' those who were on hand said.

Yoon, who said he had been assigned to a branch office of the Defense Security Command, brought with him materials backing up his allegations.

Targets of the alleged surveillance numbering more than 1,300 included Kim Dae Jung, Kim Young-sam and other ranking politicians, lawyers, church leaders, collegee professors, writers, reporters, labor activists and dissidents, Yoon said.

The main opposition Party for Peace and Democracy led by Kim Dae Jung said in a statement the government must thoroughly investigate the alleged military surveillance over civilians and punish all who are responsible.

''We cannot but be shocked by the detailed facts that the military is still conducting well organized, massive political surveillance over civilians,'' the party said.

A spokesman for the ruling Democratic Liberal Party said ''our party is opposed to political surveillance by the military over civilians. If this is in fact part of such surveillance should be determined first.''

The Defense Ministry said the controversial files were prepared by the Defense Security Command not for political-minded policing of civilians.

''These are personal data the command prepared to protect or isolate the targets from the enemy or impure forces in case of war and other emergencies '' a ministry spokesman said.

''Most of the listed information items are from directories, magazines, newspapers and other published sources.''

The spokesman said the office of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Military Prosecution and the Special Inspection Group under the ministry will conduct a joint investigation of the case.

Other military officials said the soldier stole the documented data from an office of the Security Command before desertion.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 5) UPI - Workers whose performance is tracked by computers and other electronic devices suffer more health problems than those simply watched over by human managers, a study showed Friday.

University of Wisconsin-Madison researchers said their nationwide survey of 762 workers in the telephone industry found electronically monitored workers reported substantially more headaches and wrist, arm, shoulder and neck pains than non-monitored workers.

In addition, electronically monitored employees were more likely to be troubled by depression, tension, extreme anxiety and severe fatigue than workers whose performance was judged mainly by traditional, human means.

Electronic monitoring is used extensively in a wide array of jobs, including air traffic controllers, grocery store cashiers, package deliverers and bank tellers.

Such monitoring usually involves using a computer system, often in conjunction with a video display terminal or VDT, to see if a person performs a task during an assigned time period. For example, a telephone operator may be expected to handle a directory assistance call in 19 seconds. If the employee takes longer than the ideal time to complete the task, the computer makes a note that a supervisor can see when he or she reviews a daily or weekly computer printout of the employee's work record.

Another form of monitoring used in the telephone industry involves managers using electronic equipment to listen in on operators' conversations with customers to make sure they are helpful and courteous.

In their study, Michael Smith and his colleagues found 51 percent of electronically monitored telephone workers, most of whom used VDTs, reported stiff or sore wrists in the past year, compared with 24 percent of non-monitored workers, who also used VDTs. About 64 percent of electronically monitored workers suffered neck pain, compared with 41 percent of non-monitored.

''This outcome clearly demonstrates there are major differences in health distress,'' linked to the methods used to gauge work performance, said Smith, who announced his findings at a news conference sponsored by the Communication Workers of America, which helped fund the study.

Psychological complaints were also greater among electronically monitored workers than among the non-monitored. For example, 81 percent of employees tracked by high-tech equipment said they were depressed, compared to 69 percent of those overseen mainly by human supervisors.

Smith, chairman of the University of Wisconsin's Industrial Engineering Department, acknowledged that complaints stemming from tight monitoring of workers' production are nothing new. But he said the addition of computers and other high-tech monitoring tools appears to have aggravated the problem.

Unlike a human supervisor, a computer can ''watch your every breath, you even have to log out to go to the potty,'' Smith said.

Smith, who will present his study next week to the Human Factors Society's annual meeting in Orlando, Fla., said he believes the work is the first major study to examine the relationship between electronic monitoring and worker well-being.

Morton Bahr, president of the Communications Workers of America, said the findings should send a ''clear message'' to employers: ''Stop using secret monitoring like an electronic whip to oversupervise and infantilize adult workers.''

WARSAW, POLAND (OCT. 5) UPI - Polish citizens will face a tough choice between two national heroes who are now political foes in their first general presidential election scheduled for Nov. 25.

Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki announced Thursday night he would enter the presidential race against his long-time colleague, Lech Walesa, in order to carry out the economic and political reforms of his year-old government.

The premier came to the decision reluctantly. It means a direct confrontation with the man he stood with side-by-side for a decade as the Solidarity labor movement fought against - and ultimately defeated - monopoly communist rule in Poland.

''Mazowiecki's candidacy means that we are not going to have a plebiscite: Who is for Walesa and who is against him,'' Ernest Skalski, deputy editor of the independent daily Gazeta Wyborcza, said in an editorial.

''We are waiting not only for the election, but for the choice of the way to solve Polish problems.''

A plebiscite seemed to be exactly what Walesa had in mind.

''I wanted to avoid this struggle for the sake of cooperation,'' Walesa said in reaction to his former aide's decision.

''I wanted the presidential campaign to unite, not to divide Poles. I wanted us to complement each other, to go together. This candidacy complicates the problem.''

In their first real test of democratic elections - the ones that originally put Solidarity in office were only partially free - the choice for Poles will be agonizing.

If they vote their hearts and go for Walesa, they embrace a familiar face, one they can rally around.

But he also represents an unknown factor, and even a possible retreat from democracy. More than once, he has suggested that if he can't make Parliament do what it should, he would rule by decree.

In the less likely event that Poles elect Mazowiecki, the question becomes what happens to Walesa.

More than any other individual, he is responsible for the democratic changes Poland is undergoing. His disappearance from the political scene would be unimaginable to many.

''Mazowiecki is an assurance that what we have achieved so far will not be wasted,'' said Skalski, whose newspaper was recently deprived of its Solidarity logo by the union's national leadership at Walesa's behest.

''Walesa means an unknown, because he is avoiding being concrete and is producing a lot of promises.''

Skalski said the last thing anybody wants to see is the return of long lines, empty shelves and black-market trade, hallmarks of the communist system Poland wants to leave behind.

''These first achievements cost us a lot and it still will cost us to take a risk connected with political change,'' he argued. ''We have a lot to lose.''

A government opinion poll published Friday showed support for the Mazowiecki government slipping.

More than half of those surveyed approved of the government, but another third disapproved. That compares with a 70 percent approval rating in September 1989 after the governments first month in office.

Last year, every second person believed Mazowiecki had the support of a majority of society, while now only just over one-third think so.

Respondents listed the administration's worst failures as the appearance of unemployment in Poland, agricultural policy and the crisis in the countryside, and the failure to call the previous ruling Communist Party members to account for their actions.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (OCT. 5) UPI - The space shuttle Atlantis does not appear to have suffered any major damage from a falling 70-pound beam that banged through the ship's cramped engine room Wednesday, NASA managers said Friday.

Officials insisted the space agency is not suffering from any generic quality control problems and said the damage identified so far can be fixed in routine launch processing They said Atlantis still would be on track for liftoff around Nov. 7 on a secret military mission.

''Thus far we have not found anything that I would consider significant damage '' launch director Robert Sieck said at a pre-launch news conference before the shuttle Discovery's planned Saturday flight.

''Everything would appear to be repairable in place. It's still our goal to roll Atlantis to the pad next week.''

Engineers were in the process of hoisting Atlantis into the vertical launch position inside the Vehicle Assembly Building Wednesday when they heard at least three ''thuds'' coming from inside the shuttle's engine room.

When they opened the compartment to check, they were dismayed to find a 9-foot-long, 70-pound beam used to support work platforms that had been mistakenly left inside the engine room.

The bar fell more than five feet and may have come in contact with engine compartment hardware, cables or other structures in 25 places.

Sieck said a main propulsion system vent line would have to be replaced, along with several damaged electrical cables, and that insulating foam would have to be repaired where it was dented and dinged by the falling beam.

While it was too early to say what impact, if any, the accident might have on Atlantis's Nov. 7 target launch date, Sieck said he thought launch processing would only lose a day or so because of the investigation and repairs.

The accident was the latest in a series of mishaps in recent months at the Kennedy Space Center that have raised questions about quality control and NASA's ability to keep the shuttle program on schedule, above and beyond the hydrogen fuel leaks that have disrupted the launch schedule.

But William Lenoir, NASA's associate administrator for space flight, said Friday he does not believe the space agency has a generic quality control problem.

''I don't see a common thread,'' he said. ''We will obviously have an investigation of this incident,'' he said. ''We will ask that group to find out specifically what happened, how did it happen and how do we prevent it from happening again.''

But he said the number of accidents this year ''exceeds what I would be comfortable with'' and he said NASA management would look into ways quality control can be improved.

''We do need to look at our quality,'' he said. ''You cannot inspect quality into a system, you build it in. That does not mean I think we have a quality problem or that I believe we should stand down.''

The beam was part of an ''aft access kit'' containing more than 50 pieces that is assembled inside the engine compartment to allow engineers to gain access to various engine systems.

The bar that fell was used to support a work platform and despite paperwork indicating it had been removed prior to Atlantis's trip to the Vehicle Assembly Building, it was not.

A quick review of photographs and paperwork convinced NASA managers a similar problem did not exist with Discovery.

Two veteran Lockheed Space Operations Co. employees were directly responsible for making sure all the support equipment was out of Atlantis's engine compartment and it was not immediatelly clear how they missed the bright yellow beam that fell.

(OCT. 5) UPI - First lady Barbara Bush will fill in for President Bush tonight at a fund-raiser in Kennebunkport, Maine, for Republican Governor John McKernan. The president postponed a two-day New England campaign swing on behalf of McKernan and other G-O-P candidates so he could stay in Washington to promote the deficit-cutting budget deal that the House defeated.

NASA continues working toward the launch of the shuttle Discovery tomorrow morning and anti-nuclear activists are still trying to stop everything. They have a court hearing today on worries over the plutonium aboard the European-built probe that Discovery is to launch toward the sun.

In Moscow, conservative Communist Party stalwart Yegor Ligachev says the Soviet Union faces what he called ''the danger of a social explosion'' as it moves to some sort of market economy. Ligachev told the Soviet news agency Tass that tension in the country is near the breaking point.

The 1990 Nobel Peace Prize winner will be named on October 15th in Oslo, Norway, and veteran observers say leading candidates include Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and Czechoslovakian leader Vaclav Havel. The sources say South Africa's Nelson Mandela also is a strong possibility.

LONDON (OCT. 5) UPI - Stock prices surged on the London International Stock Exchange in brisk trading Friday as Britain announced entry to the Exchange Rate Mechanism of the European Monetary System.

Trading was extended beyond closing time and member firms were advised quotations would be taken one hour beyond the normal closing, officials said.

The blue chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which fell 16.6 points Thursday surged 73.5 points to 2,143.9 and climbed 153.7 points for the week.

The narrower top 30 industrial average climbed 43.0 points to 1,644.3 and 108.6 points for the week.

Volume amounted to around 650 million shares, compared with 421 million shares changing hands Thursday.

News of Britain's move to enter the ERM, just minutes before closing, prompted a swing of 90 points on the closely-watched Financial Times Stock 100 share index.

Stocks had plummeted earlier after a plan to cut $500 billion from the U.S. budget over the next five years was rejected by the U.S. House of Representatives.

The Labor Department's report showing U.S. employment increased to 5.7 percent in September, its highest level in two years for the world's most powerful economy, added to the early gloom, analysts said.

But ERM entry is considered a boom to British business.

The Bank of England also announced its prime rate would drop to 14 percent from 15 percent. The lower rates are a necessary component of entry to the ERM which is seen as the first step towards European monetary union.

Among some of the more actively traded issues, Glaxo slipped 20 cents to $13.96, Guiness lost 25 cents to 12.44, Reuters plummeted 45 cents to $12.72 and British Airways lost 18 cents to $2.48.

Elsewhere in Europe, stocks closed broadly lower in thin trading on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange.

The closely watched German Stock Index, which lost 22.54 points Thursday, fell 30.59 points to 1,391.76.

Traders said stocks fell on the news of the U.S. House rejecting the budget proposal.

MOSCOW (OCT. 5) UPI - Latvia imposed limits Friday on meat, lumber and other goods to be exported to the rest of the Soviet Union and prohibited individuals from taking dozens of items out of the Baltic republic.

''Latvia has introduced quotas for exports to other Soviet republics, '' said the official Soviet news agency Tass.

The quota system was Latvia's most recent step to free itself from Soviet control and implement the declaration of independence its nationalist-controlled Parliament passed in May.

On Wednesday, the republic's Parliament eliminated the Soviet national holidays Revolution Day and Constitution Day and declared that Easter, Christmas and Latvian Independence Day will be celebrated instead.

Under the new quotas, Latvian enterprises and cooperatives, or semi- private businesses, must observe unspecified limits on a range of products and can ship them to the rest of the country only under license with the republic's government.

Latvia also opened 10 customs checkpoints on its borders with the Russian and Belorussian republics, the independent Interfax news service said. The posts will control the movement of foodstuffs and other goods out of Latvia, it said.

Wood, furniture, meat, cement, bricks, and mink or fox furs are among the targeted goods, Tass said.

Latvia also forbade its citizens from taking 49 kinds of products from the republic, including refrigerators, television sets, video recorders, building materials, pianos, motorcycles, sewing or washing machines, furniture, carpeting, all imported items and goods for children.

Latvia's independence proclamation May 11 was the last such proclamation passed this year in the three Baltic republics.

The independent Interfax news service said Friday that the three republics' prime ministers began talks in Jurmala, a Baltic Sea resort town in Latvia. It did not provide details of the meeting.

The Baltic republics have asked the Soviet government to hold joint negotiations with them on independence, but Moscow has rejected the demand and pursued separate contacts.

Soviet Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov and Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis led delegations Tuesday in ground-breaking talks to pave the way for formal negotiations between Moscow and Vilnius.

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (OCT. 5) UPI - Malaysia's Parliament was dissolved Friday to make way for the country's eighth general election Oct. 21, officials said.

Polling in the east Malaysian states of Sabah and Sarawak will take place Oct. 20 and 21 because a majority of the population lives in hard to reach areas, Election Commission chairman Abdul Kadir Talib said.

Nomination day will on Oct. 11, he added. At stakes are 180 parliamentary seats and 351 state seats.

Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad announced Thursday that King Azlan Shah had given his consent to the dissolution of Parliament. The announcement ended months of speculation on when the general election would be held.

Mahathir is seeking a two-thirds majority for a third term in office.

The Prime Minister met heads of his ruling National Front coalition of 11 parties and had advised State Chief Ministers to take necessary steps to have their respective State Assemblies dissolved the same day.

The main coalition partners who have enjoyed a high profile in his previous cabinets are the Malaysian Chinese Association and the Malaysian Indian Congress, who represent Malaysia's ethnic Chinese and Indian populations.

Malaysia's constitution stipulates that the general election must be held within 60 days of dissolution.

In the 1986 general election, the National Front won 148 of the 177 parliamentary seat and 299 state seats.

(OCT. 5) UPI - Stocks eased on several major global stock exchanges Friday, as the U.S. House of Representatives' rejecetion of the budget plan sent early shock waves through equity markets worldwide. Trading was described as light but nervous.

The House of Representatives voted 254-179 against the proposed five- year $500 billion budget pact hammered out by President Bush and congressional leaders after months of talks.

The rejection, while not wholly unexpected, sent stock prices falling and left Washington with an 11th-hour attempt to mount a counter-attack budget plan, or the automatic $105 billion across-the-board spending cuts would go into effect at midnight.

Bush began an immediate round of consultations with congressional leaders on the next move to keep the federal government in business after the House's stunning rejection.

Analysts said investors - already in shock from surging oil prices resulting from the Middle East crisis, worries over the likihood of higher interest rates and recession worries - sold stocks from Asia to New York in light trading.

Trude Latimer, market analyst with Jesup Josephthal & Co. Inc. in New York explained ''markets tanked out early ... with elections coming up, nobody wanted the so-called compromise with a sensitive package of taxes on gas, beer wine and tobacco and cuts in programs such as those in medicare.''

The rejection sent stocks plunging at the opening in New York, with a 60-point loss after about 15 minutes of trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

But the Dow then rebounded, in what analysts termed a reflex move after the sharp drop.

''I think it just got overdone,'' said Larry Greenwald, block trader at Sanford C. Bernstein & Co. in New York, ''people are looking to bottom fish (find bargains), that's exactly what's happening.

''They took it (the Dow) took down 60 points in two seconds, so naturally you're going to get some kind of rally after that. The question is can we hold and that's yet to be seen,'' Greenwald said.

In New York, the Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 27.47 points Thursday, was up 12.87 points to 2529.70 at 1:45 p.m. EDT. However, declines led advances by a slight margin.

In Europe, stocks eased in Paris, Frankfurt and Madrid but surged on the London International Stock Exchange as Britain announced its entry to the Exchange Rate Mechanism of the European Monetary System.

The trading day was extended for one hour, because of the heavy trading.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which fell 16.6 points Thursday surged 73.5 points to 2,143.9.

Analysts said news of Britain's move to enter the ERM, just minutes before closing, prompted a swing of 90 points on the closely watched Financial Times Stock 100 share index.

Stocks had plummeted earlier after the plan to cut the U.S. budget over the next five years was rejected by the U.S. House, analysts said.

But ERM entry was considered a boom to British business, analysts noted.

Elsewhere in Europe, stocks closed broadly lower on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange. The German Stock Index, which lost 22.54 points Thursday, fell another 30.59 points to 1,391.76.

Traders in Frankfurt said stocks eased on the news of the House rejecting the budget proposal.

In Asia, stocks on the Tokyo Stock Exchange rallied despite the failure of the House to pass the budget plan.

The Nikkei Average, which dropped 571.20 points Thursday, rebounded 549.46 points to 22,827.65.

''The rejection of the deficit-cutting plan led to some selloffs, but did not cause a dramatic plunge,'' said Makano Mitsuhiro, a strategist at Daiwa Securities in Japan.

Japanese analysts interpreted the news as a sign that U.S. interest rates may not drop as had been expected.

The news reached the market 40 minutes before the close, cooling a rally that had started in the morning and continued into the afternoon session.

In Hong Kong, investors returned to the marketplace after taking a break from the action and sent prices sharply lower on news of the defeat of Bush's budget proposal.

Markets in Hong Kong were closed Thursday for the Chinese Mid-Autumn Festival holiday.

The Hong Kong Stock Exchange's Hang Seng Index, which fell 42.93 points Wednesday, slipped 12.10 points to 2,850.45.

The market actually opened higher, ''but after news came about the defeat of the budget proposal, stocks dropped,'' said Herman Lam of First Pacific Securities in Hong Kong.

Stocks also fell in Singapore and Sydney.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 5) UPI - Douglas Tweedale, 32, an editor on the foreign desk at United Press International in Washington and a former foreign corespondent in Central America and Argentina, was killed Thursday night in a fall at his home.

Friends and family members said Tweedale was washing windows at his sixth floor apartment in Washington's Adams Morgan section when a safety rope he had tied around himself snapped and he plunged to the pavement below. He died instantly.

Tweedale had returned to Washington from Managua, Nicaragua, last April and was the editor in charge of preparing UPI's foreign news report for morning newspapers.

Danilo Lacayo, Nicaraguan presidential press secretary, wired condolences to the Tweedale family, saying both he and President Violeta Chamorro ''deeply regret the tragic death of journalist Douglas Tweedale.''

He was born in New York City on April 25, 1958, but grew up in South America and Europe. He attended Tabor Academy in Marion, Mass., and graduated cum laude from Harvard University in 1981 with a degree in history.

In addition to his wife, he is surved by his father, Thomas L. Tweedale, and stepmother, Judith Pennebaker Tweedale, of Wilmington, Del., a brother, Anthony C. Tweedale of Missoula, Mont., a sister, Katherine E. Tweedale of Birmingham, Mich., and a stepbrother, Lt. Clay Ludlum, serving with the U.S. Army at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Texas.

A service will be held at an Arlington funeral home Saturday. A family spokesman asked that in lieu of flowers, donations be sent to the American Cancer Society.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 5) UPI - Solar and geothermal industry officials criticized federal budget negotiators Friday for allowing renewable energy tax credits to expire while providing $4 billion in new incentives for oil drilling.

Industry lobbyists, joined by environmentalists, said the negotiators' failure to revive the renewable energy tax credits was illogical at a time when the nation is trying to reduce its reliance on foreign oil.

They said the end of the tax credits - which expired Sept. 30 - was at odds with repeated statements by federal policy-makers that the country should aggressively develop solar, geothermal and wind power.

And, with the Bush administration and congressional leaders reviewing their budget-cutting package following its rejection by the House Thursday, they said the time was right to resurrect the 10 percent investment tax credit, which has been in effect for the past five years.

Scott Sklar, executive director of the Solar Energy Industries Association, said both Democratic and Republican lawmakers had proposed energy policy legislation that backed renewal of the tax credits.

But he said that - unlike the oil industry - renewable energy companies did not have the ear of the administration or the muscle to influence lawmakers in the budget talks.

''We don't have enough squeaky-wheel value to get their attention,'' Sklar said. ''We did not, obviously, have the kind of clout that we had to have.''

Sklar said the death of the tax credits would deal a devastating blow to struggling renewable energy companies that are trying to attract investors for new power systems.

Without the credits, he said: ''We will have a flight of capital from the industry. Commercialization efforts will stall.''

Sklar said the tax credits often provided the slim margin of profitability at existing geothermal and solar plants and represented the only meaningful federal assistance to the renewable energy industry, at a cost of only $50 million a year in lost tax revenues to the government.

Sklar said if the tax credits were restored, the U.S. solar power industry alone could provide 10 percent of the nation's energy needs by 2000, up from the current level of slightly less than 1 percent.

Officials with the California Energy Co., a major geothermal firm, said the tax credit was instrumental in raising initial money for their COSO generating project. They said geothermal's potential clearly had been demonstrated in California, where it provides 7 percent of the state's electricity.

Environmentalists said the loss of the renewable energy tax credits was especially damaging in conjunction with the $4 billion in tax incentives designated for the oil industry under the defeated budget package. Those incentives aimed to spur exploration and drilling.

They said those incentives would lure investors away from renewable energy projects to oil drilling projects that ultimately could not improve U.S. energy security.

''Drilling for oil does nothing to insulate the economy from price shocks imposed by the world's oil markets'' said Daniel Lashof, senior scientist with the Natural Resources Defense Council.

NEW YORK (OCT. 5) UPI - New York Mets outfielder Mark Carreon is undergoing treatment for substance abuse at the Smithers Center for Alcohol and Drug Treatment, the club said Friday.

Carreon, who spent the final six weeks of the season on the disabled list, was admitted to the center in late September and is approximately halfway through the standard 28-day treatment program.

Mets officials refused to comment on Carreon's problem, stating it is a personal matter. He is the fourth member of the team to receive treatment at Smithers in the last four years.

Dwight Gooden underwent drug rehabilitation at Smithers in 1987, Mackey Sasser was treated for alcoholism in 1988 and Darryl Strawberry underwent similar therapy in February.

Carreon's season ended Aug. 20 in San Diego, when he tore knee ligaments while rounding third base against the Padres. He was placed on the disabled list after surgery and went home to Tucson, Ariz. He finished the season with a .250 average, 10 home runs and 26 RBI.

SOFIA, BULGARIA (OCT. 5) UPI - The government declared war Friday on black market traders and smugglers who are flourishing under the conditions of Bulgaria's worst-ever economic crisis.

The National Assembly passed a law setting tougher penalties, including steep fines, for anyone convicted of dealing on the black market or smuggling contraband into the country. State and local authorites have vowed to strictly enforce the measure.

The Ministry of Trade and Services estimates as little as 10 percent of certain state-produced goods and processed foods are sold in legitimate stores. The rest is traded on the black market at prices up to four times higher than the normal rate.

Heavy black-market trading has contributed to severe shortages in stores, resulting in long lines and rationing of some basic goods.

Sofia newspapers have carried numerous stories in recent weeks about police raids on warehouses crammed with clothing, food and expensive imported goods ready for resale by private dealers. Government officials have attributed much of the illegal activity to foreigners.

''A genuine competition is going on between Bulgarian gypsies, Poles, Romanians, Czechoslovaks and Russians,'' said Col. Borislav Savov, director of the Pazardjik regional militia office. ''The Russians are selling everything but tanks.''

Roumen Nickolov, a Sofia militia official, said many of the foreign- made goods are purchased in Turkey and smuggled across the border. Black market traders mark up the prices by 100 to 400 percent, and then convert their earnings to hard currency.

A favorite trading spot is a 65-mile stretch of the E-80 international highway leading from Bulgaria to Turkey. Motorists with hard currency can buy anything from gasoline to medicines to imported cheese along the strip, now dubbed ''Bulgaria's longest Corecom,'' the name for the state-run hard currency store.

NEW YORK (OCT. 5) UPI- Sharply higher fuel prices and weaker passenger traffic will accelerate the shakedown in the airline industry and may combine to deliver a knock-out blow to one of more major carriers - possibly by winter's end, analysts said Friday.

Eastern Airlines, struggling to emerge from bankruptcy, cash-strapped Pan Am Corp. and troubled Trans World Airlines Inc. are the carriers most likely to go out of business or be swallowed up by a stronger competitor, industry watchers said.

Other vulnerable carriers include Continental Airlines Corp. and Midway Airlines Inc., based in Chicago.

''It's reasonable to guess that one of the majors may go out, particularly in this weak environment,'' said analyst Bob Bernstein of St. Louis-based Edward D. Jones. ''With fuel prices and interest rates going up, that certainly makes it more difficult for them to turn the situation around.''

Higher ticket prices and a bad economy have hurt passenger traffic on most airlines.

''If you take the four most leveraged carriers, they've lost $900 million this year,'' noted Goldman Sachs & Co. analyst Glenn Engell, referring to Eastern, Pan Am, TWA and Continental. ''I don't see how these guys can sustain these losses for much longer. What sustained them this long was asset sales, and that market is drying up.''

Most analysts agreed that Eastern's chances of survival, given the current environment, are extremely slim. ''It's just a matter of time before Eastern folds up,'' said Robert Decker, an analyst with Duff & Phelps in Chicago. The timing of Eastern's demise, he said, will depend on how much money U.S. Bankruptcy Court will allow the carrier to draw out of a special account for secured creditors.

''Eastern is a joke,'' added Morgan Stanley analyst Dominik Volpe. ''It's going to take more than slick commercials to bring them back.''

Next on the list of likely losers is Pan Am, which has been swimming in a sea or red ink for years. ''I expect we might see Pan Am filing Chapter 11 within several months - that's totally feasible,'' said Decker. ''Winter is a slow season for the industry and that's exacerbated by a weak economy and higher fuel prices.''

Decker said Pan Am could stave off its demise through the sale of its East Coast shuttle and some of its desirable international routes. But such actions if successful, might only delay the inevitable, he said.

Analysts gave TWA somewhat better odds of survival primarily because of its stronger cash position and its domestic hub operations - valuable assets that could be sold off in a pinch.

The sale of routes and other airlines assets, however, will likely receive close scrutiny by the Federal Aviation Administration and Congress, which could further hamper the carriers' efforts to raise cash, analysts noted.

WARSAW, Poland (OCT. 5) UPI - Powerful explosions went off in two offices of the Kodak company Friday, causing extensive damage, police said.

''The explosives have not been identified and an investigation is under way,'' a statement by police headquarters said. ''The damages are considerable.''

One explosion occurred about 2 a.m. in a store housing a $100,000 machine that automatically develops and prints film. The second blast occurred at the chief office 2 miles away.
